Roosevelt, Businessmen Confer on Idle Dollars

Eight of Commerce Advisory Council Consulted on How To Create Jobs

By Felix Cotten.

Ways in which idle dollars can be used to create jobs for idle men were among subjects discussed at a conference last night between President Roosevelt and eight business leaders, all of whom are members of the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council.

The conference, which was arranged while the President was at Hyde Park over the week-end, followed a dinner at the White House at which Secretary of Commerce Hopkins was host.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, met the business leaders afterward and talked with them for some time. He did not attend the dinner because of a sinus infection. The dinner began at 7:30 p. m. and the advisory council members left shortly after 10.

Various Topics

So far as could be ascertained, a wide variety of matters was discussed. The dinner was in some measure an incidental part of the final meeting of the council here until fall.

Significance was attached to it, however, because of the current Administration interest in putting private dollars to work, and in this way reducing the unemployment total, which continues to be high.

Arrangements for the dinner meeting were made, it was said, by Hopkins. So far as the latter was concerned, the conference was in some sense a new attempt to promote understanding and a more friendly co-operative spirit between the Administration and business. There was no indication, however, that the President is planning any new moves of a conciliatory or appeasement nature.

Labor Act Blasted

Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mill Co., left the White House before the meeting with the President broke up to deliver a radio blast against the Wagner labor act. Speaking from Station WJSV over a Nation-wide hook-up, he blamed the act for "prolonging the depression" and said it was "biased and one-sided."

Other leading developments were:

The Commerce Department, cooperating with the Justice Department in anti-trust law enforcement, is following a policy of advising business on what is necessary to comply with the law, it was learned. In doing this, it is performing a service which a large section of business has long advocated.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau consulted with department experts on the Mead bill providing for insurance by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of loans to small business. He revealed that the Treasury probe

English Tailor's Daughter Is Wed To Malay Prince

Oxford, England, June 1 (AP).—The pretty daughter of an English tailor became a Malayan princess today when she married Prince Mahmud, of Trengganu, here.

The bride, 21-year-old Joyce Biencowe, a chiropodist, and the bridegroom, brother of the sultan of the unfederated Malayan state, received many wedding gifts.

Nova Beats Baer By Technical K.O.

Lou Nova earned a crack at the heavyweight title in September by scoring a technical knockout over Max Baer before less than 20,000 fans last night in Yankee Stadium. The Alameda, Calif., youngster will meet the Louis-Galento winner.

NOVA

Referee Frankie Fullam declared Nova the winner of the eleventh round. He halted the fight because of a bad cut inside Baer's mouth, the blood from which seemed to be choking the former champion.

Nova lost two rounds for low punches and was dazed in another from Baer's blows, but he rallied gamely, forced the fighting, hit Baer almost at will and cut his face badly.

Townsend Plan Loses as 34 Desert It

Indorsers Help Pile Up House Vote of 302 Against Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

The House yesterday emphatically rejected Dr. Francis E. Townsend's famed pension plan, then awaited a Ways and Means Committee report liberalizing all classes of benefits under the social security act.

The 302 to 97 ballot by which the bill went down to defeat reflected more overwhelming disapproval than leaders predicted, put a jittery membership definitely on record, and effectively removed the plan as an issue this session.

From a gallery seat, Dr. Townsend heard the monotonous drone of the "Noes," and retired with the avowed intention of carrying his fight into the next political campaign. It was the second time in five years the House had turned down his plan.

Amendments Liberalized

The Ways and Means Committee meantime rushed work on social security act amendments that must run another gantlet of old-age pension sentiment in the House next week. In anticipation of an effort by members to "get right" with the old folks, the amendments were being even more liberalized.

The committee voted to increase Federal grants to States for aid to dependent children from one-third to one-half the total cost, at an added expense of $29,000,000. A vote on a motion by Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, to increase the Federal contribution toward old-age security payments from $15 to $20 (to provide a maxi-

Dies Inquiry Strikes Out Moseley Text

General Is Permitted To Read Statement Then It's Dropped

Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, consultant of anti?Semitic leaders throughout the country, completed his testimony before the Dies Committee yesterday by reading a statement attacking "organized Jewry," only to have it immediately stricken from the record.

After granting Moseley permission he had sought for two days to read his prepared statement, the committee allowed the general to complete it, and then decided that the statement in its entirety was irrelevant to the investigation into subversive activities.

Moseley, who previously had expressed limited approval of Hitler, declared that American Jews "who affiliate themselves with organized world Jewry and thereby accept the status of being its nationals as proclaimed by (former Supreme Court Justice) Brandeis" should be deprived of their rights as American citizens.

Worried About Water

The witness, who was former commander of the Fourth Corps Area, astonished the committee yesterday by indicating suspicion of the drinking water provided in the hearing room.

When Moseley, wearing a Distinguished Service Medal insignia in his lapel, asked Rhea Whitley, committee counsel, if he would "guarantee" the water supply, one of the general's retinue warned him, "Don't touch it."

The aide, Charles B. Hudson, of Omaha, Nebr., thereupon emptied

Search for House Dictograph Reveals Only Old Phone Wire

By James D. Secrest.

An investigation by Capitol Police under the direction of Kenneth Romney, House sergeant at arms, of reports of the use of dictographs in the House Office Building yesterday produced a sample of old telephone wire and the testimony of a newspaper reporter who repeated what he had heard.

Romney presented his evidence to Speaker Bankhead after a series of conferences involving Chairman Bates of the House sub-committee conducting the milk inquiry; Majority Leader Rayburn, and other House leaders.

After examination of the sub-committee's headquarters on the fifth floor of the House Office Building, the only clew uncovered by the Capitol Police was a piece of insulated telephone wire.

A building-attendant said the wire was at least ten years old, and a telephone repair man expressed the opinion that it would have been impossible to install a dictograph device in the office without leaving indelible wall borings.

The Capitol Police, it was learned, pulled up a carpet in the House District Committee room but found no dictograph wires.

Cuba Orders Refugee Ship To Leave

Collective Suicides Feared; Gunboat to Tow Vessel to Sea Unless It Sails Today

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Cuba, June 1.—A tragic shipload of 917 German Jewish refugees tonight faced return to the land from which they fled. President Laredo Bru coupled an order for their ship to leave with a threat to use gunboats if necessary to tow it from Cuban waters.

The presidential decree came during a day of uncertainty in which the captain of the German liner St. Louis, expressing fear of a "collective suicide pact" among his refugee passengers, sought in vain to have the government rescind its order against landing them.

Although the president directed the St. Louis to leave "within the day," and marines were held ready to carry out his order, it was understood the liner was granted a delay until it could refuel and take on provisions for the return voyage to Germany.

6 p. m. Deadline

The Cuban treasury department, instructed to carry out Laredo Bru's order, was said to have granted Luis Clasing, agent for the Hamburg-Amerika Line, until 6 p. m. tomorrow to get the ship out of port.

It was held probable, however, that Captain Gustav Shroeder of the St. Louis would try to complete the task of taking on stores and get under way early tomorrow while his passengers are asleep.

This move was understood to be under consideration because of the fear that the refugees, including 500 women and 150 children, might be driven to desperation and try to jump overboard.

Port police had several boats ready to escort the ship out of the harbor and pick up any who might try to end their lives in this manner rather than return to their former homeland.

Situation Desperate

Cuban guards, maintaining a close watch on the passengers, reported during a change of shifts this afternoon that their situation was desperate. Mothers and children wailed incessantly and calls to meals virtually were unanswered.

President Laredo Bru denied flatly reports originating in Washington that American representatives of Jewish organizations had reached an agreement with Cuba for a partial solution of the refugees' problem.

Private dispatches received in Washington from Havana said the Cuban government would permit all refugees to land who have valid landing permits and whose relatives or friends either in Cuba or the United States guarantee a bond of $500 a person.

Informed of these reports tonight, Laredo Bru declared: "This is false. the only truth is that the ship must leave Cuba as soon as possible."

5 Spotted Fever Cases Here Bring Warning on Ticks

Health Department officials yesterday noted the year's fifth case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever, spread by ticks.

At the same time, Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, issued the following warning to District residents:

"The common 'dog tick' will be with us during the summer months and disappear rapidly in August and early fall. They may be found anywhere in bushy, grassy places.

"Inspect the body and clothing for ticks, at least twice each day when exposed to the danger of ticks. Do not remove ticks with the fingers. Use a pair of forcepts.

Two Navy Fliers Killed in Crack-Up

Pensacola, Fla., June 1 (AP).—Two fliers from the Naval Air Station here were killed today when their training plane plunged into Pensacola Bay. They were Lieut. Joseph S. Fox, 34, Seattle, Wash., reserve, flight instructor, and Machinist's Mate Alfred Peter Ivy, 23, Norfolk, Va., student.

Plainfield, Ind., June 1 (AP).—A United States Navy pilot was injured slightly and six other persons were shaken today in a forced landing of the twin-motored naval plane Anacostia on a muddy field 2 miles northwest of here.

The injured man is George W. Dunn, co-pilot of the ship, en route from Washington to San Diego.

Bonnet Steps In to Save Entente

Sees British Envoy On Reconciliation With Russia and Predicts Full Accord

By the United Press.

Paris, June 1.—The French government intervened today in an effort to stave off collapse of negotiations for a triple alliance between Britan, France and Russia.

Foreign Minister Bonnet conferred with Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador to Paris, as the first step in reconciling British hesitation and Russian demands for an automatic Anglo-French guarantee to the Baltic states on Russia's western frontier.

Bonnet reiterated his optimistic certainity that since the three powers have been in agreement for weeks on the principle of combined resistance to further aggression by the dictatorships, diplomacy will succeed in overcoming the difficult problem of Baltic security, which has been the main obstacle to full accord.

Delay Expected

The French, however, now believe that it will be impossible to achieve the accord by June 5—which was the date tentatively set for simultaneous announcements in London, Paris and Moscow of the three powers' determination to meet force with force if Germany or Italy again tries to extend its borders by aggression.

The French government plainly was disappointed in Premier Molotoff's speech in Moscow last night but refused to agree with the elated judgments of Rome and Berlin that the entente talks have broken down.

"The differences are in form and not substance," a foreign office spokesman told the United Press tonight. "Paris, London and Moscow are in agreement and have been for weeks that they will not tolerate any more infringement of the European status quo by force. The latest Franco-British proposals were not fully satisfactory to the Russian government but there is no reason to believe that agreement is impossible and the French government is doing its utmost in the direction of rapprochement of the three powers' viewpoints."

It was clear to political observers, however, that Molotoff is proving to be a better horse-trader than his predecessor, Maxim Litvinoff.

Molotoff Knows Power

With the Red army of 2,500,000 soldiers, an airforce which many believe is the most powerful in the world, and a big submarine fleet behind him, Molotoff knows that if Britain and France are really anxious to set up a triple alliance to protect themselves against the dictatorships they will pay almost any price Moscow asks.

Last night Molotoff fixed his price: France and Britain must extend their present guarantees given Poland and Rumania to cover all of Russia's western neighbors.

The western powers must scratch out references to the League of Nations covenant and must write the

More Showers, Cooler Weather Forecast Today

The rain that began shortly after 5 p. m. yesterday was the forerunner of showers the Weather Bureau said would continue into tomorrow, carrying relief from the last three hot days.

The bureau predicted cooler weather for today. The temperature probably will be 65 in the morning and will not rise above 78 or 80 the peak of the day. The high temperature yesterday was 85.

The record-breaking drought of May compelled Arlington County yesterday to ban the use of water for sprinkling purposes between 5 and 9 p. m., daily.

Rescue Vessels Over British Sub Trapped With 78 on Trial Dive

Fliers Sight Buoy Released by Craft From 180-Ft. Depth Off Mersey Bar

By the United Press.

Birkenhead, England, Friday, June 2.—Rescue vessels wirelessed early today that they had located the British submarine Thetis, which sank seven miles off Mersey Bar yesterday afternoon with 78 men aboard. A buoy, released automatically by the Thetis, was sighted by aircraft late yesterday.

Motor launches and small craft equipped with powerful searchlights reached the spot soon after midnight. They took up a constant patrol of the vicinity in order to rescue any from the Thetis who might escape from the craft by using the "third lung" with which crew members were supplied.

The wireless message telling of the location was received by Cammel, Laird, Ltd., builders of the submarine, which was undergoing acceptance tests in Liverpool Bay. Twenty of the firm's technicians wehe aboard with a civilian pilot and 57 naval officers and men.

No Word From Vessel

No word had been received from the Thetis since she dived at 1:40 p. m. yesterday, although she was scheduled to remain below only three hours. Lack of any communication caused officials to fear that the submarine may have struck some submerged object, putting her electrical equipment out of operation and perhaps flooding the hull. The submarine was believed to be at 180 feet depth.

The admiralty was uncertain whether there were enough of the Davis "third lung" escape units aboard to take care of all those on the sub, since she was still in the hands of the builders, or whether the civilians were experienced in use of the lung.

Relatives of the men in the submarine gathered at the entrance to the Cammel, Laird Shipyard, the women weeping bitterly. One became hysterical.

The navy mobilization all its resources to rescue the trapped men aboard the 1,575-ton submersible, which failed to rise from its first practice dive. Twenty-one warships raced to the buoy which marked the location of the ill-fated submarine. Rescue operations were to begin at dawn.

The Thetis failed to rise from a practice dive in circumstances paralleling in many respects the disaster last month to the U. S. S. Squalus, in which 26 men died and 33 were rescued off Portsmouth, N. H.

The Thetis, commissioned only last March 4, had completed surface tests and, at 1:40 p. m. local time, went down for a three-hour practice dive. On board were 57 naval officers and men, a civilian pilot and 20 civilian engineers, technicians and officials representing the builders.

S O S Sounded

When she failed to rise at 4:40 p. m., a tug which had accompanied the submarine radioed the navy station, which immediately sent out an S O S and began mobilizing rescue craft.

Naval officers believed the Thetis could remain safely on the bottom for at least 36 hours, if her hull was not breached, "even if 100 men were aboard." The vessel was equipped with some of the latest safety devices, including an escape hatch, and the men on board had available a "third-lung" device similar to the United States Momsen "lung."

Builders of the submarine said they "feared the worst." The fact that no communication of any nature had been sent from the Thetis

Memorial Highway To Be Closed for King

Rulers to Traverse Mount Vernon Route On Trip to Shrine

The Mount Vernon Memorial Highway will be closed to all traffic next Friday while King George VI and Queen Elizabeth are visiting the shrine home of the First President, it was announced yesterday by park police.

The thoroughfare will be cut off from regular travel at noon, when Their Majesties begin their journey down the Potomac, and be kept closed "until they get back to Washington."

Alexandrians, whose historic city is in direct line of the return trip by motor are hopeful—without any encouragement from officials—that the flexible return date means there may be time for a royal visit to their town.

Congressmen, especially the "freshmen" members, were beginning to worry about whether the royal couple could shake hands with all 531 of them in the 45 minutes allotted to the visit to the Capitol rotunda.

Carpet for Royalty

When Their Majesties step from their train at the Union Station, it was revealed yesterday, it will be onto a strip of royal blue carpet that will extend all the way into the newly decorated state suite, where President and Mrs. Roosevelt will await them.

In the suite, resplendent with new furniture and trimmings, they will walk on a rug of the same color. Furnishings of the station reception room, for which $16,000 was appropriated, are all in place—except for the rug. Wicker furniture has given way to magnificent modern pieces upholstered in royal blue leather. The heavy draperies are gold, a color duplicated in the wall lighting fixtures of spread eagle-wing design. Two small pieces of statuary are on side tables, while on the large center table stands a big decorative blue vase.

By the Associated Press.

Jasper, Alberta, June 1.—King George and Queen Elizabeth were welcomed today to Jasper National Park, northern playground of the Rockies, where they will spend a day of recreation.

The royal train reached the station here at noon, to be greeted by mountain folk gathered in this quaint town named for Jasper Hawse, officer in charge of the first Hudsons Bay Co. trading post established in the Athabaska Valley.

King George and Queen Elizabeth will rest for 24 hours here on top of the Canadian Rockies where 2,400 square miles of the world's largest national park spread over glacial grandeur.

Few Stops on Schedule

Few stops will be made between here and Ontario, en route to Washington and New York. Edmonton, capital of Alberta, will entertain her sovereigns six hours on Friday and Saskatoon will have a two-hour visit Saturday.

All other stops will be brief ten-minute audiences with inhabitants of towns or country districts who

Girl, 19, Sought As Kidnaper Of Baby Boy

Philadelphia, June 1 (U.P.).—A 5-month-old baby was reported late today to have been kidnaped by a blond girl, about 19, from its carriage parked outside a store, a half block from a west Philadelphia police station.

The infant, Joseph McCrohan, was taken while his mother, Mrs. Margaret McCrohan, was shopping in the store.

The abduction was witnessed by the boy's sister, Margie, 4, who ran into the store and told her mother "A big blond girl" had taken the baby.

Farley Sounds New York On Third-Term Movement

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., June 1.—Postmaster General Farley sounded sentiment today of 22 Democratic county chairmen of his home State of New York toward a third-term Presidential movement, but referred to the White House the question of another term for President Roosevelt.

Asked about third-term possibilities and his own reported aspirations to lead the party in the 1940 Presidential campaign, Farley, just returned from a 14-State tour of the West, said:

"You'll have to ask the President. I have not told him anything about the situation in the West and whether Mr. Roosevelt has any thought of being a third-term President I do not know, as he has not expressed himself."

Farley said he made, on his Western tour, a special effort to learn the sentiment of voters for and against a third term "not because Mr. Roosevelt is President, but from the viewpoint of the precedent that would be established."

In an address tonight he urged party members to "avoid dissension," keep their "feet on the ground and look straight ahead; then there won't be any doubt about the outcome" of the 1940 Presidential election.

"The Democratic Party is in a sound position in this country at the

Senate, Without Roll Call, Votes $305,267,000 Flood Control

Adams Fails in Effort to Slash $50,000,000; 'I'm Interested in Economy,' He Says; 'But the Senator Has a Lonely Time,' Is Reply

A booming chorus of Senators approved a $305,267,000 bill for flood control, rivers and harbors work and other undertakings yesterday after shouting down pleas for economy.

Resembling a college cheering section at times, Senators quickly rejected reductions of $50,000,000 made by their appropriations committee, added a few minor items, and then sent the big supply bill back to the House.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, who led the futile effort to cut $50,000,000 from the total voted by the House, could not even get a record vote on these items. Not enough Senators raised their hands to obtain the formal roll call.

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, tried to help the movement to delete the $50,000,000 by announcing that President Roosevelt had authorized him to say $50,000,000 from relief funds would be used for flood control and rivers and harbors.

"We can put it in this bill and take it out of relief later," said Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri.

Senator Johnson (Republican), California, crossed over from the Republican side to tell Democrats that the President's promise showed "this is not a question of economy."

As to promises to use relief funds, the silver-haired Californian smilingly observed "you can't always sometimes tell."

Senator Adams broke in to say he was "interested in economy."

"I think the Senator actually is," Johnson commented. "But he has a very lonely time."

Adams, after detailing the sharp and steady increases in Federal outlays in recent decades, said "the most vital element in American defense is credit which we are allowing to go unprotected."

The Colorado Senator told the Senate that Army engineers had cleverly distributed flood control and rivers and harbor projects over the entire United States "because they know the weakness of the men who sit in Congress."

The National Mediation Board announced yesterday that Otto S. Beyer had been designated as chairman. He succeeds William M. Leiserman who now is a member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Meanwhile, the Senate confirmed President Roosevelt's appointment of David J. Lewis, former Democratic Representative from Maryland, to be a member of the Mediation Board.

Prior to confirmation, Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, told the Senate he would not oppose it. Lewis, with the support of President Roosevelt, unsuccessfully opposed Tydings for the Senate nomination last year.

In the event Smathers leaves the Senate, the White House has been advised that Gov. A. Harry Moore would immediately name wealthy James H. R. Cromwell, of Sumerville, as his successor.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported yesterday it paid out $551,726,340 in crop control subsidies and operating expenses during the ten months ended May 1.

The subsidies included $120,893,961 in cotton adjustment payments for the 1937 crop; $65,148,766 in sugar payments for the 1937 and 1938 crops, and $3,667,316 in parity payments for 1938 crops. The bulk of the balance constituted soil conservation payments.

House Group Approves Army 'Revitalization'

Woodring Plan Would Retire 2,000 Over-Age Officers

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday approved Secretary Woodring's plan to "revitalize" the Army by retiring some 2,000 over-age officers.

Several amendments were written into the measure, designed to ease some of the more drastic effects of the plan and grant higher retirement pay to certain groups. The principal change fixes a mandatory instead of a flexible retirement age for each rank. This will slow up promotions and retirements to some extent and means that in some years the maximum number will not be eliminated.

All officers retired under provisions of the measure will receive at least the pay of an officer of 23 years' service, under another amendment.

The bill is designed to speed promotion and eliminate the "hump" caused by the appointment of a large group of officers during the World War. Many officers remain in the lower grades too long and become too old for their rank as the result of the present situation, the War Department declares. Under the bill enough older officers would be forcibly retired every year to assure a turnover of close to 4.38 per cent of the total each 12-month period.

Ship Remodeling Voted

The House gave final approval yesterday to the $100,000,000 war materials bill, designed to make America economically self-secure in time of war.

Without a record vote the chamber indorsed the report of conferees who adjusted differences between the Senate and House drafts of the measure. An attempt to conclude Congressional action failed, however, when a motion by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, to take up the conference report in the Senate was barred by the economy bloc in that chamber.

As the measure passed the Senate, but $40,000,000 was voted for the war reserve of materials not produced in quantity in this country. The House raised the figure to $100,000,000 and the conference committee approved this total.

The House also passed a bill to authorize the reconditioning of five battleships, the Tennessee, the California, the Maryland, the Colorado and the West Virginia, at a total cost of $8,950,000.

Secretary of War Woodring, meanwhile, called the attention of young men to the opportunities the Army offers for well-balanced education to aircraft technicians. In the year beginning July 1, the enlisted strength of the Air Corps will be increased by 23,644, he said, and 19,170 of them will be trained as specialists in various technical jobs relating to maintenance and operation of airplanes.

Eligible candidates for the training must enlist in the Army for three years, but may return to civil life thereafter, he declared.

Pergler Assails German Theory As 'Parasitic'

Dr. Charles Pergler, former Czecho-Slovakian Minister to Japan and now a member of the District bar, yesterday discussed what he called Germany's "parasitic theory of the state and nations" in reference to the pact of Munich. He spoke before nearly 150 members of the Junior Board of Commerce, at a luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel, presided over by Minor Hudson, president of the board.

"As a result of the fall of Czecho-Slovakia," Dr. Pergler said, "Poland is endangered, Hungary is completely a German vassal, the Baltic states are uneasy, as are the Scandinavian countries, to mention only some, and not all countries menaced.

"It logically follows that unless Munich is undone, just so long Germany may resume her aggressive march at any opportune moment, and just so long any quiescence on her part is merely a pause for breath."

The Gallup Poll

President Roosevelt's popularity with the Nation's voters rose during the month of May, according to a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion

Roosevelt Popularity Rises in Month; Declining Tension Abroad a Factor

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 1.—President Roosevelt's popularity with the voters of the Nation increased slightly during the month of May, reversing a downward trend which had started with the European crisis of March and April, according to the latest national survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

With Democratic party leaders attempting to hasten the adjournment of Congress, the President has the support of 58.1 per cent of the Nation's major party voters, against 56.1 per cent last month and 58.2 per cent the month before.

The rise in his popularity during the past month may have come about for several reasons. First, there was a considerable lessening of tension in Europe and a decline in attacks on the Administration's foreign policy by Republican leaders. Second, the President's speech before the Retailer's National Forum, in which he vigorously reaffirmed the objectives of the New Deal, may have played a part in increasing support for his Administration.

Answers Explained

The present popularity index is not, however, a measurement of third term sentiment. It represents the answers of a Nation-wide cross-section of voters to the question:

"In general, do you approve or disapprove today of Roosevelt as President?"

Approve of Roosevelt as President

	Today	Last Month
Upper Income Voters	38%	34%
Middle Income Voters	54	52
Lower Income Voters	74	71
Reliefers	82*	81

Today's figures—58.1 per cent—compare with a vote of 62.5 per cent for Roosevelt in the 1936 election.

In two recent tests of third term sentiment, the Institute conducted a "trial heat" between President Roosevelt and Thomas E. Dewey, and Roosevelt and Senator Robert A. Taft. In the Roosevelt-Dewey race, 55 per cent of voters with opinions expressed a preference for Dewey, 45 per cent for Roosevelt. In the Taft-Roosevelt race, sentiment was evenly divided between the two candidates.

The rise in Roosevelt's popularity as noted in today's survey is especially interesting in the light of past Institute findings. In nearly every year since 1934, Institute surveys have revealed that his popularity tended to decline while Congress was in session. This was the case in 1934, 1935, 1937 and 1938. This year, however, the trend has apparently been reversed. Except for a slight dip in April, during the European crisis, the President's popularity index has remained consistently at around 52 per cent since Congress convened in January.

Gain in All Areas

As compared with last month the President gained in popularity in all sections of the country, but particularly in New England and the Middle Atlantic States, as well as in the South. The President still holds the overwhelming support of voters in the lower income group and of persons on relief, while voters in the upper income group are strongly against him. Those in the middle level—persons earning from $20 to $40 a week—are almost evenly divided, with a slight majority for him. It is in this group, holding the balance of political power between the two extremes, that the fate of the Democratic party in the next election lies.

The attitude of the various income groups this month and last month is shown below.

"In general, do you approve or disapprove today of Roosevelt as President?"

Upper Income Voters	38%	34%
Middle Income Voters	54	52

Pittman Sees August Action On Neutrality

All Other Work Can Be Done by July 15, Congress Leaders Say

By International News Service.

Calling for passages of the Administration's legislation to permit sale of munitions to all warring nations, Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, last night forecast Congress will be in session during August.

The Nevadan conferred with Acting Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House foreign affairs committee, and they agreed to fight to obtain a new statute this session.

Old-time Senate and House leaders singled out neutrality legislation as the key to Congress' adjournment date. All major legislation now contemplated by the administration forces, save neutrality, can be whisked through by July 15.

Conflicting Reports

There were conflicting reports on the President's wishes on Capitol Hill. Some leaders said he would not attempt to hold Congress in session for neutrality legislation if all other major legislation is acted upon—tax revision, modification of the social security act, the annual WPA fund and refurbishing of the railroad laws.

Others said he was adamant for neutrality legislation along the line recommended by Secretary of State Hull, keystone of which is to repeal the present law under which shipments of munitions to belligerent nations would be prohibited automatically once the President found a war in progress.

New Bill Offered

The House Foreign Affairs Committee in secret session yesterday listened to the reading of Secretary of State Hull's recent statement advocating repeal of the arms embargo provisions. The committee will resume sessions today, with Bloom predicting his bill embracing the Hull program will be reported next week.

Tossed into the neutrality fight today was a bill by Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, to give the President broad power to stop exportation of American goods, military and nonmilitary, as he desires, to any nation which might use the supplies "in violation of the sovereignty of the independence or territorial or administration integrity of any nation," which America is bound by treaty to respect.

The Washingtonian, a stanch "New Dealer," frankly admitted his bill was "aimed at Japan."

Borah Suggests War Debt Topic Greet Royal Pair

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, hinted on the Senate floor today that a public discussion of the unpaid war debt might be in order when the King and Queen of England visit the Capitol next week.

Interrupting a speech by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, Borah inquired whether the Finance Committee would consider war debts when it took up tax legislation. King replied that the war debts were a subject for the Foreign Relations Committee to discuss.

"Some committee of Congress ought to have something to say about some $12,000,000,000 slipping out of our hands without any effort whatever being made to collect it," Borah remarked.

"Perhaps this is not the right time," he added with a smile. "But—in a week or two it will be."

Hearing Scheduled For Suspect in D.C. Bank Holdup

A suspect in a 7-year-old Washington bank holdup will face a hearing to determine whether he will be returned here for trial, it was learned yesterday. Capt. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, of the Metropolitan Police, and Thomas Elgin, assistant cashier of the City Bank, 3608 Georgia avenue northwest, departed for Albany, N. Y., to appear against the suspect, James Foley, alias Burt Bell.

Foley was indicted for the $9,000 holdup of the Washington Mechanics Bank, now the City Bank, in June, 1932. Never apprehended, he was sentenced for a $31,000 bank robbery the next year in New York. He was released yesterday from Syracuse Penitentiary, N. Y., to the custody of marshals holding him for Washington.

Wagner Health Bill Is Opposed By Three Groups

Three Catholic agencies complained yesterday that the Wagner health bill fails to provide for cooperation of governmental and nongovernmental agencies.

The complaint was raised at hearings before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor by William F. Montavon, National Catholic Welfare Conference; Mgr. John O'Grady, National Conference of Catholic Charities, and Dr. Alphonse Schwitalla, Catholic Hospital Association.

"This bill," said Montavon, "tend to make the provisions of medical care primarily if not exclusively a political function."

Father Schwitalla pointed out that the Catholic Hospital Association wished to be heard in connection with debate on the bill, because member hospitals seek to retain the opportunities for service to the public.

Young Judea Parley Elects Washingtonians

Miss Betty L. Rabenovets, president of the Washington Young Judea Council, was elected vice president of the Seaboard Young Judea Region at the annual conference in Baltimore, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Mary B. Lewis, of Washington, was elected treasurer, and Miss Rose Shatenstein and Miss Libbey S. Lewis, of Washington, were elected to the executive committee.

Dies Inquiry Strikes Out Moseley Remarks; He Urges Nation-Wide Vigilante System

General Praises 'Pure, Loyal Air' of Imperial Valley

"Don't Trust Committee"

"I don't trust this committee too far, you know," Moseley later declared. He testified that his life had been threatened and that friends warned him not to eat in certain restaurants when he went to New York.

Moseley, sometimes described by committee members as "the man on horseback" of American Fascist movements, indorsed the formation of "lawful vigilante" groups to be used in time of "emergency." The witness, who later said he meant "deputies" instead of vigilantes," cited law-enforcement activities in the Imperial Valley of California as a praiseworthy example.

A "very high-class sheriff" in the valley, said Moseley, has several hundred deputized assistants whom he can call on when there is "any difficulty."

"Pure, Loyal American Air"

"I wish you could go down there and breathe that pure, loyal American air," he shouted. "God, it's wonderful."

Moseley suggested that the deputized groups seize control of water works police and fire departments when necessary. The general insisted, however, that all such operations be carried out "legally."

The witness was queried about a speech he made in Philadelphia a few months ago, in which he quoted Hans Luther, former German Ambassador to the United States, saying that Germany wanted peace, but must have "elbow room" and that other powers had better not interfere.

"Friendly to France Too"

"Were you trying to plead the cause of Germany?" asked Representative Healey, of Massachusetts, temporary chairman of the committee in the absence of Representative Dies.

"Oh, no!" exclaimed the general.

Pressed by Healey, he finally admitted that his speech could be construed as "friendly" to Germany, but he added, "I'm friendly to France, too."

In a letter to James E. Campbell, distributor of anti-Semitic literature, with whom Moseley co-operated in efforts to promote a new treatment for gonorrhea, the general had said that Hitler had certain problems which he had "solved in his own way."

"Racial Problem"

Asked if he agreed with Hitler's methods, the general replied, "No," but he asserted that Hitler had solved "the problem of international finance without an ounce of gold," has solved the problem of international trade and has solved the "racial problem."

Moseley added that he approved of Mr. Hitler's remarks on the Jews insofar as he referred to certain international controls." Nevertheless, the general repeatedly told the committee he was not anti-Semitic.

Questioned about the financial background of a trip to the West Coast, Moseley said he had received in the mail a cashier's check for $220, "about the cost of the trip." He said the letter came from San Diego, but he had "no idea" who sent it.

Angers Visibly

Visibly angering under further queries regarding the check, the general shouted at the committee that he had "lots of friends in San Diego—they probably got $220 together and sent it to me—good God Almighty!"

Sympathizers Appear

The hearing, which was occasionally interrupted by clashes between Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, and Democratic members, attracted various Washington sympathizers of Moseley. At the close of the testimony some of them berated committee members for failure to take the general's allegations more seriously. Moseley was again accompanied by two aides and Representative Thorkelson (Republican), of Montana.

Moseley told the committee that while he was in California he saw a chart showing how "planning agencies of the Government" were controlled by the "interlocking directorates" of a small group. Asked by Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, if he could give the name of any Government official included on the chart, Moseley emphatically shook his head and said "No, not a one." He suggested that the committee have the chart brought before it.

2d Degree Murder Verdict in Shooting

Ralph A. Davenport, colored, 23, yesterday was convicted of second-degree murder in the death of Izell P. Payne, colored, 36, on New Year's Day. Witnesses testified Davenport had been beaten up by three men before the shooting in a lunchroom, 1300 block Ninth street northwest.

Defense Counsel Perry Howard sought acquittal on the ground that police later found an open knife in Payne's pocket.

Deaths Blamed on Structure Failure

By International News Service.

Citing structural failure as the most probable cause of the crash of a Boeing stratoliner, the Federal Air Safety Board last night urged further extensive experiments before this type of high altitude aircraft is licensed by the Government.

The stratoliner, first of its type designed to fly through upper air, crashed March 18, near Alder, Wash., bringing death to all ten persons aboard.

The craft had not yet been licensed as air-worthy by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and had only been operated experimentally by its manufacturer.

The report explained that the crash was caused by "structural failure of the wing-tips and tail assembly because of the imposition of strains on those surfaces which the plane had not been designed to withstand."

Woman Asks $10,000 From Chambers Firm

Mrs. Eleanor Eddicks, of 3625 Lowell street northwest, yesterday asked District Court for $10,000 damages against the W. W. Chambers Co. for injuries she said resulted when employes of the firm dropped her out of a stretcher while bringing her from Providence Hospital March 17.

15 More Feared Poison-Plot Victims

Philadelphia, June 1 (AP).—With nearly half a hundred known deaths already recorded, 15 new names were added today to the roll of possible victims of a syndicate accused of wholesale murders in Eastern States for insurance money.

Investigators expressed belief the 15 persons—like many other victims—were heavily insured by the syndicate or its "clients," then fed a deadly poison compound called "Witch's Brew."

British Submarine Sinks; 78 Aboard

led officials to fear that the submarine may have struck some submerged object and thereby put its electrical equipment out of order, perhaps flooding the craft.

Royal Air Force planes, destroyers equipped with the latest British secret listening devices to detect underwater craft, mine sweepers and salvage craft with diving equipment were rushed to the spot where the Thetis went down. Rescue operations were in charge of Capt. MacIntyre, chief of staff to the rear admiral commanding submarines.

Like Squalus Disaster

There was a close parallel between the apparent mishap to the Thetis and the disaster which overtook the U. S. S. Squalus off Portsmouth, N. H., last month. Both were undergoing final tests. Both had representatives of the builders aboard. The submarines are of almost the same size, the Squalus being 100 tons lighter than the Thetis but almost 75 feet longer. The Squalus went down in 240 feet of water.

The U. S. Navy was able to rescue alive 33 members of the Squalus' crew by the use of a special diving bell invented and perfected by American naval officers. The 26 who perished were drowned when the after compartment was flooded.

The British and French navies do not have rescue equipment of the type used on the Squalus as yet, although the United States Government has sent drawings and specifications of the rescue bell to other naval authorities as a humanitarian gesture.

The last previous British submarine to sink was the M-2, which went down off Portland Bill, England, with the loss of 60 lives.

According to the current navy list the Thetis was commanded by Lieut. Comdr. G. H. Bolus. Other officers were Lieuts. H. C. Chapman, F. G. Woods and W. A. M. Poland and Engineer Officer R. D. Glen.

Farley urged his listeners to appeal to the women's and young people's vote. He predicted a Democratic victory in 1940 as he lauded the present Administration for its "outstanding accomplishments."

Of the foreign situation, Farley declared:

"President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull will do everything in their power to preserve the prestige of the Nation and remain at peace with all the world."

royal train "a routine job," other signs of much dressing up were in evidence. The big station has been cleaned and shined, and the two rows of columns under sheds extending down Track 20 have been painting a glistening green and white.

Marines to Stand Guard

A double row of six-foot marines will line the carpet strip; so station employes are not counting on a good view of the royal disembarking. Those with concessions plan to have flags out, however. The train will be cleaned from "top to bottom" while it is in the station yard and will remain on track 20, over which it comes in. All other business will proceed on regular schedule, Marks declared.

The carpet on which the royal couple will stand in the rotunda will be 8x12 feet, American made, and a blue-gray in color, Representative Sol Bloom said.

"It either had to cover the whole rotunda floor or be just an ordinary standing size, large enough for the King and Queen and members of the committee," he declared. "We decided on the latter as more practical. We were afraid to risk carpet on the Capitol steps, since they are marble. It would have slipped too easily."

Tickets for the 4,000 seats to be placed before the front Capitol steps will be given out Monday or Tuesday, he said, and will be solely for women and "boys under 12 years of age." "If anybody gets here later than 10:30 for those seats, it will be too late," he said.

Awning held ready

In case of rain, an awning canopy will be placed over the Capitol steps. It was not made "specially for this, but is just one we bought," Representative Bloom declared.

Maj. Ernest Brown, chief of the Metropolitan Police force, went over the royal route yesterday, "to the British Embassy, Fort Hunt, Mount Vernon, Arlington, and all around."

He's more worried about the weather than almost anything else now—and not about rain. Washington heat is the bugaboo he dreads. He will attend two meetings connected with the visit today, one at the District Building and one at the White House.

Many large parties have booked reservations at hotels for the period. Several travel agencies are bringing in groups at excursion rates. Among the largest groups reported will be 125 Texans, who have booked "space" at the Lee House Hotel and hope to see Their Majesties somewhere along the parade line.

can get to the railway stations to see the special streak through or slow down to a 4-mile speed if the engineer sees a waiting crowd. He pushes a buzzer which notifies the King in the last car that loyal subjects want to see him.

On the westward trip the royal couple used this method of making platform appearances whenever possible.

At one Ontario town 6,000 people welcomed the royal train with a brass band and community singing and cheering at 6 a. m. No stop was scheduled, and the royal slumber after a hard previous day of personal appearances was rudely ended.

As a result, tour officials made a statement which included the following:

"To avoid disappointment, it should be clearly understood that it would be quite impossible for Their Majesties to appear, for example, at any station not already mentioned in the official itinerary, which may be passed before 10 o'clock in the morning or in the evening after dark."

That does not mean the King and Queen are sleepyheads, but they are making no bathrobe and slipper rear platform appearances.

The royal train came to Jasper, just over the Great Divide, by way of romantic trails and the adventurous route of early traders and travelers to the Oregon country before modern boundary limits were fixed.

Up the broad Fraser River a hundred miles, where navigation ends, the calm stream goes wild in a deep, precipitous Hell Gate Canyon. In all their world travels King George and Queen Elizabeth have seen nothing more inspiring than the seething, tumbling river high above the torrent.

From daylight until 10:15 a. m. (P. S. T.) when the royal train was due at Jasper every mile brought new mountain peaks to view, with Mount Robson of 12,872 feet, the highest peak of the Canadian Rockies.

ably would submit a report to Congress on the bill within a few days.

The meeting with business leaders, the first with any sizable group of council members in nearly a year and a half, was held in the President's study. The businessmen, it was said, suggested the get-together, informing W. Averill Harriman, council head, that they desired to present their views to the President on certain questions.

While the group was at the White House, the remainder of the council attended a private dinner at the Mayflower Hotel. This was said to be merely an informal discussion between council members and the few New Dealers present. Edward H. Foley, Jr., successor to the late Herman Oliphant as Treasury general counsel attended.

Rifle Soldier Used In Philippines Reissued to Him

Frankfort, Ind., June 1 (AP).—Waiting in a rifle squad to fire a salute to soldier dead, Charles E. Eads glanced at the stock of the gun issued to him and saw his own initials carved there.

The rifle was the one he had used with United States forces in the Philippine insurrection 40 years ago. It was the first time he had seen it since.

Investigation disclosed the gun was in a consignment of obsolete rifles given by the Government in 1925 tothe local camp of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Montgomery B. & L. to Pay $400,000

1,369 Depositors, Certificate Holders Of Firm to Be Paid

An immediate $400,000 payment to depositors and shareholders in the dissolved Montgomery Building and Loan Association was approved by Justice Luhring in District Court yesterday.

Justice Luhring authorized Julius I. Peyser, receiver for the firm, to make immediate distribution of an amount representing nearly half the claims against the firm, under a plan prepared by attorneys for various groups of claimants.

Under Justice Luhring's order immediate distribution is authorized for 1,369 depositors and holders of "foundation surplus certificates," who approved the plan of distribution. For 547 claimants who failed to approve the plan, and 68 who rejected, Justice Luhring set June 15 as the date when they will be given a hearing, and an opportunity to file exceptions to the plan of distribution.

Majority Favors Plan

Peyser told the court that an overwhelming majority of the claimants had approved the final plan as a compromise following court action on the part of the surplus certificate holders to establish priority over depositors and shareholders.

Of the $400,000 initial dividend, $305,050 is to go to depositors and shareholders, and $94,950 to the certificate holders. Later dividend payments, under the plan, will be divided between the two groups on a percentage basis, 62.5 per cent for depositors, 37.5 per cent for certificate holders.

According to Peyser's report, the group favoring the distribution plan represented total claims against the association of $547,732.58, while those who rejected it held claims of $37,087.26.

10 Days for Exceptions

Justice Luhring's order allowed ten days for those who had not consented to the plan to present their exceptions in court. At the end of this period, the payment of claims will become effective for all who do not file exceptions.

Justice Luhring added that "as to all persons filing proper exceptions, the allowance made for distribution in the schedule of proposed distribution will be regarded as vacated by the filing of such exceptions and the claims of such persons will be heard de novo by the court."

Donald Smith Leaves Post; to Represent Labor

By the Associated Press.

Donald Wakefield Smith relinquished his place on the National Labor Relations Board yesterday with the announcement that he would become a free lance legal representative of employers in industrial relations cases.

Smith was succeeded by Dr. William M. Leiserson, now chairman of the National Mediation Board.

President Roosevelt appointed Leiserson after the American Federation of Labor opposed confirmation of a recent appointment given to Smith last August.

Smith said he would represent labor organizations also in board cases, but expected his work would involve "mostly industries."

Painting Beds

Don't cringe at the idea of painting a four-poster bed. Sometimes it's a very sensible thing to do—when, for instance, you have a big bed that must go in a small room, it will fit graciously into the scene if painted the same tint as the walls. The same thing goes for chests and other furniture.

Harlan Coal Mine Parleys Suspend; Peace Efforts Fail

Harlan, Ky., June 1.—Federal and State conciliators stepped out of contract negotiations between Harlan soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) today with the announcement conferences had been suspended indefinitely.

John L. Conner, Labor Department conciliator, left for Charleston, W. Va. He said conferees were subject to recall by either side.

Today's three-hour conference, which ended with no statement of progress made, climaxed a week of efforts by Conner and Emmett Durrett, State conciliator, to reconcile the views of union leaders and operators on contract differences.

Czecho-Slovakia 'Lives,' Dedicators Of Pavilion Say

New York, June 1 (AP).—"Czecho-Slovakia still lives," its exiled leaders told the world today as they dedicated on the New York World's Fair Grounds one of the last plots of earth which they can still call their own—the Czecho-Slovak Pavilion.

Mayor LaGuardia declared that the inspiration for completion of the pavilion after the 20-year-old republic was absorbed by Germany "came from the courageous ideals of the American Department of State in Washington," which refused to recognize the German conquest.

Two Musical Hits Open On Downtown Screens

'Rose of Washington Square' Scores at Palace; 'The Mikado' a Revelation at RKO-Keith's; Supplementary Bills Are Diversified

"ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin, adapted to the screen by Nunnally Johnson, starring Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Al Jolson, with William Frawley, Joyce Compton, Hobart Cavanaugh, Moroni Olsen, E. E. Cline, Louis Prima, Charles Wilson, Paul Stanton, Maurice Cass, Bert Roach, Irma Wilson, Harry Hayden, Charles Lane, John Hamilton and Winifred Harris. Songs by Gordon and Revel, James P. Hanley, Ballard MacDonald and others. Directed by Gregory Ratoff. Previewed Tuesday, May 23. At Loew's Palace.

"THE MIKADO." Universal release of Geoffrey Toye's picturization of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, which he adapted to the screen, conducted and produced, featuring Kenny Baker, with John Barclay, Martyn Green, Sidney Granville, Gregory Stroud, Jean Colin, Elizabeth Paynter, Kathleen Naylor and Constance Willis. Photographed in Technicolor. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's.

This tuneful and handsomely executed screen subject belongs in the same category of reminiscent filmusicals as "Alexander's Ragtime Band." In fact, one suspects that Darryl Zanuck was so heartened by the success of his first adventure in nostalgia that he set about immediately to repeat that triumph. To all intents and purposes he has done so.

BELL

"Rose of Washington Square" harks back to the prohibition era, the heyday of the New York Winter Garden and the Zeigfeld "Follies" at their zenith for its atmosphere and the foundation of its story. The story is a more or less trite one—the disrupted vaudeville team, the struggle for stardom, the constant interference of an unscrupulous gambler and all of the impediments that backstage life seems unfailingly able to engender—but it is so cleverly acted and tricked out with such a wealth of old-time song hits that its familiarity fails to breed contempt.

Pivots on Three

The principal figures in the action are Bart Clinton, Rose Sargent and Ted Cotter. In the early sequences, Rose and Ted are a variety team on the verge of making the "big time." Rose breaks up the act and Ted, the singing "candy butcher" from the burlesque circuits, goes it alone, gains both stage and radio auditions and becomes a Broadway star. Rose undergoes a wide range of disturbing vicissitudes through her inexplicable love for Clinton. Through the faithful aid of Cotter, she, too, finally reaches the top and Clinton, at the end of his rope, indicates signs of repentance and regeneration. The formula is not unlike that of "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

These three roles are played by Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Al Jolson, each at the top of his form. There will be those who will resent the disheveled Mr. Power of many of the scenes in the picture, but his performance, nevertheless, seems to me to be one of his best to date. Miss Faye sings many songs in her deep throaty voice—there are a dozen or so of the old favorites on the sound track—even achieving the piece de resistance of her characterization of the young woman deeply in love by singing "My Man," made famous many years ago by Fanny Brice.

Jolson Is Smash Hit

But it is Al Jolson who steals the show, if anyone does. Singing a majority of the songs that he introduced at the Winter Garden—and singing them just as well now as he did then—Jolson does a complete comeback here. Not only does he sing his way to favor, but he plays the role of Cotter with intelligence and effectiveness in whiteface.

There are a score or more of others who do yeoman's service in making the new Palace feature the hit that it is. Their names will be found in the small-type paragraph at the top of this column.

"Money to Earn," a new release in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series, and "Rural Hungary," a Technicolor travelogue, are the foremost auxiliaries of the new bill which opened yesterday at the Palace. The new issue of "News of the Day" completes a program that should engage the interest of any discriminating amusement-seeker.

"The Mikeda," probably hte most abused of all the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, finally has come into a heritage of glorified magnificence. As it is presented on the screen at RKO-Keith's this week, this ancient Savoyard opera ceases to be any simple little two-act music-piece and becomes an Oriental pageant of spectacular brilliance, emphasized in its visual beauty by the most exquisite Technicolor treatment the cinema recently has achieved.

The familiar story has been kept rigidly intact, although a vast amount of new movement and stage "business" has been added to its interpretation. Practically the entire score is sung by a richly competent cast of principals led by Kenny Baker, and a superb orchestral background is supplied by the London Symphony Orchestra. The chorals are sung by the D'Oyly Carte Ensemble. There has been some transposition of songs, to be sure, and the ensemble treatment of many of the numbers has been so completely altered as to render them unrecognizable to the eye, although they remain wholly familiar to the ear. This has all redounded to the benefit of a unique film work which, while basically operetta, has been so expanded for the color cameras as to take on almost the dimensions of grand opera.

Gorgeously Produced

The most obtrusive innovation in this filmed "Mikado" is to be found in the costuming and settings. The Mikado's court, the streets and courtyard of the village of Titipu and other backgrounds for the fantastic tale have been cooncieved in an imaginative mood verging close to sheer fantasy. The costumes transcend anything ever seen in any previous "Mikado." They are of matchless magnificence and of a design as extravagant as the entire screen production of "The Mikado" is surprising to one who thought nothing new could be done with it. Something new and wonderful has been done with it, as you will discover upon a visit to Keith's, where it opened what ought to be an extended engagement, yesterday. "The Mikado" in its present manifestation is almost a "Chu-Chin-Chow."

Kenny Baker appears in the role of Nanki-Poo, sings it splendidly and acts it acceptably, with a lovely young woman by the name of Jean Colin as his Yum-Yum. She, too, sings her songs well and acts both ingenuously and vivaciously. John Barclay is the Mikado and makes a humorously pompous one, as may be said also of Sidney Granville's Pooh-Bah. Elizabeth Paynter and Kathleen Naylor are exquisite decorations as Pitti-Sing and Peep-Bo. Constance Willis, as Katisha, is a more accentuated character in this version than is ordinarily the case.

Martyn Green a Hit

But, as goes without saying to those who have seen him with the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, the prize performance of the lot is given by Martyn Green, as Ko-Ko, Lord High Executioner. Mr. Green has expanded his interpretation of the role far beyond the limits of his stage portrayal and again demonstrates himself to be an artist of great skill and versatility.

"Soldiers of the Sea," a reel dedicated to the U. S. Marines; Walt Disney's Technicolor cartoon, "Donald's Cousin Gus," which seemed to me something less than inspired, and the Pathe News augment a feature that will amaze and delight every class of picturegoers. "The Mikado" has practically everything and will come as a complete revelation to many, just as it did to me.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 1.

FETE: The only American entertainer who played a command performance at a private party for Their Majesties is Harry Richman. Last year the British rulers attended a party at Lord Stanley's, and asked Richman to perform . . . When Harry arrived he invited the guests to name the songs they preferred him to sing . . . King George shouted: "The Birth of the Blues," while Queen Elizabeth asked for "Sunny Side of the Street."

When Richman learned that Their Majesties would visit the White House he suggested a one-hour show to be performed there—a five-minute dramatic sketch, with Spencer Tracy and Clark Gable; a quartette, consisting of Lily Pons, Lawrence Tibbett, Grace Moore and Bing Crosby, with Leopold Stokowski conducting; another sketch, with Garbo, Norma Shearer and Carole Lombard; a playlet, with Shirley Temple, Mickey Rooney and Jane Withers; a dance routine, with Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and Eleanor Powell; a comedy sketch, with Eddie Cantor, John Barrymore and the Marx Bros., etc. . . . He told these plans to Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who promised to tell Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt about it . . . But F. D., jr., forgot

DISCORD: Henri Bernstein, the French playwright, tendered a dinner here for Eve Curie before her sailing. Many of the most prominent New Yorkers attended . . . The affair proved to be an unhappy one—because a young lady seated next to Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador, kept insisting to him: "Why don't you give Danzig to Hitler?"

HONOR: Within the next few days Clark University of Worcester, Mass., will announce the conferring of an honorary degree upon Cornelia Otis Skinner.

ENNUI: At 3 a. m. the other day the younger members of the social set decided to relieve their boredom by taking rides in the Goodyear blimps to greet the sunrise by flying over the World's Fair grounds . . . Some of those who agreed to the flight were Billy Livingston, Rosemary Cox, Jean Harrington, Peter Arno and George Peabody. Brenda Frazier declined at the last moment, because her mother is sick . . . The socialties were extremely pleased when a news photographer appeared . . . "Did your editor assign you to take the pictures?" he was asked . . . "Yeah," the cameraman yawned. "He said who can tell—maybe the blimps will blow up."

CHATTER: Dorothy Thompson will discontinue her column during a two-month vacation . . . Arthur Gershwin now is writing songs with Stanley Adams, who wrote "Little Old Lady" . . . Pearl Buck has moved her four adopted children to Bucks County, Pa., and has vowed never again to bring them to New York together . . . Eleanor Roosevelt has overruled all objections and will serve hot dogs to George and Elizabeth . . . Two intra-Tammany fights are brewing, and will explode next week.

MYSTERY: One of the most famous pets in show business is John, the 21-year-old parrot who belongs to Lillian and Dorothy Gish . . . John has endeared himself to so many theatrical people that George Cukor, the film director, insists that John be willed to him . . . John's many friends will be surprised to learn that his name now is Esther—because last week, after a 21-year existence as a male, "John" laid an egg.

DEATH: The police were very kind in handling the suicide of Ernst Toller, one of Germany's greatest writers . . . While they were inspecting the body, the telephone rang four times—each call from a friend of Toller's, inviting him to dinner. His secretary answered the phone, and, at the suggestion of the police, accepted—for Toller—all the invitations . . . When the funeral arrangements were being made, Toller's friends contributed $1,000 . . . "A thousand dollars now," his secretary confided, "—when just $200 would have saved him."

ELEGANCE: The other night's business in the cafes was the weakest it ever has been in the last five years . . . Mr. and Mrs. William Gaxton and Winthrop Rockefeller entered one of the ultra-swanky spots where only two other customers were in the room . . . They were assigned a table near the far entrance . . . "What's the idea?" Gaxton asked . . . "No ringside," the manager explained to him, "because you're not wearing formal attire."

DAMAGE: When Bill Robinson and his "Hot Mikado" troupe move to the fair grounds, Bill will be assured of excellent attention from the officials . . . This is because last week Robinson discovered his flashy Deusenberg car damaged and abandoned on the fair grounds . . . Bill investigated and discovered that the young man responsible for this was Grover Whalen's son.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 1 (INS).—Cary Grant was in a gay mood today for two excellent reasons. One is that he and Phyllis Brooks have made up their minds to marry, and the other is "Passport to Life," a story which so intrigued Pandro Berman that he agreed to remain at RKO, in spite of his resignation, to produce it. I don't suppose Cary realized how deeply he was in love with Phyllis or she with him until they had the Atlantic between them. He is hoping to finish "Memory of Love" so he can hope a boat to meet his bride-to-be in Europe. If that isn't possible, they will be married here.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Just another word about "Passport to Life," which has fascinated Cary because it affords him a complete departure from anything he has ever done. He will be seen as a ruthless racketeer operating in Europe and America. It was the unusual twist to the story that caused Garson Kanin, who will direct it, to bring it to Pan Berman's attention. The cameras turn in October, after Cary finishes "The Bigger They Come" at Columbia.

What! A story about Ralph "Jersey Devil" Graham, the burglar who stole everything from diamond bracelets to kitchen stoves from the movie stars? I feared, somehow, that Graham would get into the movies. And I'm mighty sorry, for I can't feel, even though Jonathan Finn, the author, plans to treat his story as another type of American tragedy—a psychopathic case, as it were—that his misdeeds should be put into the movies. Graham, you may remember, is the $5,000-000 thief who said that Fannie Brice was the only actress who told the truth about the amount of her losses and the Lupe Valez's rubies and diamonds were "a lot of junk." He is also the lad who left a note for Barbara Stanwyck, telling her he was sorry he had to break into her house, and paused for a drink at the Lombard bar.

Robert Benchley, who has become amazingly popular both in the film shorts he makes and on the air, is writing in his own variety of dialogue for himself in "Broadway Melody." It's one of these important last-minute postscript roles which often highlight our movies. Eleanor Powell returns Sunday from her New York holiday and Fred Astaire has been asked to his himself west at an early date for rehearsals. I was interested in the dance they will do in their first movie together. Described as a modern ballet, it will be semi-classical and something new in our jitterbug era, when most dances are hectic and dizzy.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jackie Coogan's stepfather, Arthur Bernstein, is the new manager at the Tropics; Ronald Reagan's really big moment is Jane Wyman; Charlie Chaplin's added weight is very becoming. But he feels he must reduce, so he is down to one dessert at dinner, instead of his usual three. The Tommy Fitts-Ethel Butterworth interlude is over. He is Lady Astor's nephew, and the report was, not long ago, that they would one day wed. Martha Raye and her bridegroom, Dave Rose, forgetting any differences at the Frank Kerwin Merry-Go-Round, where Martha's brother is leading the orchestra; the Paul Munis will take the boat ride to Honolulu, returning in two weeks; the Mary Astor-Del Campo baby, expected soon, will be given many gifts at a shower Mrs. Elliot Nugent is hostessing.

Claire Windsor certainly has the Ponce de Leon secret of eternal youth. Saw her at Hollywood Park and she looks like an ingenue.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 1.—It's unfair to Elsa Maxwell, as well as Marie Dressler, to build Elsa up as another Dressler. It just can't be done. Marie won through humanity. Elsa amuses you through aggression and brashness. There's a gal who doesn't hide her light under a bushel.

HOPPER

"If I stay in pictures long enough," she says, "I'll probably have Sonja Henie for my illegimate child and Shirley Temple for my grandchild."

"Disney thought he'd discovered Snow White," she continued. "I'm Snow White, found on a very black night."

She was engaged to supervise two party scenes in "Hotel for Women." Then she went on to open the fair in San Francisco, where she bought three automobiles in one week. After she'd seen all her pals and put on some parties up there, the studio called her and said, "You begin shooting Monday."

"What do you mean, shooting?"

"Didn't you know? We rewrote the story and you're starred. It's now 'Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women.'"

I'm wondering if "The Women" being produced at Metro had anything to do with that decision.

I don't believe she realizes yet how lucky she is. Imagine getting a star part the first time you're in a picture, and signing a contract for two more at $60,000 per picture. That's not hay, even in Hollywood.

"You can't give a good party on the screen," wisecracks Elsa. "How can you have any spontaneity when your feet and face hurt?"

She received letters from 800 fat women who wanted to be her stand-in, but studio supplied one young enough to be her daughter, who weighs 100 pounds.

She used to be surprised at the salaries they paid actors. "Now," says Elsa, "I know that no matter what an actor gets, he's underpaid."

Atta girl, you'll go a long way! No wonder Hitler and Mussolini move off the front page when you get on!

The Continental Players in "William Tell" at El Capitan, deserve lots of credit. The story is naive but simply and movingly told. And it revealed some fine acting. But to me the star of the evening was Dr. Siman Mitchneck, who taught them English in less than three months.

Gene Towne had a grand trip East. But next time he's going to stay home. His little jaunt there cost him around $8,000. Costs more being a producer. If Marlene's going to do a picture with him, he doesn't know about it, yet.

Imagine any of us being able to do that with the German language. Our producers who talk so much about refugees and oppressed of Germany were conspicuous by their absence, with the exception of Walter Wanger, Ernst Libitsch and Joe Pasternak.

Manton Admits Taking Loan From Litigant

Wearing Pince Nez, Former U. S. Judge Denies Bribe Charges

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—Martin T. Manton, who resigned as tenth ranking member of the American judiciary, categorically denied today, point by point, prosecution testimony that had pictured him as the repeated recipient of bribes to influence his decisions on the United States Circuit Court bench.

White-haired and ruggedly severe in expression, he peered down through his pince nez from the witness stand in his trial for conspiracy and answered with a series of curt negatives, "No!" . . . "Certainly I did not!"—the questions of his counsel as to whether he had acted improperly.

He sharply repudiated his major co-defendant, William J. Fallon, whom the Government described as the intermediary for bribes, and repeated again and again that he had decided cases with "conscientious judgment."

Admits Getting Loan

His major acknowledgment on direct examination was that he had obtained $25,000 in loans from a now defunct Brooklyn bank through another of his co-defendants, John L. Lotsch, but this money, he said, was repaid and the transactions had no connection with Circuit Court litigation in which Lotsch was interested.

Both Lotsch and Fallon have turned on Manton and testified for the Government.

The elderly defendant, who resigned as senior judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals here amid a broadening inquiry into his official conduct, spoke at first clearly, but later in a voice so low and throaty that he frequently was admonished to speak up.

The first case mentioned was one involving the Evans Case Co. of North Attleboro, Mass., which won a patent case in Manton's court. The Government had offered testimony that Fallon, acting as Manton's agent, had accepted $25,000 from Alfred Reilly, president of that company, and from the company itself.

Denies Being Influenced

"Did you ever ask Fallon to borrow any money from Reilly in your name?" he was asked.

"I did not."

"Did you know at any time that Fallon was in communication with Reilly in respect to the (patent) case?"

"I did not. I knew nothing about Reilly in the case."

"Did Fallon ever attempt to influence you in connection with the decision in the case?"

"He certainly did not."

Next, counsel took up testimony by Lotsch that after his indictment for bribery in 1936 Manton had demanded—and received—$10,000 with the statement that it would be given to former Federal District Judge Edwin Thomas, of Connecticut, to "take care" of the case.

Indictment Was Dismissed

Lotsch had said, too, that Manton assigned Thomas as a visiting judge to the hearing and that Thomas subsequently dismissed the indictment.

Asked whether he had told Lotsch he wanted $10,000 to "fix" his case with Thomas he responded.

"Of course I did not."

Such direct negatives he varied with the repeated statement that he had made decisions on "law, the dictates of my own conscience and the merits of the case."

mutual assistance pledge in such plain and simple language that there can be no doubt that in the case of aggression by Germany or Italy against any state bordering Russia on the west, France and England immediately will give full military assistance.

Only then will Russia promise her full military aid to the western powers and their eastern guarantees.

Baltic Is Problem

London, June 1 (AP).—Three Baltic states were said by diplomats today to hold the key to British-French-Russian negotiations for a mutual assistance pact as the result of conditions laid down by Soviet Premier-Foreign Minister Molotoff.

His insistance in a speech yesterday that these states—Finland, Estonia and Latvia—be given specific guarantees against aggression was described by a high British official as presenting a "difficult problem."

Britain was represented as willing to give such guarantees, as she has to other Russian neighbors—Rumania and Poland—but the Baltic nations have indicated they want no direct ties with any bloc of powers.

British official sources said hopes of an eventual agreement with Soviet Russia were undiminished and took the view that Russian objections were to the form rather than to the content of the proposals.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax returned from his Whitsuntide holiday and began studying Molotoff's speech.

He received the Polish ambassador, Count Edward Raczynski, for a short talk. The Rumanian minister, Viorel Tilea, also called at the foreign office.

Diplomats Uncertain

Moscow, June 1 (AP).—Foreign diplomats today attempted to estimate the effect on the European situation of Premier-Foreign Minister Molotoff's rejection of British-French proposals for a mutual assistance pact.

The British Ambassador, Sir William Seeds, called on the vice commissar for foreign affairs, Vladimir Potemkin, but it was said his visit was "unrelated to the British-French proposals."

Russia's formal reply has not been delivered yet although Molotoff informally turned down the proposals yesterday in his speech to the Supreme Soviet, Russian Parliment.

A deep impression was created among diplomats by the fact that neither the British nor French Ambassador was present to hear Molotoff speak.

Georgetown U. Hears Murphy, Parran, Dandy

Lawyers, Physicians Warned Against 'Status Quo Philosophy'

Law and medicine shared honors in yesterday's portion of the sesquicentennial celebration at Georgetown University, with Attorney General Frank Murphy and Drs. Thomas Parran and Walter E. Dandy as speakers.

While this country has more good lawyers than ever before, the profession is losing caste because of over-specialization, pursuit of big fees and "the slurring of spiritual and cultural values," Murphy said.

Surgeon General Parran, of the U. S. Public Health Service, similarly was critical of his profession, though his complaints were chiefly inferential. He urged wider use of Federal funds to fight disease, a policy which many physicians in private practice construe as an insinuation they are incapable of handling the Nation's health problems.

Discusses Meniere's Disease

Dr. Dandy, internationally famous brain surgeon of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, trod less controversial ground. He discussed Meniere's disease, in which the victim suffers spells of severe dizziness and partial loss of hearing.

In the last 12 years 319 operations have been performed in Johns Hopkins Hospital for Meniere's disease without a single death, said Dr. Dandy. It is cured by making a small incision behind the ear and cutting the vestibular nerve. Martin Luther and Jonathan Swift were victims of the disease, Dr. Dandy said.

Attorney General Murphy, whose address was broadcast on a network, quoted Associated Justice Harlan Fiske Stone as follows:

"The successful lawyer of our day more often than not is the proprietor or general manager of a new type of factory, whose legal product is increasingly the result of mass production methods. More and more the amount of his income is the measure of professional success.

"More and more he must look for his rewards to the material satisfactions derived from profits as from a successfully conducted business, rather than to the intangible and more durable satisfactions which are to be found in a professional service more consciously directed toward the advancement of the public interest."

The legal profession, said Murphy, must not spend time defending the status quo but turn its energies to social reforms. He dipped briefly into the controversial question touched on by Surgeon General Parran, in his address across town at the medical school, when he said:

"It (society) needs men who can reconcile the views of those who believe that government must take action to protect the health of the underprivileged and those who fear for the rights of the medical profession."

Broader Outlook Needed

"Lawyers," he said, "need, very urgently, to encourage among themselves a more careful, more sympathetic, and more earnest familiarity with the world around them. They do need to take care that their study of social events and human problems does not end with their college days."

Discarding of the status quo philosophy likewise was advocated by Dr. Parran, who reminded that one-fourth of all illness in this country is in families on relief and a like percentage in families with total incomes of $1,000 or less per year.

"Many of our finest physicians have given little or no attention to the broad problems of disease prevalence and the proven public health methods of dealing with them," he said. "It is equally true that many of our ablest public health administrators have lost touch with the personal problems and the clinical viewpoint of the private practitioner."

The development of sulfanilamide as a milestone in the history of medicine was described by Dr. John Kolmer, of Temple University, who hailed the drug's accomplishments and predicted that within two or three years even tuberculosis will yield to chemotherapy.

Main event on the sesquicentennial program last night was the ball at the Willard Hotel, arranged by a committee of which John T. Flynn was chairman.

On the calendar for today are addresses at the School of Foreign Service by Edgar Prochnik, former Minister from Austria, and James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council; resumption of the post-graduate session at the medical school and presentation of the pageant, "Sons of Georgetown," in Central High School auditorium at 8:15 p. m.

'Cop on the Beat' a Volunteer Safety Tutor

Known by every child in the neighborhood of the John Quincy Adams School, Nineteenth and California streets northwest, is Policeman Charles R. McArthur—the "cop on the beat," but much more than just that to them! Policeman McArthur has become the safety tutor for the neighborhood and sees to it that the youngsters cross streets with a thought to safety. He is shown above, surrounded by ardent listeners, as he gives a "how to cross the street" lecture on the school corner. You can bet they'll obey.

"Mac" McArthur, the one-man traffic school of the Thirteenth Precinct, wore a worried frown yesterday.

"Mac," who on the police roster is Private C. R. McArthur, usually smiles as he watches children of the John Quincy Adams School cross the street properly under his guidance.

Yesterday, however, he heard that one of his pupils had been injured in a traffic accident the previous evening.

The child, William Chalk, 6, of 2441 Eighteenth street northwest, was in Emergency Hospital in "fairly good" condition, following a skin-grafting operation.

"The poor little fellow," McArthur said. "He was so willing to learn, and tried so hard to cross the streets properly. It's a shame it had to happen, but since the other children heard about it they seem to be trying even harder than usual to cross safely."

McArthur fostered the idea of his "school" and put it into operation with no outside help except the cooperation of school authorities and the children.

He has devised a novel plan, with the help of taxicab drivers who frequent the hack stand at Nineteenth and California streets northwest. The cabbies provide sample traffic conditions and children are taught to observe fundamental safety rules.

Yesterday a group of first-grade children practiced at the cab stand. They then went to Eighteenth and California streets, where they were taught how to cross a street in which there is a safety zone.

The teachers have all given the plan their approval, and Miss Anna Keppel, first-grade teacher, said: "I think it's a wonderful idea. I've never seen an officer so patient with children, and so worried about their safety."

Lieut. Charles Weber, McArthur's superior officer, said, "He thought up the idea himself, and we're all in favor of it. He's doing fine work."

Townsend Plan Killed by House

mum $40 payment on a matching basis), was postponed until today.

After making the motion, Dingell announced he was considering further liberalizations in his plan, and asked that the vote be taken today. One proposal being studied would require the Federal Government to put up an increased percentage of the State's present share of old-age assistance cost.

House Republicans, whom leaders sought to "put on the spot" by yesterday's Townsend plan vote, cast 55 ballots for the plan on the roll call count, against 40 Democratic votes for the bill. One vote each from a Progressive and a Farmer-Laborite, brought the plan's total strength to 97.

Voting "No" were 107 Republicans, 194 Democrats and 1 American Laborite. House Whip Pat Boland had placed the plan's maximum House strength at 125, but was sustained in his prophecy the Democratic vote would not run above 50. The vote cast for the bill was 34 less than the 131 House members who had Townsend support in the last campaign. The bill polled little more than half of 93 Republicans regarded as pledged for the plan, but picked up two more than the 38 total of Townsend-supported Democrats.

Equally unsuccessful was an effort by Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, to recommit the bill with instructions to bring out a measure that would provide "just and equitable pensions" for the aged on a "pay as you go basis."

A streamlined edition of the original Townsend plan, the measure before the House yesterday had been revised at the last minute by the California country doctor. Instead of the original 2 per cent pyramided transaction tax, it proposed a gross income tax ranging from one-half of 1 per cent to 2 per cent. The $4,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 it was estimated to yield would pay a claimed pension of only $50, as against the $200 originally promised by Townsend, to all persons over 60. Beneficiaries would be required to spend every cent of the pension each month.

As the final vote was announced, Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee beamed his satisfaction.

"Dr. Townsend wanted a vote and we gave it to him," he said. "I don't see how he can go out any longer and get money from the old folks on the promise of getting them pensions."

In a last-minute assault, preceding the vote, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, called the bill "a damnable piece of legislation that would wreck the Nation's economy," and declared it would not receive a single vote if the count was by secret ballot. The transactions tax he called "the most vicious supersales tax ever proposed in Congress."

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, brought Townsendites to their feet when he charged the Townsend organization did not expect the bill to pass, wanted time to draft a "proper bill," and preferred the constitutional amendment route. He said a Townsend leader told him this.

Romney Discovers No Dictograph

lice was challenged by Bates, told Speaker Bankhead that a local newspaperman had told him the sub-committee had placed a dictograph in its own room. The newspaperman admitted, Romney said, that he had seen neither the dictograph nor a transcript of any conversation taken down by the police.

A member of the District Committee, Romney testified, also said that the room had been wired, although he had seen neither the wire nor the transcript.

There the matter stood last night, and while there was talk of subpenaing newspapermen and the sergeant at arms, it appeared more likely that the case would fall of its own weight.

The quashing of the Capitol dictograph investigation, however, did not allay the fears of many of the more timorous members of the Congress. In the cloakrooms and in the lobbies they talked about the matter, pro and con, but were unanimous in the opinion that they would dislike to have some of their own private conversations recorded.

Meanwhile, Bates, who alone has appeared unruffled by the efforts of the Capitol police to investigate his sub-committee and the Metropolitan police, prepared to resume hearings on the almost-forgotten milk situation today.

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, earlier in the day was given a vote of confidence by his colleagues. With 14 of 21 members present, the committee adopted a resolution unanimously asking that he remain as Washington's "mayor."

The resolution was proposed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, oldest member of the committee in point of service. Kennedy had declined the chairmanship at the opening of session to retain the chief post on the Claims Committee.

"In my opinion," said Kennedy, "no man has worked harder or fairer for the District of Columbia than Mr. Randolph. I know nothing about the rumors which have been floating around, but I do think it is to the interest of members of Congress as well as the District that the resolution of confidence be adopted."

Civic representatives on the front row of the visitors' gallery applauded loudly.

Representative Dirksen, of Illinois, ranking minority leader, chimed in with the remark that he had "never doubted" the chairman's integrity.

The committee members smiled sheepishly when Representative Selcombe (Republican), of Ohio, remarked:

"I wonder if it's safe to say anything around here without a dictograph being placed around to pick it up."

He then mumbled something to the effect that the House sergeant at arms should be reprimanded for placing dictaphones in the offices of the chairman.

Chairman Randolph, after the resolution had been adopted, thanked his colleagues.

"I deeply and sincerely appreciate the action of the committee," he said.

Priest Of Democracy

There were reasons why throughout the Nation, the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of the birth of Walt Whitman last Wednesday should have been celebrated with an especial piety. At the New York World's Fair was unveiled the statue by Jo Davidson, which, when the fair is ended, is to stand in the Palisades above the Appalachian trail. Here in Washington a collection of intimate Whitmaniana owned by Mrs. Frank J. Sprague has been placed on exhibition at the Library of Congress.

In all these observances there was an expression of implicit recognition of Whitman as the true priest of democracy. For him democracy was no mere bundle of political abstractions, no mere process of historic evolution, but a profound orientation of the spirit.

He lived and wrote in a day when democratic ideas were both intellectually and politically in the ascendant. Today, nearly a century later, political democracy finds itself wholly upon the defensive, restricted to a steadily narrowing area of the globe, and threatened even there from both without and within. Under the stress of world-wide woes its external weaknesses have become apparent. There are many who now say of democracy, what has been so often said of Christianity, that it already has lived beyond its little historic day.

Thus it becomes more and more apparent that if democracy is to survive the modern clash of doctrine it must be for much the same reasons that have permitted Christianity and other religions to survive so many vicissitudes of history. That is to say, democracy will survive not because of the superior efficiency of its processes in coping with the external problems of modern society, but because of the superior claims of the democratic ethos upon the human heart.

Such was the democracy that Whitman preached. With him it was no coldly formulated system of government but a robust expression of a fundamental instinct, a way of life.

Cheap Travel By Rail

Since the spring of 1936 the Eastern railroads have tested the effect upon their net revenues of both a drastic reduction in passenger coach fares and a subsequent increase. Now they are preparing to experiment again, with a lower schedule of coach charges based on a sliding scale of mileage rates designed to encourage long-distance travel.

In 1936, reductions were ordered by the ICC in face of strong protests from those who doubted that lower rates would attract enough new business to compensate. Moreover, the roads challenged the authority of the ICC to issue orders in face of their objections, maintaining that such action constituted usurpation of managerial functions.

Although a pronounced increase in the volume of passenger traffic followed the 1936 reductions, the carriers were inclined to attribute the pickup to improvement in general business. They believed that, with the former higher fares in force, the increase in net revenues would have been even larger. In July, 1938, therefore, the ICC finally permitted the 2-cent mileage rate to be raised to 2½ cents. Though still skeptical of the wisdom of the advance, the commission decided that the steady deterioration in the financial condition of the railways justified experimentation with any rational plan to increase revenues. At the same time it stipulated that there should be reconsideration after 18 months' test of the new rates.

After less than a year of this regulation the Eastern carriers have come to the conclusion that the ICC method, of attracting business by selling transportation at lower prices, is the better way. So many factors affect the volume of passenger travel by rail that it is not possible to gauge the effect of rate increases or decreases upon net earnings with any approach to accuracy. Nevertheless, there has been sufficient experimentation with fare reductions, in all sections of the country, to demonstrate conclusively that a very considerable amount of traffic can be attracted to the rails by such lower fares.

Obviously an increased volume of traffic is not in itself justification for cutting passenger rates. If charges were sufficiently low the roads would doubtless have a large proportion of the population traveling gaily, and more or less aimlessly, to and fro in their leisure hours. That was the case in parts of Europe, during the post-war era of inflation, when wages and salaries soared while regulated passenger rates lagged far behind. Needless to say, losses mount under such conditions as the number of passengers rises.

So long as the roads have unutilized equipment at their disposal, however, the cost of carrying additional passengers amounts to very little. Moreover, the cost of upkeep is not greatly increased by running more trains and full trains. Hence, within limits, operating costs per person carried do not increase nearly so fast as revenues from increased traffic. Under existing conditions it should pay the roads to reduce prices, for the sake of gaining more business and utilizing productive equipment more fully.

Noncommittal Russia

Those who believe that Russian foreign policy is following somewhat devious lines will have their opinion strengthened by Premier Molotoff's speech before the Supreme Soviet on Tuesday. It goes far to confirm the indications that Russia seeks no part in any alliance against Germany, and will find one excuse after another to keep clear of the anti-aggression bloc which has been constructed under Anglo-French leadership.

Negotiations looking toward the conclusion of such a bloc have been going on for nearly two months. Immediate success was not to be expected. Russia, having been so pointedly snubbed by the British and French at Munich, was scarcely likely to regard the present overtures of these countries with enthusiasm. Moreover it has been apparent throughout that Moscow would expect a high price in return for pledging support to the Anglo-French alliance. The turn of the wheel in Europe has brought the Soviet to a position where it can demand shrewd bargains.

So it is not surprising that the Anglo-Russian negotiations have been slow. Nevertheless some progress, assuming that Russia's much-advertised hostility to aggression is sincere, should have been achieved by this time. And such expectations are the more in order because the British, as Premier Molotoff admits, have met point after point in the Russian demands. In his own words, "the principle of mutual assistance between Great Britain, France and the U. S. S. R., on the basis of reciprocity in the event of direct attack by aggressors, is now recognized."

Every British concession, however, has so far been nullified by new and increasingly captious Russian objections. The present complaint is that while Great Britain and France have pledged themselves to come to the aid of Poland, Rumania and Turkey, if these neighbors of Russia are victims of aggression, nothing has been said about assistance to Estonia, Latvia and Finland. Russia, said Mr. Molotoff on Wednesday, cannot assume any obligations "unless it receives a guarantee in regard to the three countries situated on its northwestern frontier."

Having already made wholesale commitments in eastern Europe, there is no reason to suppose that the British government would object to pledging its support to Estonia, Latvia and Finland as well. But the joker in the Russian argument is that none of these Baltic nations wants an Anglo-French guarantee. Latvia and Estonia are at the moment concluding non-aggression pacts with Germany and can scarcely be expected to follow this action by asking for British support against Germany. Finland is also at present more friendly to Germany than to Russia. So Mr. Molotoff is coming close to demanding the impossible as the price of an Anglo-Russian agreement. If the idea were to prevent formation of an effective anti-aggression bloc, while making it seem that others are responsible for that result, these would be shrewd tactics.

There are many indications that precisely this is, in reality, the Russian line of procedure. While the Communists are loud in their denunciation of the Nazis, and vice versa, there is a strong community of interest between these very similar dictatorships. And this ideological relationship is now beginning to find political expression.

In his famous speech of March 10, Stalin denounced those who seek "to raise the ire of the Soviet Union against Germany, to poison the atmosphere and to provoke a conflict with Germany without any visible grounds for it." On Wednesday Molotoff followed this pacific gesture toward the Reich by hinting at resumption of negotiations for a new trade treaty, along the lines of that recently concluded with Italy, between Russia and Germany.

There is much lip service against aggression in Premier Molotoff's speech. There is also tacit admission, in the references to Russia's protectorate over her puppet republic of Mongolia, that the Communists, when it suits them, can be as aggressive as anybody else. Indeed the normal line of wholly selfish national self-interest permeates this notable expression of the current foreign policy of the Soviet Union.

The only factor which makes the speech confusing is Mr. Molotoff's evident uncertainty as to whether Russia can as yet afford to consider Germany as a friendly country. And it is quite possible, as the man who is both premier and foreign minister suggests, that by leaving this an open question, to be decided by Hitler's future course, the U. S. S. R. is operating "as a powerful factor of peace."

The Neutrality Muddle

The philosophy behind the successive neutrality laws placed on the statute books during the past four years is that Congress, in its collective wisdom, is better able to safeguard the Nation against involvement in war than is the Administration.

Under the Constitution, the President is given authority to conduct the foreign relations of the United States "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." Neutrality legislation seeks to freeze that advice, not merely of the Senate but of Congress as a whole, into mandatory provisions operative under certain anticipated contingencies.

During the past few months Congress has had a new opportunity to reconsider this very dubious procedure. The neutrality act of 1937 is, through the expiration on May 1 of the cash-and-carry clause, obviously incomplete. Nobody can seriously believe that the law as it stands is much of a safeguard for neutrality. Yet there is little indication that Congress has any clear idea of the kind of neutrality legislation it wants to replace, or to supplement, the truncated law now on the statute books.

For many weeks the House Foreign Affairs and the Senate Foreign Relations committees have held hearings on the subject. Dozens of witnesses expressed their views. A number of bills were introduced. But with the hearings ended Congress does not appear much nearer a satisfactory decision than it was at the outset.

In something approaching despair, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has now asked Secretary Hull to draw up a neutrality bill which would, at least, provide Congress with a basis of discussion. Secretary Hull may refuse to do so and there would be very sound reasons for such refusal. The drafting of bills should be, even though it has not always been, a legislative function. Until the other day the President and the Department of State kept strictly aloof from the discussion of the kind of neutrality legislation, if any, which should be enacted.

They have been criticized for refusing to provide the necessary leadership. But their aloofness has had the salutary effect of demonstrating the confusion of Congress as to what ought to be done.

The other day, however, Secretary Hull did make known his views. He offered a sensible six-point program for the consideration of Congress. If his advice is taken, American ships, irrespective of what they are carrying, would be prohibited from entering combat areas and American citizens would be restricted from traveling in those areas. The export of goods destined for belligerents would be preceded by transfer of title to the foreign purchaser and existing legislation respecting loans and credits to nations at war would be continued. There would also be, as there is now, regulation of the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerent agencies. And the National Munitions Control Board, with its system of export licenses, would be continued.

Secretary Hull does not claim that these provisions, if enacted, would guarantee the United States against involvement in war. But they would tend to do so, without offering the tacit encouragement to aggression which is the chief defect of the present law.

Congress could certainly look much further and fare far worse than to legislate this six-point program. Leaderless in matters of neutrality legislation, it has now been offered a constructive lead. Confused, it has at hand a way out of the confusion.

Social Security Next

The decisive rejection of the Townsend old-age pension bill by the House is highly gratifying. And with this economic monstrosity sidetracked indefinitely, the House is better prepared to discuss proposed amendments to the social security act.

Some of the changes which the Ways and Means Committee is expected to recommend are undoubtedly justified. But many of the proposals for liberalizing benefits, and for extending them to cover the wives and dependents of insured workers, are more than dubious.

There are excellent arguments in favor of putting the contributory old-age pension system on a pay-as-you-go basis for insured workers. But that does not warrant dissipating reserves, built up from employer and employe contributions, by making lavish grants to noncontributors. By such means, the distinction between insurance and relief would soon be wholly obliterated. And the sound principle of relating benefits to earnings would also be sacrificed.

The proposed liberalization of the social security act is said to be necessary to prevent the ultimate triumph of Townsendism. The wisdom of fighting fire with fire is in this case subject to question. Congress cannot afford to be stampeded into hurried and uncritical acceptance of amendments that might saddle impossibly heavy burdens, both on management and on workers, for purposes not contemplated when the original act was passed.

Washington Should Lead

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you for your well-balanced editorial on "Moral Rearmament" in the issue of May 15, 1939, and for your editorial of May 20, 1939, restating the need for the Congress to give more consideration to my report upon public relief agencies in the District of Columbia.

The difficulty of making what we believed was an unbiased report upon the facts of the relief situation was great enough, but the problems connected with getting unprejudiced consideration of both the facts and the recommendations for a time seemed almost insurmountable.

But when the text of the President's Reorganization Order No. 1 showed that our Chart B, page 18, of volume 1, and the other volumes of my report had anticipated the President's order, there seemed to be no logical reason for postponing the beginning of reorganization and consolidation of the District public relief agencies along the lines of my work. That would set a task of implementing the legal and administrative machinery which would probably take several years to accomplish.

There is, however, none too much time within which to begin to achieve mastery over the selfishness and greed which hinder our lives and disgrace our democracy and social institutions with flagrant problems of economic and social dislocation. The Nation's Capital should take the lead in finding for the guidance of our country an American solution even as Sweden has found her solution of unemployment.

BURDETTE G. LEWIS.
Director of Investigation of Public Relief Agencies of the District of Columbia.

Defensive

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial "Gambling On a Hunch" is fine.

The address to the American Retail Federation sounded as from one crowded against the ropes. It was recklessly and futilely defensive.

To accuse others of your mistakes, shortcomings and failures doesn't lessen them at all. Statements, that just won't hold water, no longer impress people. F. E. RICHARDS.

Why?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Our national debt, after all, is an internal debt, owed not only by the Nation but to the Nation. If our children have to pay interest on it they will pay that interest to themselves. A reasonable internal debt will not impoverish our children."

Above quotation was made by President Roosevelt in a speech made to the Retail Dealers Association.

Why would a President of the U. S. A. make such a statement? Was it to influence those between the ages of 20 and 30 to vote for him should he run again in 1940?

Goodwill Industries

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not long ago I had the opportunity to visit, with the Professional Writers Club, one of the most humanitarian and constructive social service institutions in Washington—The Goodwill Industries—at 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest. It is one industry which specializes in hiring what our society calls "unemployables." Because of age, some physical deformity, or blindness, private industry does not wish to bother with such persons. At the Goodwill Industries, however, these people find a place for themselves. They do a thoroughly worth-while job and really earn every dollar they get.

The Goodwill Industries is not supported by the Community Chest, but tries to be self-supporting. It functions by gathering waste and discarded materials from the homes of the community in Goodwill bags provided for that purpose. Employment is provided in sorting, renovating, reconditioning and salvaging this material. The finished products are then sold through Goodwill Industries Stores, located in needy sections of the community.

Thus this worthy institution not only helps the unemployables but also enables many individuals to buy their absolute necessities of life at a price within their small means.

Spending Program

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Roosevelt's lending-spending program has become a daily issue, and always the President is blamed.

I know of no authority, Constitutional or otherwise, where a President of the United States can appropriate a single dollar. That is a function of the Congress. Congressmen, even Republican Congressmen, condemn the President for spending the very money which they appropriate for public use.

If consistency means anything in the fair and honest criticism of public men, then let some of this everyday talk about spending by the Administration be shifted where it rightfully belongs—to Capitol Hill.

And, incidentally, I believe I am among the millions who would rather have a constructive substitute for what is being done instead of so much condemnation without a single suggestion how the country could otherwise tide over the present situation. C. B. R.
Washington, May 29.

Consistency

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Shakespeare regarded consistency as a jewel and it is regrettable that this mental gem has been rejected by Franklin Roosevelt and certain advisers, who constantly alter their policies to suit their ever changing moods. However, when a political platform is built on well-tested foundations and then suddenly "junked" for no good reason, those Democrats who happen to possess a measure of consistency in their mental make-up will rebel.

When Mr. Roosevelt reminded the people that loose, fiscal policies breed disaster and that taxes are paid by the workers' brow-sweat, he voiced a great truth. Today, for inscrutable reasons, the Chief Executive abandons his former conservative position, and rushes to opposite extremes. As a result, well-balanced men and women are disillusioned and bewildered, as well as disgusted, with the inconsistency of political leaders.

It is generally conceded that should the President attempt to run for a third term he will hardly receive the support of conservative Democrats that accepted his word when he solemnly pledged it to do all in his power to reduce deficits and stem waste. Jeffersonian Democrats still adhere to the principle that we should practice what we preach.

Credit For WPA Workers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is written to bring out some facts about store credit to underpaid Government employes. Here are given findings of our store and many others in Washington. The writer is a credit investigator.

Our chief difficulty is in extending credit to those people in the Government departments who draw their salaries through the emergency relief-work funds. Our store is less than one year old and is owned by a kind-hearted family, who would go a long way to assist those temporary workers on the WPA projects, but very few hold jobs very long and their pay is in the lowest bracket. This makes extension of credit for most WPA workers impossible.

On some of the Works Progress units or divisions, a great number have been connected there for over three years. In this, reference is made to the units of WPA Federal theater projects, which have the arts, writers, historical writings, etc. Besides earning more, these employes have other income, usually from $3 to $12 each week, and they have been more fortunate in securing credit at this store and others for that reason. An Englishman For Roosevelt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am sending you a copy of The Sunday Times, published in London, for May 14, and particularly beg to draw your attention to passages which reflect on the present American Administration. These passages I claim present a prejudiced point of view and give an unfair picture.

Previous articles in The Sunday Times have been equally unfair to President Roosevelt, so also, to my mind, have been the broadcast talks of R. G. Swing. I argue that there is in both cases a total disregard of the wretched condition of the country when President Roosevelt took office.

The attitude taken up by the previous Administration has, also, not helped the general situation in Europe. Germany, thanks to the influence of President Hoover, granted a moratorium, has been able to rearm and disturb the peace; on the other hand, those nations who are in the opposite camp to Germany, bound by the Kellogg Pact not to regard war as in the national curriculum, have weakened their resources of resistance.

I was in Detroit for four years and heard many people speak in the highest terms of Mr. Herbert Hoover, of his honesty, humanity and industry. I have met people in England who knew of him in Australia and London and heard them speak in terms of awe of his ability as a mining engineer.

In mapping and carrying out the development of mines he was very successful. Unfortunately a nation is not solid and set like a mine; it is more like a fluid, and often quickly affected by outside conditions far and near.

The memoirs of Mr. Ike Hoover, the White House usher, give, I imagine, a fair idea of Mr. Herbert Hoover's limitation of power for achievement in the office of President.

President Roosevelt plans far, far ahead, and he deserves support and constructive criticism such as Republicans like Mr. Landon and Mr. Stimson have given. If he gets it in full measure he will triumph, once again, more easily, and the American Nation flourish.

All lovers of the country should pray that criticisms, such as those of which I have forwarded you examples, will cease; and instead that there will be more contributions toward peace like your famous, convincing and well timed recently published editorial. JOHN PITCHER.

The Post Impressionist

Royal Progress

COL. Basil Merriwether Jones, having returned from visiting the two fairs, was greeted by our little group with real joy and enthusiasm. The colonel responded politely, but a little as though his thoughts were elsewhere.

We made tentative efforts to draw him out concerning the relative merits of San Francisco and New York in staging world shows; and we had no more luck than in pumping an Old World diplomat about foreign affairs. All we learned was that there are excellent restaurants in both places and that the native wines of California and of New York State are equally excellent.

"What I mean," he said, "is that when it comes to wines of the white or sauterne type this country is able to supply the world with as good a product as any mere man is entitled to consume. I'm no judge of red wines, for the doctor has forbidden them; and champagne I detest. When you speak of port or sherry I still prefer those from abroad."

"But, Colonel, surely, even though you refuse to enlighten us concerning the fairs, you must have some impressions of the scenery and climate of California," said Dr. Birdsong.

"As far as I am concerned, Doctor, the less said about the scenery the better; and, as for the climate, it is a delusion and a snare. My daughter, Maybelle, engineered this trip, and I was hauled hither and yon to view the confounded scenery, when all I wanted was to stay in the hotel and lie in bed. We didn't have any earthquakes or railway washouts; to that extent the climate was unusual; but I'm fed up on snow-capped mountains and big trees. Yes, sir; and I was so worn out with traveling and with being yanked about in buses and autos that I had to go to a nursing-home when I returned in order to rest up a bit."

That put a quietus on us. The colonel didn't want to talk about the fairs, or the scenery, or the marvelously advertised climate of California. So the conversation drifted off, and presently touched on the visit of the King and Queen in Canada. That set the colonel going again. He wasn't ready to talk about his own trip, but he held forth at length concerning the journey of Their Royal Highnesses.

"It's a sin and a shame the way those Canadians are hustling those two young people about. It's lucky for them that they still are young; but even youth must have some time to rest and recuperate, or else it breaks down.

"Just let me read you their program in Toronto. Here it is:" And the colonel took a clipping from his pocketbook.

"Remember, these young people had shown themselves at various functions at Quebec, at Montreal and at Ottawa; one or the other had to make an address or shake hands, or lay a cornerstone, or review a body of crack troops, and both had to eat a formal dinner, everywhere they went. And at each separate function they appeared in the dress appropriate to the occasion. By George, it was enough to kill a horse. And when they reached Toronto this was the simple, restful program for them:

9:30 a. m.—Arrival at North Toronto Station.

10—Reception at city hall.

10:40—Reception at legislative building.

11 (approximate)—Visit of Dionne quintuplets.

11:30—Presentation of colors by Queen to Toronto Scottish Regiment.

12, noon—Government luncheon at Hart House.

2:30 p. m.—Appearance at Woodbine Park for running of King's Plate.

3—Tea as guests of Lieut. Gov. Albert Matthews and Mrs. Matthews.

4:15—Visit to Christie St. Military Hospital.

6 p. m.—Departure from Union Station.

"Why, sirs, if that program had been laid out for me, I would have been laid out, and the last item would have read: 6 p. m.—Departure from the undertaker's!

"Now, I'm absolutely impartial as to Kings, Queens, and rulers in general; I neither grovel before them, or run away from them, but I do insist that as human beings and fellow animals they are entitled to catch their breath once in a while and to a little decent rest. I think I shall write to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"And, the more's the pity, we of the United States are all set to give them more punishment when they come here. God and the British Embassy only know what they are to suffer here; I don't."

"But, Colonel, someone told me you have received a bid to the garden party at the embassy. Is that so?"

"Unfortunately, Maybelle and I shall be there; but I will stay only a short while." WADE TENCH.

The Nazi Menace

THE THREAT of the Nazi government to take an unpleasant interest in the domestic affairs of the United States is now being fulfilled by German organizations and a following of native adherents and "fellow travelers." Some of these Americans profess to be intently patriotic, but they are Nazis, nevertheless, who hope to make a dictatorship similar to Hitler's, which is only superficially different from Josef Stalin's.

The method by which world nazidom operates is similar to that of the communist penetration. World nazidom sends agents into the United States to take citizenship in the country and organize anti-American cells, and emotional Americans either join these societies or enlist in disguised subsidiaries, some of them as dupes. The Nazis learned this from the communists. They adopted bolshevism themselves, calling it nazism, to fight Russian bolshevism, and the program which is being promoted now in this country in the apparel of star-spangled patriotism is the German, or brown, type of bolshevism. Thus some Americans who believe themselves to be patriotic are supporting a movement which would destroy freedom in their own country and place every city block of every American city and hamlet under a gang leader.

Golden Rule Not Practiced By Nazis

AMERICANS who have joined or flirted with organizations of the Nazi pattern forget that the Nazi government has been convicted of spying on the military strength of the United States through individuals who pretend to be friends. They forget also that the Nazi government unwisely gave warning a few years ago that it would interfere with the internal peace of this country. That warning was published in a German newspaper as an official announcement of the Nazi government, and the activity of various disruptive groups which admire Hitlerism may be identified as the performance.

Americans generally overlook the fact that any group of Americans in Germany who undertook to hold public meetings in favor of democracy and to revile Hitler, as anti-American agents of the world Nazi movement have reviled American public officials, would be beaten within an inch of their lives, thrown into prisons and, if they carried weapons, shot as armed invaders of the Reich. The Nazis do not permit anyone, native or foreign, to offer to save the German people from Hitler and restore their rights as human beings, but it seems futile to attempt to limit Hitler's anti-American workers to the same extent in this country. Nazified native Americans would immediately take up the cry, and they would have the same right to advocate German bolshevism as the native Communists have to preach and conspire in favor of Stalin's brand.

Uses Same Methods Laid To World Jewry

ANTI-SEMITISM is the opening argument of American nazism, but it needs to be pointed out that the so-called world Jewry, from which it would save the United States, is still, after years of propaganda, a vague and unproved phantom, whereas there is no doubt of the substantial existence of world nazidom nor any doubt that it uses the very methods which it attributes to world Jewry.

It has invaded South American nations by the very same process of infiltration, colonization and conspiracy which the Nazis attribute to their favorite enemy. It holds a great pep meeting every year in Germany, at which agents from far corners of the world, including, of course, the United States, receive honors for their treachery and boast of progress in the work of betrayal in lands where they pretend to be honest friends of the native population. The Nazis simply adopted for their own world conspiracy the whole book of sinful and treacherous offenses which they had attributed to world Jewry and put them to use for world nazidom.

Whenever an anti-American speaker or organizer with an admiration for Hitler's bolshevism undertakes to enlist Americans against the furtive, unseen enemy, one question may be asked him which will stop his clock.

It is this: "In view of Hitler's oft-declared hatred of the mongrel American people, why do his agents try to save them from a fate which is worse than death?"

Eight Trustees Re-elected at G. W. University

Eight trustees were re-elected to the boar of George Washington University at a meeting held there yesterday.

Renamed to serve three-year terms were George E. Fleming, vice president and assistant trust officer of the Union Trust Co.; Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, former president of the District board of commissioners; Dr. Harry C. Davis, Washington; Charles W. Gerstenberg, chairman of the board, Prentice-Hall, New York City; Col. Ulysses S. Grant 3d; Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of National Geographic Society; Alfred M. Lawson, vice president of Wash-Loan & Trust Co.; Theodore W. Noyes, of the Washington Evening Star.

The board re-elected the following officers: Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, chairman; Arthur Peter, District attorney, vice chairman; Dr. Davis, secretary.

Two new university offices were created, assistant comptroller, to be filled by Henry W. Hartog, and business manager, by Charles E. Merry.

Winant's First Report

By Bertram Pickard

The I. L. O.'s Director Takes Stock

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE FIRST report presented by John G. Winant, the new Director of the International Labor Office, to the International Labor Conference which opens in Geneva on June 8, is something of an event. The interest will not be least in Washington, for obvious reasons.

Note well that Mr. Winant is not Secretary-General of the I. L. O.; he has the title of Director. There is, in any case, a considerable difference between the respective implications of the words Secretary and Director. But that difference has been particularly obvious in the case of the League and I. L. O. For, whereas M. Joseph Avenol followed in the footsteps of Sir Eric Drummond in minimising such policy-making functions as the Secretary-Generalship of the League might have had, Mr. Harold Butler persisted in the tradition firmly established by Albert Thomas at the I. L. O.—namely, of insisting that the function of a Director is to direct!

Those who have met John G. Winant will read the report with their eye not only on what is said but also on the manner of the saying. The personality of the new Director is obviously an important factor in the whole I. L. O. situation. And, if an element of mystery surrounds that personality, the interest is not lessened thereby.

"AT THIS time in presenting to you the Director's Report the opportunity of pointing to clear skies ahead is not given to me—."

With these words Mr. Winant opens a seven-page foreword which demonstrates that the new Director will not forego one iota of the privilege and duty handed on to him by his predecessors of speaking his mind on great contemporary issues directly, or indirectly, related to the work and mission of the I. L. O.

Extracts from reports of both predecessors are cited with approval. But it is, perhaps, significant that the name of Albert Thomas appears thrice in the text; and one has the impression that the new Director has communed deeply with the spirit of the dynamic creator of the I. L. O. whose "faith and determination" to move mountains are not only approved, but emulated.

There is no lack of mountains to move; and the greatest of these is war and the threat of war.

This is not the first time that the Director's report has been overshadowed by war and those terrific preparations for it which, since 1932 anyway, have deformed normal social and industrial as well as political relationships.

NO ONE has shown the folly and social disaster of war and arms competition more forcefully than did Mr. Butler in his last reports. But, whereas, Mr. Butler attacked primarily with the weapons of the intellect, Mr. Winant's offensive is strongly colored by an emotional awareness of what war means to the common man. His introduction of a long citation from Carlyle's famous satire on war and how it affects the village of Drumdrudge is proof of this.

And now for the all-important questions of high policy.

In my article on Harold Butler's last Report to the Conference, which appeared in The Post on May 21, 1938, the following sentence occurs:

He (i. e., Mr. Butler) attributes the success of the I. L. O. in weathering the storms of recent years in part to the objective attitude it has maintained to ideological controversies, and in part to the fact that instead of drawing in its horns it has increased its activity in face of difficulty.

There is no doubt whatever about John G. Winant's attitude to the second of these points. He is obviously very much irked by the fact that one of his first duties as Director was to cut down his staff in pursuance of an economy policy for which he had no responsibility and over which he had little, if any, control.

"We cannot spend what we have not got," he says with a certain note of exasperation, "but eliminating useful people and curtailing services at this time in my judgment is not wise policy."

"I have no hesitation in saying," he flatly declares when speaking of the I. L. O. budget for 1940 (just over $2,000,000), "that it is inadequate to enable the organization to meet the calls which are made upon it."

WHAT PRECISELY these calls are—and especially what they might be in some circumstances—are not dealt with in detail. But, there is one striking suggestion which, if I am not mistaken, will raise at the conference much interest, and some anxious inquiry. In looking forward to a new peace settlement, which he prays may come before, rather than after, another universal conflagration, the Director says:

"It should be our part to have ready a practical social program that would assure to the common people recognition of their ultimate needs." And again: "It may mean for us the opportunity to clarify the social objectives of a lasting peace. The workers will measure the value of any settlement that it brings to the conditions under which they live and work."

AND what about "ideological controversies?" What about politics?

Despite the statement early in the foreword to the effect that "I am certain that neither member governments nor nonmember governments would wish to see the International Labor Organization used as an agency of foreign policy in the field of politics," it becomes apparent as the report proceeds that the Director believes—one might say passionately believes—that it is impossible for himself, and by implication, for the office or the organization to remain strictly "above the battle" or "on the side lines" where fundamental issues of political and social philosophy are concerned.

I imagine that the most discussed and debated sentence in the whole report will be the one toward the close of the foreword, where John G. Winant leaves no doubt where he personally stands: "I would not say one word," he says (and one almost sees that jaw stick out again)—"I would not say one word which would weaken the determination of the member countries to protect themselves against aggression and to preserve those democratic institutions which are the hope of mankind."

OPINIONS might differ widely as to precisely what is meant by the I. L. O. being used, or not being used, "as an agency of foreign policy in the field of politics." Opinions might legitimately differ also as to the relationship of politics to "ideological controversies."

But for all practical purposes John G. Winant has told the world in language that cannot be misunderstood that, so far as he is concerned—and, after all, he is the Director—he cannot envisage the I. L. O. pressing objectivity to the point of neutrality in the great politico-socio-economic issues of our day.

The same attitude and temper crops up over and over again. Is he discussing international trade? Then he has much to say in praise of the policy of freeing trade particularly associated with the name of Cordell Hull. Is he discussing refugees as part—and in his view an "overshadowing" part—of the general problem of migration? Then, once again, he leaves no doubt at all where his own sympathies lie, when he speaks of those refugees who "as has been widely recognized, possess professional, artistic and intellectual abilities of which the world has ample need."

NO—John G. Winant's first report as Director of the I. L. O. will not have as good a press in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo as it will in London, Paris and Washington.

Without doubt we are embarking upon a new and exciting phase in the history of the I. L. O.

Roosevelt And . . .?

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Next Vice President

THE GROWTH of the belief in Washington that President Roosevelt will be nominated for a third term can be measured roughly by the increasing talk about the probable identity of his running mate.

The question "Will he accept a third nomination?" and its variant, "Will he seek a third nomination?" remain unanswered by the President. James A. Farley came back from his Western tour saying, as he had said before he started, that if Mr. Roosevelt expects to obtain a third nomination he must say that he wants it, and say so within the next three or four months. But the prevailing view among New Dealers close to the White House still is that the President can keep silent until the Democratic National Convention a year from now and still get the nomination if he wants it. All the current signs are that the third-term movement is rolling along impressively without any declaration of intention from the White House.

The three possible Vice Presidential nominees most often mentioned within the earshot of this correspondent during the last two weeks are Frank Murphy, Lloyd C. Stark and Sam Rayburn.

Zeal Of Murphy Adds To Luster

ATTORNEY GENERAL Murphy is the brightest of the new stars of the New Deal. The zeal with which he is cleaning up the Federal judiciary and prosecuting income-tax cases against powerful machine politicians of both parties adds week by week to his luster. By long and varied experience in public office and unswerving adherence to progressive principles he is thoroughly qualified personally to head the national ticket. Geographically, also, there is much to be said for his nomination. Being from Michigan, he would help to offset such geographical appeal as the Republicans might hope to make in nominating Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan; Senator Taft, or Gov. Bricker, from the adjoining State of Ohio, or even Thomas E. Dewey, a native of Michigan.

As second man to Roosevelt, Murphy would give the 1940 ticket a 100 per cent New Deal complexion.

Gov. Stark of Missouri would impart to the ticket a bit more of the middle-roadish tinge. Although he is a personal admirer and supporter of the President, his background is more conservative. Geographically he has the advantage of coming from the most populous of the border States and from that whic' is represented in the Senate by Bennett C. Clark, a favorite in the so-called "Garner group." If there were a serious bolt from the Democratic ticket as a result of Roosevelt's renomination, Missouri is one of the States where it probably would be felt most. Like Frank Murphy, Gov. Stark has identified himself with clean government and hostility to corrupt machines—an asset which should have special value in 1940 if Thomas E. Dewey is on the Republican ticket, in either first or second place.

Rayburn Might Appease 'Rebels'

SAM RAYBURN, of Texas, one of the ablest men in either house of Congress, is also middle-of-the-road. But as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, he put in workable form and ushered through the House some of the most complicated New Deal legislation—including the securities and exchange act. As majority leader he has done well with an often-rebellious House. His peculiar qualification from the viewpoint of practical politics is that he comes from the same State as John N. Garner, who has become the main rallying point for the opposition to the New Deal within the Democratic Party. Moreover, he was Garner's campaign manager in 1932. And to him, Sam Rayburn, the largest share of credit has been given by James A. Farley for swinging the Garner delegations from Texas and California to Franklin D. Roosevelt at the critical point in the 1932 convention.

The nomination of Rayburn for Vice President might serve even better than the nomination of Stark to subdue the threat of a serious bolt in 1940, and, it is argued, would compel Mr. Garner himself to support the ticket.

"Roosevelt and Rayburn" is pleasing to the ear, incidentally.

Farley Nomination Viewed As Unlikely

TALK OF a Roosevelt-Farley ticket, previously reported in this column, has evaporated, since the rediscovery of the twelfth amendment to the Constitution by the New Dealers with whom this fancy originated. This clause prohibits electors from voting for both a President and a Vice President from their own State. If there were a Roosevelt-Farley ticket, the Presidential electors from New York (if they were Democrats) would have to throw away their votes for one man or the other.

Lacking a commitment from the President as to his own plans, discussion about a running-mate for him necessarily is of the hot-stove (or hot-weather) league variety—but no more so than most other talk at this time about the composition of the two major party tickets in 1940. Some politicians in Washington—and not only New Dealers—are taking pretty seriously the task of filling out a ticket headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

On The Record

Secretary Hull Cuts the Gordian Knot

BEFORE CONGRESS adjourns it should pass Secretary Hull's neutrality legislation as it stands. To leave the neutrality position as it now is, in a time of grave international danger, would be inaction of supreme frivolity. The existing legislation is unstatesmanlike, amateurish, and it does not have the support either of the State Department or of any serious and objective student of foreign affairs.

The proposals of the Secretary deserve the most favorable consideration, first, because they come from him. Nobody in the Cabinet enjoys a more universal trust and esteem than does the Secretary of State. He is not impulsive; he is singularly free from prejudice; he is, in this Administration, remarkably consistent; he is not susceptible to pressure groups, and he is a man of peace.

Proposals Seen As Unpartisan

THE PROPOSALS deserve favorable consideration, in the second place, because they have been worked out through months of thought and discussion. Concentrated upon all phases and all possible results or a policy by those people whom we hire to execute our foreign policy, who know most about the international situation, and who are for the most part, wholly unpartisan.

They ought to be adopted, in the third place, because they make sense. An embargo on arms to all belligerents, as provided for in the present neutrality act, puts us in the position of adopting a rigid policy regardless of what the national interests may or may not be. It cuts off the industrial resources of the United States from those countries which are weakest, which have no great arms industries of their own, which are most unlikely to attack anyone, and most likely to be attacked.

It is inconsistent, even in this, for it does not make it mandatory to forbid the sale of all essential war materials, and thus is discriminatory against our own industries.

IT WOULD FORBID the sale of airplanes, for instance, in time of war, but it would not automatically forbid the sale of iron, steel, copper and cotton.

And the result of it would simply be that if these were not embargoed, too, foreign nations would take our materials and work them up in their own factories, at the cost of our manufacturers.

Politically, the present act is lamentable. The implication that all essential raw materials necessary for war might be embargoed simply means that in case of a war fought on two oceans we agree to take our ships off the seas and our goods off the international market and treat ourselves to a panic and a frightful depression.

Since nothing would more please the aggressive and revolutionary element in the world, they are heartily pleased with the present act.

The German, Italian and Japanese press all think it is just dandy, and whenever it is suggested that it be amended, they cry "War monger!" at the suggestors.

THE PROPOSALS of Mr. Hull, which have been thought through with great deliberation, are an attempt to achieve the purpose for which the neutrality legislation was originally framed—to keep this country out of war.

But they also provide that this country should keep a free hand with regard to its own national interests; should not put itself in a position where it may be assisting our potential enemies and injuring friends, and they permit us to maintain a maximum of world trade, in the event of foreign war, with a minimum of risk of being embroiled by attacks upon our nationals.

Under Mr. Hull's program American vessels would be prohibited from entering combat areas. American citizens would not be allowed to travel in these areas. All exports, to any belligerent, would have the titles transferred to the foreign purchaser so that they would cease to be American before they left our shores.

Loans and credits to belligerents would be prohibited and the solicitation of funds for beliggerents would be controlled.

I CONSIDER the latter one of the most necessary conditions for obtaining real freedom of action in this country and real national solidarity in case of an international war. Without it every belligerent will be trying to have a war chest here from its sympathizers and the war will be transferred to our own soil in dangerous rifts in public opinion.

And, finally, the Munition Control Board should be maintained for the regulation of the arms traffic.

If anyone thinks that these proposals give great power to our own Government, let him ask whether he would prefer greater powers to be given to other governments—which is what the present neutrality act, in effect, does.

And let him consider that under the present act a general embargo over all essential war materials—and without that the act would be useless—would mean a complete and total control by the Government over the whole foreign trade and a depression which might well mean complete control over all production.

Mr. Hull is to be congratulated on having cut the Gordian knot into which our foreign policy was tied by the present neutrality act.

Public Pressure Urged on Program

HE HAS OFFERED a program which is not, in the first place, an open invitation to Herr Hitler to take the bit in his teeth and break out in a new place next week; which is not a promise to cut our own throats for the sake of maintaining peace; which makes it clear that our policy is to keep our own nationals from being killed and our own ships from being torpedoed; which reduces risks to a minimum and keeps freedom and independence at a maximum.

There is no single measure which it is more important for this Congress to pass before it adjourns. But there is a good chance that it will not be passed unless public opinion makes itself felt.

Hyattsville Urged as Bus Hearing Site

Citizens' Federation Opposes Changes For Prince Georges

Transfer of the Maryland Public Utilities Commission hearing on proposed changes in Prince Georges County bus routes from Baltimore to Hyattsville was urged last night by the Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Association.

A more representative delegation would in attendance if the meeting, scheduled for June 19, should be held in Hyattsville, said W. F. Mulligan, chairman of he Federation's pubilc utilities committee.

The organization already is on record opposing proposed changes which would reroute all Capital Transit buses through the terminal now under construction in Mount Rainier, Md. On existing routes buses serving Prince Georges County communities run into downtown Washington, it was explained, but the new lines would go only to the Mount Rainier terminal, where patrons would have to transfer to street cars.

Fred W. Gast, chairman of the parks and flood control committee, reported that the Maryland park and planning commission was purchasing land for park devlopment in the Anacostia River Valley. He explained that 478 acres would be included in the park which will be two miles long and approximately a quarter-mile wide. Flood control provisions will be included in the development, he also told the gathering in the Bladensburg (Md) fire house. John N. Torvestad, Mulligan and Gast were named to the hospital committee before the organization adjourned for the summer.

Auto Kills Pedestrian

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 1.—William Cole, 22, was fatally injured near Tollgate Schoolhouse, Hardy County, Tuesday, when crushed by an automobile driven by Ernest Rodgers Ford jr., of Arlington Va.

Graduation Over, Middies Turn to Sea

New First and Third Classmen to Embark Today for Atlantic Coastal Voyage

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, June 1.—The class of 1939 was only a memory at the Naval Academy tonight, with the excitement of June Week over and 525 new officers on their way to join the Navy's fighting forces.

Graduation exercises this morning, colorful in the Navy tradition, ended the academic careers of 578 midshipmen.

Farewells done, the Navy turned to the midshipmen yet remaining to be trained as naval officers. The new first and third classmen, the graduates of 1940 and 1942, embark tomorrow morning on the annual midshipmen's cruise.

The battleships Arkansas, Texas and New York were standing by tonight in Annapolis Roads, awaiting the midshipmen. The cruise this year is in Atlantic coastal waters, the European cruise having been cancelled because of continental conditions.

New Class to Enter

For three months the midshipmen will live aboard the battle wagons, following the strict ship's regimen. During their absence the new crop of plebes, the class of 1943, will enter the Academy.

The newly-commissioned officers ended their graduation exercises this morning by hurling their midshipmen's caps away in deference to old custom. Sweethearts, relatives and urchins in the crowd of 10,000 at the ceremonies scrambled for the hurtling headgear.

Bareheaded, the new officers marched back to their quarters for the last time to don the naval officers' caps they will wear throughout their naval careers.

Plebes, "behind the eight ball" during their first year as the traditional butt of upperclass "riding," broke from the stands on the run at the conclusion of graduation to stage their annual snake dance in Lovers Lane.

Personal Honor Stressed

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, delivered the principal address at the exercises.

"Hold your personal honor of higher value than all else," Admiral Leahy counselled the fledgling officers.

"The Naval Academy has done its best to give you a groundwork in the absorbing subject of leadership, and now you will be faced with its practical application in the fleet.

"In its broader sense, your education is just beginning."

Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, academy superintendent, conferred the degrees of bachelor of science on the graduates.

"I wish you the greatest success and happy landings," he told his departing charges.

Receive Ensign Rank

The newly-commissioned officers go into the fleet as ensigns, the lowest commissioned rank. As first classmen they were overlords of the academy, but in the fleet they must begin all over again at the bottom, with even less rank than they enjoyed as plebes four years ago.

Five hundred graduates were commissioned as ensigns, 25 went into the Marine Corps as second lieutenants, 52 were dropped as physically deficient, and a Filipino member of the class was not eligible for commission.

The graduation exercises concluded the June Week celebration at the Naval Academy.

The ensigns were granted a month's leave before reporting to their new assignments with fleet units scattered from the Atlantic Coast to the China station.

Will of Mrs. Plitt Probated in Rockville

The will of Mrs. Elizabeth Plitt, of Chevy Chase, Md., has been admitted to probate in the orphans court at Rockville. It bequeaths $100 to her son, George Plitt, jr., and all tangible personal property to her husband, George Plitt, and leaves the residue to her husband in trust, he to receive the net income for life. Upon the death of Mr. Plitt, the residue is to be divided in equal shares to Dorothea Anna Robertson and Ruth Steide Dasher, daughters of the testatrix. Mr. Plitt is named trustees and executor.

Col. Ober Takes Office as State Police Chief

Kirkman Becomes Md. Budget Head: 5 Major Jobs Open

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 1.—Administration of the State Police Department changed hands today, and a new State agency, created by the last legislature, came into existence.

Col. Beverly G. Ober, of Baltimore County, succeeded a brother National Guard officer, Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of Frederick, as State Police commandant for a four-year term.

Walter Kirkman, budget director during the regime of former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, took office as director of the Department of Budget and procurement, replacing the old Central Purchasing Bureau.

The budget and procurement agency, charged with the double task of preparing a State budget for the Governor each biennium and supervising all purchases by State departments, was a part of Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's government reorganization plan.

Arrival of the June 1 "changeover" date left five important jobs still open to gubernatorial patronage.

Topping the list was the bank commissionership, a $10,000-a-year post now held by Warren F. Sterling, Crisfield Republican. Sterling's term expired May 1, but Gov. O'Conor has not yet announced a replacement.

Also open to appointment if and when O'Conor wishes are the chairmanship of the State movie censors board, an associate membership on the State tax commission, a commissionership on the industrial accident commission, and the post of deputy insurance commissioner.

State Clamps Down On 'Bargains' in Burial Expenses

Richmond, Va., June 1 (AP).—Frank C. Stover, secretary of the State Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors, said today three funeral homes, including two outside the State, had signed agreements to discontinue selling a type of burial certificate in Virginia which the board held to be in conflict with accepted trade standards.

The certificates purported to entitle the holders in event of death to a 50 per cent discount on any funeral selected for them, provided they were purchased from the director selling the certificates, priced at $5 each.

He declared the "joker" lay in the fact that the director selling the certificates gained burial prospects and that the families of the deceased had no way of checking on the actual burial costs.

Miss Risteau, New Loans Head, Defies Red Tape, Stays in Office

Former Woman Senator, Who Once Raised Flowers in Statehouse Cuspidors, Will Fight Removal to New Quarters

Baltimore, June 1 (AP).—Harford County's one-time lady Senator, who grew flowers in State House cuspidors, has a nice office as Maryland's new administrator of loan laws—and whoever tries to move her out will have a fight on his hands.

That was the way Miss Mary Risteau, who says she doesn't have red hair—just a mind of her own, sized up her first battle with official "red tape."

Under a law passed by the 1939 Legislature, effective today, the administrator of loans replaces the State loans commissioner, whose office is transferred to the State banking department. But, Miss Risteau said today, she's not moving.

In fact, she had her name and title lettered on the office doors and settled down for a long stay, economy move or no economy move.

The statute abolishing the commissionership originally was drawn to reduce overhead costs and increase efficiency and was part of the Government reorganization program backed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

Net result of the new law, it developed, was a chance in the title of the loans commissioner, and abolition of the office of deputy commissioner who drew $2,400 a year. As administrator, Miss Risteau will get $4,000 instead of $4,800 paid the commissioner.

Burial Set Today For L. J. Goode In Tennessee

Llewellyn J. Goode, 43, of Kensington, Md., who died Wednesday at Emergency Hospital, will be buried today in Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Goode was superintendent for the Coca-Cola bottling works in this area.

Well known in amateur golfing circles, he won a number of tournament cups. He was a member of the Columbia Country Club, Washington Rotary Club and was prominent in Shrine and Masonic activities in the District. He was a World War veteran.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Theresa Goode; a daughter, Gloria; a brother, John Goode, of Litchfield, Ky., and three sisters, Mrs. Worth Powell, of Texas; Miss Mary Goode, of Clarksburg, Miss., and Miss Flora Goode, of Louisville, Ky.

Referendum Plea On Coroner Law Ruled Defective

Baltimore, June 1 (AP).—Attorney General William C. Walsh ruled tonight a referendum petition on the administration's new system of coroners was "obviously defective" and that the law could take effect immediately.

A study of the petition filed with the secretary of state showed all of the 5,000 names were those of registered voters in Baltimore City, Walsh announced.

Mercury Hits 98, Cumberland Peak

Cumberland, Md., June 1 (AP).—June arrived today on the heels of the hottest May day ever recorded in Cumberland. The mercury soared to 98 degrees yesterday, one degree higher than the previous May mark set May 12, 1914, and May 31, 1919. Frederick also had its warmest day of the summer yesterday when the temperature climbed to 95 degrees.

Farmers Get $7,263

Winchester, Va., June 1.—Frederick County farmers today received the first instalment of Uncle Sam's payments for participation in the 1938 farm conservation program. County Agent Fred Stine received 130 checks for an aggregate of $7,263.45.

O'Conor Names 12 Additional Magistrates

Appointments Made For Anne Arundel, Harford, Garrett

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 1.—Twelve more magistrates for three counties were named by Gov. O'Conor today under the magistrates "reform bill" doing away with the fee system and putting the judges on a salary basis.

The Governor, who made appointments for eight counties last night, tackled the job again today but left his office to attend graduation ceremonies at the Naval Academy.

A number of appointments still are to be made.

Those named today included:

Anne Arundel—Robert T. Franklin, Galesville; James G. Woodward, Annapolis, and John Demyan, jr., Ferndale.

Harford—N. Paul Cronin, Aberdeen; Stanley S. Spencer, Bel Air; G. Howlett Cobourn, Havre de Grace, and Norman Knight, Darlington.

Garrett—Charles F. White, Oakland; George J. Poole, Kitzmiller; Charles S. Zeller, Grantsville; Percy S. Friend, Friendsville. Substitute: H. A. Loraditch, Oakland.

U.S. Resumes Highway Aid To Virginia

Approval Given Several Projects, Ending Impasse Over 2 Spans

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va. June 1.—Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley reported today the Federal Bureau of Public Roads had approved a number of individual Virginia Federal aid road projects for the coming year, apparently ending a tie-up of approximately $6,000,000 in Federal and State road funds.

Recently the bureau withheld approval of the entire Virginia Federal aid construction program, involving about $3,000,000 in Federal funds and an equal amount of State money, Shirley said, but approval now is being obtained for "individual projects as they come through."

However, the Virginia commissioner reported the Federal authorities had asked the highway department to advise what projects the State would eliminate from its original program to make up $600,000 for construction of new bridges over the North and South forks of the Shenandoah River at Riverton.

Shirley said the highway commission had not yet eliminated any projects and he believed a satisfactory solution would be reached to the Riverton Bridge problem by same other means.

The Federal bureau had asked that $300,000 in Federal aid and $300,000 in State money be set aside for each of the next two years for the Shenandoah River bridges.

There is a possibility some help may be obtained for this project from the Federal grade crossing elimination fund, Shirley said, as crossings over the Norfolk & Western and Southern railroads also would be necessary if new bridges were built.

Rev. McClelland To Be Consecrated Today as Bishop

Easton, Md., June 1 (AP).—The Rev. William McClelland will be consecrated as Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Easton tomorrow, a quarter of a century after he was ordained a Deacon and Priest in the Church.

Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker will conduct the services in Christ Church here, with the Rev. Frank W. Sterrett, Bishop of Bethlehem, and the Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop of Maryland, as co-consecrators.

Tomorrow's consecration will climax a long record of church service by the Philadelphia-born minister, now 56 years old.

Hawaiian Dishes Are Good Here

Pineapple Pie, Coconut Chicken Make Fine Menu For Summer Day

By the Post Food Editor

NATIONAL DISHES may be at their very best in the lands of their origin, but they can also reach perfection far from their native backgrounds, because of modern canning and transportation facilities. Pineapple and coconut are two highly esteemed foods of the Hawaiian Islands. Canned pineapple is the only plant-ripened pineapple available on the mainland, for unlike most fruits, pineapple will not ripen after it is picked—and to be shipped "fresh" it must be picked green. The canned product has the true pineapple flavor because the fruit is picked ripe, when its natural sugars are developed to the full. Canned pineapple is a good source of Vitamins C and B. Its carbohydrate content derived from natural sugars—as well as from the sirup in which pineapple products are usually packed—constitutes the other major nutritive value.

The chef of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, Honolulu, has a masterpiece in his Tropical Pineapple Pie. It is a dessert with the winy zest of Hawaiian "pines" and seems especially designed for a summer dessert. The following is the recipe used by this famous chef:

Tropical Pineapple Pie

Beat 4 egg yolks slightly, add ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup crushed pineapple, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind. Cook in a double boiler, stirring occasionally until custard coats a spoon. Add ½ cup boiling pineapple juice to 4 tablespoons lemon jelly powder, and dissolve. Blend gelatin mixture into custard. Cool. Make a stiff meringue by beating ½ teaspoon cream of tartar and ½ cup sugar into four stiffly beaten egg whites. While pineapple custard is still soft and smooth fold in the meringue and pile into cooled baked pie shell. Cover top with well drained bits of crushed pineapple and chill for 1 hour before serving. Garnish with whipped cream and cherries.

A luncheon served in the garden of a Honolulu home was especially interesting because of the use of the native coconut in a chicken dish. The following is the menu in which this dish was featured.

Menu

Sherry
Salad of fruits with shredded carrots
French dressing
Sardines with lettuce and coconut milk
Niu Moa Ai (Cocoanut Chicken Dish)

Niu Moa Ai

Take 4 coconuts and saw the tops off. Remove ½ the meat by scrapping into shreds. Put together 3 tablespoons coconut meat and 2 ears of fresh corn shaved from the cob. Slice 2 onions into 4 tablespoons diced bacon browned. Add 1 chopped green pepper, ½ dozen small tomatoes stewed with salt, pepper, clove of garlic chopped fine and cook till it thickens. Strain this into the corn and coconut, add the meat of 1 spring chicken cut in dices or shredded. Put this mixture into the coconut shell, using the top piece as a cover, seal tightly with flour paste. To protect shell from scorching set in a pan with ½ inch of water. Bake 1 hour in hot oven, basting at 10 minute intervals with water. Serve 1 coconut to each person. Contents will stay hot for 5 hours. Serve with small Irish potato balls boiled in clam juice instead of water.

A Tropical Delight for Pie Lovers

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Roomy Shoes Necessary at World's Fair Sports Clothes of Suit Type, Practical,

New York, June 1.

ONE OF THE TOUGHEST problems at any World's Fair is the problem of what to wear. Fairs are very difficult stuff—hard on the feet, wearing on the spirit and torturing to the mind. Comfort is the most important thing in matter of wearing apparel.

ALICE HUGHES

Obviously, the feet are the greatest sufferers. For this reason loose and easy shoes are the most important things to wear. They should be roomy, even at the expense of chic, for fair feet are the greatest problem which afflicts the visitor.

As far as apparel goes, I should suggest comfortable sports clothes, probably sports clothes of the suit type, which are easy on the torse and good-looking as well.

There is no more vital problem at the fair than what to wear, not only for comfort, but also for appearance. We all want to look our best when we are on parade on those flashy highways. For this reason, we should do our best in the matter of raiment. But comfort, especially on the hard-worked feet, is paramount and, therefore, we should bear down heavily on roomy, easy and even good-looking shoes. This is the last word in fair comfort. You do not want to go home with barking dogs and so it behooves you to be very careful of your foot apparel. Otherwise your visit to the fair in New York will be uncomfortable and anything but a success. Therefore, write this in your date book when you head East to see the greatest show on earth, and not the circus.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: A young man named Joseph Perez, who is 34 years old, fell upon evil times the other day. Meeting a pretty nurse named Mary Crebbs, he committed the vital error of stealing a kiss from the young lady and this vital error cost him a maximum sentence of ten years in the jug. It is safe to say that Joe, after a decade in the cooler will not repeat this offense. After all, I doubt if any kiss, however, tasty, is worth ten years in jail. That, however, is purely a personal matter.

The most delightful newspaper pictures in history and the most pleasant stories are those about the visit of the little Dionne duckies to the King and Queen in Toronto. The thing which pleased me most was the howl of laughter with which the kids greeted old Doc Dafoe in his plug hat. Certainly, plug hats are funny on anybody. Those cute girls are now five years old, and our own quadruplets, of which we are duly proud are now four, and had a very high-class birthday party. They are healthy kids and very interesting and amusing to look at. Of course, they are only four of them but we like them just the same in spite of the fact that they are one short of the cunning Canadians.

Well, it is here again, meaning the annual New York State Frog's Legs Season. Since May is quite innocent of the letter "R," Ben Riley, who runs a fine restaurant in the outskirts of New York, celebrates this day early in May each year, and right tasty they are.

THE YOUNG LADIES and gentlemen who lurk about the night clubs are playing a novel game called patty-cake. Even though this pastime was indulged in in our childhood days, it is very popular with the helpless children who have nothing else to do after dinner. I saw Barbara Hutton that was and her present boy friend Bob Sweeney, engaged in this intellectual pastime.

Fancy jewelry is always very smart, and right now that made of silver is especially popular. some are lockets, necklaces and bracelets, mostly in old English silver. This is a pleasant change from the junky stuff so popular during the past few years.

Hot Weather Brings Fruits Into Limelight at Market

Make Easily Prepared Desserts; Strawberries, Pineapples Are Featured; First Sweet Corn Is Appearing

By The Post Food Editor

IN THE FIRST LINE of defense against summer's heat come foods that replace the heavier ones which were so necessary for generating heat and energy in the winter time. Foods that are easily prepared and those that may be prepared before the serving hours are also to be considered during the summer months. Fruits are splendid hot weather foods and at this time the bright color of fruit is everywhere.

Bing cherries, the big black variety, are here from California, just as sweet as ever and at a lower price than usual.

The glory of the strawberry shortcake is a story that grows sweeter with the telling, for the berries are more luscious and the prices very low. There is a prepared biscuit dough which is delicious and is no trick to turn into a delicious dessert. Be sure the berries are red ripe and sweet of juice. Serve with thick cream, the berries cold and sweet, like wine; the shortcake warm and crunchy and rich of butter

Pineapple Recipe

Fresh pineapples are very reasonable and delicious. Choose a firm fruit free from specks. If it is ripe enough to use, a slight pull at one of the top leaves will pull it out. A pineapple weighing two pounds will produce about two and a half cups cubed or four cups grated. Pineapple and other fruits served in the half shell with the "feathers" on makes an interesting change in the way to serve pineapple. The pineapple may also be cut in slivers about one-half inch thick from top end to bottom, left in the shape of the pineapple, sugared between the slits and put into the refrigerator to chill. This is a delightful way to serve pineapple for a terrace or backyard meal.

While sweet corn is yet no bargain, yet it is to be found in the stores and markets. The best plan for examining sweet corn I have heard is cutting a "peek" window an inch wide and 2 inches long in the husk of the ear. When a kernel is pricked a sweet milk juice should flow out.

June is the month when we start casting about for foods which can be prepared in advance of serving. Jellied veal loaf is a delicious food for a hot day luncheon or supper. It is very easy to make and may be made right after breakfast, slipped into the refrigeartor and it will be all ready to use without further ado. Keep some canned soups on the emergency shelf to serve as the hot dish. Toss up a salad of crisp vegetables and end the meal with a fresh fruit or maybe a fruit shortcake. Now that the berry procession has started with the flaming strawberries, others will be along soon, such as blackberries raspberries and huckleberries. Blackberry roly polys, raspberry tarts and blueberry puddings can do duty by the menu.

Jellied Veal Loaf

Strain 1 can condensed chicken soup and heat the broth. Mix the rice, chicken and celery from the soup with 3 cups cooked veal, which has been ground. Put all through the food chopper, using the medium blade. Dissolve 2 teaspoons gelatin, which has been softened in 2 tablespoons water, in the hot broth and mix with the ground meat mixture. Add salt and pepper. For garnish arrange slices of hard cooked egg and stuffed olives in bottom of loaf pan. Put meat mixture on garnish and place in the refrigerator until firm. When ready to serve turn out on lettuce or other greens. Serves 6.

Ground beef made fresh daily, called "red jacket" is done up in gay red cellophane, and when you go to buy the meat they cut right through the casing and give you the amount you desire.

The Homemaker

Dairy Products, Students' Choice

THE FAVORITE BEVERAGE of Chicago high school students is milk, and ice cream is their favorite dessert. These facts were revealed by a survey made in high school lunch rooms, reports the National Dairy Council. Questionnaires were distributed among 43,000 students in 52 Chicago public school lunchrooms, and each student indicated his favorite beverage, vegetable, dessert, etc. If the foods receiving the most votes were combined in a meal, the following would be the result: orange juice, vegetable soup, vegetable salad, roast beef, potatoes, peas, bread and butter, ice cream and milk. Ice cream rated high above pies and cakes as a dessert.

The fact that the students prefer these good foods does not, unfortunately, mean that they eat good meals. Milk was voted their favorite beverage, yet actually milk consumption declines sharply during adolescence, particularly among girls. There are many cool milk drinks of the front ranks for warm weather days with appeal for both the young and old. The following are suggestions for delightful thirst-quenching milk drinks.

Strawberry Milk Drink

Wash, hull and drain 1 quart of strawberries. Crush and press through a coarse sieve. Combine puree with 5 cups milk, add 2½ teaspoons lemon juice, ¾ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt and mix thoroughly. Chill before serving. Garnish with whipped cream. Eight to ten servings.

Lemon Milk Shake

Beat 2 eggs, add ½ cup ice water, 6 tablespoons lemon juice and ½ cup sugar, mixing thoroughly. Add slowly to 3 cups cold milk, stirring constantly. Serve at once. Yield 4 or 5 glasses.

Fruit Milk Punch

Mash ½ banana. Add 2 tablespoons orange juice, ¼ cup pineapple juice and 1 tablespoon lemon juice and pinch of salt. Chill. When ready to serve pour into cold milk and beat with eggbeater. Serve immediately. Yield 1 tall glass.

Cherished New England Recipes Revealed in Colonial Dish Contest

Salem Chowder Of 1832 Vintage Wins First Prize

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

IN NEW ENGLAND the colonial forefathers have been honored for their brilliant staesmanship and the hardships they braved to make new homes. Sung, too, are the praises of their pioneer wives, because through their fishpot pies, blueberry puddings and other nutritious dishes, the fathers were able to make their great progress. Many of these early cherished recipes have lived on, being handed down from mother to daughter. They have increased in popularity and become famous as colonies changed into States.

Almost as much fun as a real New England clam bake, where a barrel is packed with clams, lobsters, green corn, potatoes and onions, to steam to a luscious doneness, was the privilege of reviewing the intimate history of the recipes submitted in this week's Post Recipe Contest. From the baked bean belt to the sea food section and the blueberry and squash territories came the favorites of our readers.

A bit of Cape Cod is offered by Miss Hayford, winner of the first prize in The Post recipe contest, in her nutritious Salem fish chowder suggestion

Ancient Recipe

It is the belief of old Scotch fisherman—and some fishermen still cling to the old superstition—that it is bad luck if a haddock fisherman sees a red-headed woman, a minister, a lawyer, a car or a pig when he is going out to sea. Regardless of the superstitions about this fish, it is known that it has the highest iodine content of any salt-water fish and, therefore, is of great value in the prevention of goiter. Salem fish chowder, sometimes known as Cape Cod chowder, a favorite Yanke dish, was contributed by Miss Dorothy E. Hayford, Haymarket, Va., winner of the $3 prize. Miss Hayford writes, "the following recipe has been in my family for many years, in fact, since 1832, the date on the yellowed paper of the handwritten receipt book."

Salem Fish Chowder

Fry seven slices of pork (salt) for a haddock (or other fish) weighing 5 or 6 pounds. Fry two good-sized onions in the fat and put them in the pot. Cut up the haddock, after being nicely cleaned, in pieces of good serving size. Put this also in the fat. Pare and slice 10 potatoes. First put a layer of fish in the pot, then one of potatoes and sprinkle over them the onions, salt, pepper and flour with some slices of pork, then another layer and so on until it is all used up. Cover with boiling water and cook 20 minutes or half an hour, according to the fish used. About 10 minutes before it is time to serve it, add a quart and a half of rich milk. Split 10 crackers (hard crackers, known in the New England States as Boston, or Common, crackers), dip them in cold water and put them in the chowder. Of course, this quantity can be halved, and evaporated milk may also be used.

The common cracker of New England is featured in the New England pudding recipe of Mrs. Nesbitt, winner of the second prize in The Post Recipe Contest

Yankee Dessert

Crackers seemed to be one of the bulwarks of the New England cooks, and a recipe typical of New England cookery is cracker pudding. To the author, Mrs. J. W. Nesbitt, 3707 Woodley road northwest, Washington, goes second prize of $2 and a place on The Post honor roll. Mrs. Nesbitt writes that this is a very delicious dessert and inexpensive to make.

New England Cracker Pudding

Slit eight common crackers. Spread with butter, using 2 teaspoons to each cracker. Barely cover 1½ cups seeded raisins with boiling water and cook until plump. Arrange alternate layers of crackers and raisins in buttered baking dish. Pour on 1 quart scalded milk, cover, let stand 1 hour. Beat 3 whole eggs and 3 egg yolks; add 1 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon grated nutmeg and 1 cup thin cream. Pour over first mixture. Bake in moderately slow oven, 325 degrees, for 2½ hours. Serve with a hard or liquid sauce.

The Sacred Codfish

New England's early prosperity, the origin of the capital invested in her factories and industries today, is based on the cod fishery. So important was it that, in recognition, a large gilded wooden codfish was hung in the Statehouse at Boston. "The sacred codfish" may still be seen there today. And we refer to the "first families" of Boston as "codfish aristocracy." Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick Md., winner of a $1 prize, submitted a suggestion for a New England Sunday breakfast delicacy—codfish cakes and bacon, Falmouth. Codfish served with baked beans and brown bread and tomato catsup is a real New England breakfast.

Codfish Cakes and Bacon, Falmouth

Soak 2 cups salt codfish in cold water for several hours. Drain and cover with fresh cold water and simmer until fish is tender. Drain. Remove any bones and chop the codfish. Combine the fish, 2 cups hot mashed potatoes, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon baking powder and ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and beat until light. Cover and let stand overnight. In the morning, mold the cakes about ½ inch thick.

Right-out-of-the-sea flavor is captured in the clam pie recipe submitted by Mrs. Ireland, which captured for her the third prize in The Post Recipe Contest

Fry two strips of bacon for each person to be served. Drain on unglazed paper in a warm place. Fry fish cakes in bacon fat and serve with the crisp bacon. Codfish cakes are delicious served with a tomato sauce.

Seaboard Favorite

If your are a New Englander, only the soft clam is a "clam"—the more widely distributed hard clams are not known as clams. Summer visitors on Cape Cod who stop and ask a small boy as to the price of the clams he is selling, may receive the scornful answer, "them's not clams—them's quahogs." The quahog is important historically for the dark purple spot at the hinge was the raw material for the precious black or purple wampum, the "gold note" of the Indian on the arrival of the white man. Mrs. Joseph W. Ireland, 719 Third street northeast, who is a very consistent contributor to The Post Recipe Contests, is the winner of a $1 prize with her suggestion for clam pie.

Clam Pie

Make a pie shell and a crust to cover. Clean clams and strain the liquor, saving ¼ cup of the liquor. Combine 2 cups hard clams, chopped fine, ¼ cup clam liquor, 1 tablespoon butter, melted, ½ cup cracker crumbs, 1 egg, well beaten, 1 cup milk, and salt and pepper. Pour into a deep pie shell. Cover with crust, seal all around and pierce top crust with fork. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 1 hour. Serve very hot with mashed potatoes.

Indian Influence

Wild blueberries have always been a favorite of the Indians. They formerly dried them for winter use and even today the Indians of the northern reservations pitch their tents in blueberry patches and gather the berries to sell in the nearby towns. The settlers of Colonial days found them growing and learned from the Indians that they were a delicious food. In New England blueberry pudding or pie is often served with a chowder meal. Miss Evelyn Weisbecker, 4423 Eighth street northwest, Washington, wins a $1 prize with her recipe for Blueberry Pudding.

Blueberry Pudding

Cream ¼ pound butter, add ½ cup sugar, and 1 well-beaten egg. Take 2 tablespoons flour and mix with the berries. Sift 1½ cups flour and 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt and add alternately with ½ cup milk to the fat and egg mixture. Fold in 2 cups blueberries and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Bake in a greased pan or baking dish for about 1 hour in a moderate oven. Serve hot with lemon or hard sauce, whipped cream, or allow the pudding to cool and serve as cake.

Curtains Get Gay, Giddy In New Fabrics

Burlap and a Bow Frame One Window; Seersucker Used

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE REALLY WENT down town to look for a hat. But we had a new curtain exhibition on our list and it proved so exciting that we forgot all about millinery and spent the whole afternoon sketching new window treatments and stuffing new fabric samples in our purse. For curtains are all of a sudden getting very giddy and the gay nineties and the dressmaker touch are seen everywhere in new windows.

BURLAP AND A BOW—Quite the smartest new window we saw had side curtains of burlap in lime green with a giant shaped valance in the shape of a bow and covered with plaid gingham in terra cotta and green. A slip cover to match has plaid seat and back with lime burlap skirt.

WHITE SEERSUCKER—For a peasant or maple room, curtains of white seersucker were fresh and appropriate. They were edged with a wide cotton dress braid in bright colors . . . the motif of the braid, a conventionalized flower, was repeated in an enlarged scale on the valance made of cut-out flowers of bright felt appliqued on a plain white cornice board. These big bright felt flowers were also used for the tie-backs.

EYELET EMBROIDERY—Plain peach chintz curtains finished with eyelet embroidery ruffles were pretty hung from a cornice cut out in the shape of a cupid's bow arch, covered with the peach chintz and frilled across the bottom with eyelet ruffles.

SPIC AND SPAN—White organdy curtains trimmed with three vertical rows of red ric-rac, and tied back with bunches of red cherries, was our choice for a maple room.

Your Figure, Madame!

Slow, Careful Exercise Will Reduce Sports Clothes of Suit Type, Practical Stretching, One of Best Waist Slimmers

By Ida Jean Kain

A GYMNASIUM INSTRUCTOR with the insight of a psychologist once told me that she no longer tried to give her classes some of the most efficient exercises. "They are not showy enough," was the explanation. "My classes want exercises that look good—the kind that involve a lot of romping around."

In a more exclusive establishment which specializes in individual instruction—for $200 a course—the routine consists almost entirely of the less showy but more efficient type of exercise and the insistence is upon absolute accuracy. In some of the exercises, the reducers scarcely seem to be moving—but the changes effected in their figures are simply marvelous.

Careful Control Is Secret

Now, if you would like to know the secret of the success of this luxury course, here it is: Carefully controlled movement. To reduce a certain measurement, the movement is concentrated in the muscular network of that area. It is advisable to work slowly and think of what you are doing in order not to lessen or destroy the effectiveness of a particular exercise.

When you are remaking your figure, you must be your own instructor and think, not only of what you are doing, but of the things you must not do. For example, to slim the waist, you stretch and twist. There are all kinds of waistline exercises, but their slimming action always depends on the degree to which you can elongate the line of the waist from hips to ribcage.

One of the best waist slimmers is ridiculously easy:

Stretching Is Simple

Stand up, trunk stretched to full extension, hips tucked under, feet about 18 inches apart and parallel, toes pointed straight ahead. Clasp the hands on top of the head, with elbows in line with the shoulders. Do not let the shoulders hunch up, but stretch upward with the entire body. Stretch muscularly by bending slowly but acutely to the left. As you bend, keep hips tucked under, the elbows in line with the shoulders. All the movement should be in those lazy muscles on either side of the waist!

Here's another, equally hard on the waistline padding: Still standing erect, stretch up and back with the right arm, pressing it close against the head just back of the ear. Then take a step back with the right foot. Can't you feel the additional pull this gives those waistline muscles at the side and front?

This Takes Concentration

Lie on the back on the floor, hands clasped back of head. Have the legs extended straight down, hips and back of knees pressed against the floor. Without moving the hips or legs, twist at the waist and try to touch the right elbow to the left. Bring the right elbow down, keeping the left elbow on the floor.

In all exercises, the object is to concentrate the movement as much as possible in the area which you want to slim down, not to race through a set of exercises.

Frankfurter Hint

Cold left-over frankfurters may look like the end of a picnic, but there's an appetizing way to use them. Grind the cold cooked frankfurters with some cheese. Mix with mayonnaise. Spread on whole wheat bread. Add a layer of watercress and cover with another slice of bread. Serve with baked beans and a beverage for luncheon, unless you want to add a dessert, too.

Where True Love Is at Stake, Divorce Leading to Second Marriage Is Justified, Woman Argues

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In general, you are very liberal in recognizing the wisdom of separation or divorce for those individuals who have made a mistaken marriage; yet it seems that when—as in the case of "Unhappy," your correspondent of May 21—a married woman and a married man find themselves in love, you condemn them without a hearing, so to speak. Since I was once a party to just such a situation, and since things have turned out so well for both the man and myself—and so differently from what you predict for "Unhappy"—I feel that the latter should hear my story.

To begin: My present husband and I were strangers to each other when we married our respective first mates, about 12 years ago. He had married, after a long engagement, a girl who, because she came from an entirely dissimilar environment, could not appreciate his many fine qualities. Her true self came to the fore after they were married, and she made his life miserable with unwarranted jealousy and suspicion, coupled with antagonism toward his family and friends.

I myself had married, after a short acquaintanceship, a man who seemed able to provide and who showed promise of being a good husband, although not inspiring real love. However, he knew how I felt and since he was much older than I, he accepted the situation. A son was born to us and later I was to see things in their true light. He, too, was of a different background; we could have no mutual friends; each seemed out of place amongst the other's friends, and he was perfectly contented to be away from me for days at a time. In fact, if it had not been for my baby and the company of my father, who lived with us for a few years, I could not have endured the situation.

My present husband and I had worked for quite a while in the same Federal agency without ever meeting. Finally, through a transfer, we came into contact with each other and developed a "speaking acquaintance." Later, I learned that he had admired me from a distance for many months but, knowing I was married, had made no effort to meet me socially. It was enough, at first, just to see each other every day and perhaps have lunch together occasionally.

It was no idle infatuation with either of us. I had no idea that I would ever really fall in love this way, for I had never even had lunch with another man after my marriage. My present husband, too, was that rarity among the male sex—a one-woman man, and had never shown attention to any other girl following his marriage. Although we realized that we loved each other desperately, things seemed hopeless at the time, with both of us married, with my obligations to a son and a father, and he with a wife who could not, apparently, support herself even had she so desired.

Yet there was one difference in our make-up which seemed to sustain us during those long, trying months. While I was either up in the clouds or down in the depths, being of a rather changeable disposition, he was of a steady, determined nature who, while never reaching the top in life, would stick to the goal that he had chosen. He would tell me just to keep hoping and wishing, and never to give up our dream of being together.

Well, to make a long story longer, we did get our divorce and married each other, and since then have been happier than we ever dreamed of being. We have never swerved in our devotion to each other, and have so much in common, so many mutual interests, that there is nothing more to be desired. It is true that I do not have as many material possessions as I had with my first husband, as my present husband pays alimony to his first wife, but we have a darling little daughter who is our whole interest, and her little half-brother spends part of his time with us.

So, won't you admit that while it may be the exception to the rule, two mature persons do have the right to correct a mistake and start life over again when a desirable mate is found?

HAPPILY REMARRIED.

Petitioner's Responsibility

DEAR H. R.: It has been said that the story of every man's life is the story of his search for happiness; and Andre Maurois, in his "Ariel, the Life of Shelley," remarks that "to enjoy life, and to help others to enjoy it, without bringing harm to anyone, is the essence of morality"—or words to that effect. I go along with both of these statements, and would be the last to deny any person the opportunity honorably to correct wretched mistakes that were poisoning the wellsprings of his frail potential portion of human happiness.

In general, as you say, I recognize the wisdom of dissolving a distinctly ill-advised marriage. But I believe the burden is on the petitioner, in such instances, to establish the fundamental justification for his desire to be released from contract. In the case of "Unhappy," I am not convinced that such justification exists.

She admits that her husband has given her no cause for complaint (except that she does not "thrill" to him, a fact which she clearly recognized—and accepted—at the time of marrying him); and als that her interest in the "other man" is almost entirely subjective; that is to say, introspective and imaginative, rather than realistic and demonstrable. By her own account, their association has been confined to overtly casual social contacts which gain, for her, a special meaning only because of the man's allegedly eloquent glances, and her friends' remarks that "the man is in love with you."

Moreover, and most importantly—(and a fact which you, apparently, have completely overlooked)—"Unhappy" did not ask my endorsement of a divorce in her case; nor for any suggestions as to how to accomplish it. On the contrary, she asked: "How to overcome this feeling before I give in to it? What would you suggest that I do?" This implies, to me, that she is impelled, by reason and conscience, to abide by her contract; and where so honorable a sentiment prevails, I feel an equal obligation in conscience to fortify her with every logical argument against divorce as a means leading to the sole end of sensory gratification.

Which brings me, in conclusion, to the supposition that your foregoing deposition is inspired by motives that are more self-justifying than altruistic. Are you rendering any service to a woman who seeks deliverance from temptation, in preaching to her the philosophy (first epigramatically defined by Oscar Wilde, I believe) that "the way to overcome temptation is to yield to it?" In my opinion—no. And while you may have found enviable personal happiness through the course you chose, it is hardly to your credit that you claimed it at the expense of your son's happiness, by making him a half-orphan.

Use Judgment in Selecting That Father's Day Tie

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

(News relating to men's fashions appears every Friday on the woman's pages.

WHEN FATHER'S DAY was first apologetically observed in this country, it was easily the most maligned date on the national calendar. Instead of its having been a red letter day for poor old dad, it bore the cadence of a funeral dirge—there was no laughter, no wit, no enjoyment over the family breadwinner's having a special day set aside for his own particular kind of fun.

MARSHALL ADAMS

That was way back when Mother's Day couldn't be pictured minus the doleful dullness of Whistler's "Mother." Today, Father's Day is spiked with humor, and a new psychology of making Dad feel years wiser but younger, rather than a revered patriarch approaching the coddled egg and gruel stage. June 18 is the date set aside for the annual official Father's Day celebration this year, which was founded way back in 1910. And although there are still two whole weeks of shopping, we want to get in a couple of licks in advance to warn sincere but misguided wives and daughters against the evils of buying only the traditional gifts.

He Gets Better Presents

One of our demon local statisticians has made an interesting discovery in support of giving presents at all. He states that Mother's Day is notorious for purchases of nothing more satisfying than candy and flowers. Oh yes, a few coy trinkets are purchased, too, but so inappropriately that they have to be immediately passed on to the younger generation. The bitter truth is that all Mother gets out of her day is tender, melting sentiment. But—Father's Day has recently become a Grade A day for real gift giving—not of just pipes and ties—but of really useful presents that can be enjoyed for at least a year or more.

If you are untrained in gift giving, think twice about those ties. They are a tried and true gift, you know, but they certainly show the line of least resistance when it comes right down to it. You may consider yourself a maker of glamour men as you spend hours picking out that one good summer tie. Actually you may be creating a Frankenstein in your own home, who will gather strength to revolt against your too fastidious good taste in ties.

If Dad is not as young as he used to be, if he has a jowlish underpinning, slightly beefy features and a fading skin, give him a half dozen neutral colored ties, of good quality foulard or washable shantung. Never put him in stripes or splashy prints as they attract attention to his largeness. A very small trim pin point is a good variation, only stay away from bright colors—even though he still has lots of gay sporting blood left. Brash colors fight with already aging or liver spotted complexions.

For the naturally handsome man of 50, whose neat browned tan blends with graying temples, let him have striped, patterned or coin dotted ties. They create greater youthfulness for this type. To the eternally boyish father, give one or more of the many splash-sprayed wash ties, checked or plaid ones. He's never too old for these if his figure and face have kept him trim and youthful. If he's one of those fathers who gets lanky, stooped and cadaverous with age, buy him a softly bright mossy green, maroon or Apache tan tie to bring him back to life. On the other hand, if he's fat, ruddy and white-haired where he isn't bald, give him a China blue, a navy and a royal blue figured or solid toned tie. There's lots of exhilaration in these clean, tangy fresh hues.

Youthful Gifts

Now that you have the tie situation well in hand, aim for a little originality in your gift givings this year. Don't forget Father's no Rip Van Winkle yet, even though he has grown children. He may even be one of those enviable types who looks better at 50 than you do—his daughter at 19—or you—his wife at 40. Flatter him! Revive him, make him feel

Here are suggestions for unusual Father's Day gifts, recommended by the National Dry Goods Association, which helped make Father's Day memorable last year. The association suggests—car aids, all kinds of automobile accessories which Dad might consider a luxury himself; exercisers to help recall that Gary Cooper slimness of waist; garden implements, which, if religiously used, aid the same good cause; soda siphons, which regrettably enough might make him lose that waistline; binoculars, cameras, luggage, which may lure him out of that fat, fair and forty introspection; a good humidor, along with a really good quality pipe; a personal typewriter, a desk set and fountain pen if business is his passion; razors or toiletries if he's still a Don Juan at 60; radios, wallets, watches or your own sweet photograph if he's just a nice everyday father with no particular vices of his own.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay.

A Weak Woman

The book said that one of the chief things men didn't like in women was for them to be independent, self sufficient . . . to wait on themselves.

Now that is just where you have been making your big mistake all along. Why WON'T you stand back and let them open doors for you . . . and pick up pencils . . . and put down windows . . . and move pastepots? Well, from now on you're going to be different. You are going to float around the office with a fragile helpless look and see if it's really true that you can get twice as far that way.

You dress with extra care and finding time creeping up on you, rush for a taxi. By great effort you refrain from attempting to open the door. You get in, start to slam the door after you—think better of it. The driver looks at you, you look at him. Finally with an air of impatience he reaches over and drags the door shut. You feel strangely guilty.

You meet a man colleague at the heavy folding doors to your office building. He steps back to let you go ahead. You start to push the door—then suddenly remember you are helpless. You stand waiting for him to push. He has his hand lightly on the back of the door in a gallant, though ineffectual gesture. The door does not move. He flushes, reaches his arm around you and pushes it open.

On the elevator you meet another man colleague. The three of you advance toward the door of your office. You are ahead, on the side of the door knob. You start to put your hand on the knob, catch yourself suddenly and step back. You land on the toes of the men behind you. Then all three of you grab for the door knob in a general collision.

You find the office boy has failed again to fill your pastepot. You advance upon him with an air of great helplessness. Oh, yes, he will do it, he assures you, just as soon as he runs one little errand for the boss, other side of your chair. "I'll get

You are conferring at your boss' desk when you drop your pencil. It rolls away from him on the it," he says. "No, I'll—" you begin, then halt just as you are stooping hurriedly. He is making no move. You start to reach for it again. He is up and also reaching for it. Your heads collide. You come up with the pencil.

At the next door lunchroom you find yourself sitting on a stool next to a man associate. You alertly keep one eye out for your check. You simply can't let him pay—they say he has five children . . . But wait! There you are—slipping! You turn to him and smile helplessly as the waitress puts your check by your plate. With iron self-control you finish your meal without reaching for it. He takes his last gulp of coffee, picks up his check. "Where's yours?" he asks. "Oh, no!" you explain, reaching frantically for it, "this is Dutch!" He does not protest.

In late afternoon you realize that the office boy hasn't yet filled your paste pot. You approach him again sweetly, helplessly, appealingly. He's doing something else for the boss now, he tells you.

Riding home with some office associates you debate inwardly whether to make your usual offer to get out three blocks distant from your destination so that the driver won't have to make a left turn. The poor man is tired and—still you are a weak woman . . . a weak woman . . . He halts the car of his own accord. "If you don't mind I'll just let you out here," he says. "That's perfectly all right" you assure him, grabbing feverishly at the door handle.

You reach home unusually tired. Perhaps . . . after all . . . you've started this whole thing too late. Probably the best thing to do would be to postpone it until you took a new job in a new town . . . and bought a wedding ring . . . and a lot of lipstick . . . and began life anew as a helpless little grass widow with a brute husband who refuses to send alimony.

Plan Wedding In Advance

A SIMPLE GARDEN ceremony! A clever choice for the bride who wishes an informal, inexpensive wedding. And when bridal party and guests are posted on details of dress, etiquette — a lovely picture to remember!

Instead of the stately gown, the long veil appropriate for formal weddings, the bride wears a flowing organdie dress, a picture hat or a short veil. The men, instead of formal clothes, wear white flannel trousers, blue coats, or all white suits.

Are there bridal attendants at an informal wedding? Usually just one—and her dress is similar to the bride's.

A procession? Yes. As in a formal wedding, the bride takes the right arm of her father, and, preceded by ushers and attendant, walks to the waiting bridegroom and the best man. Then she puts her bouquet on her left arm, takes the left arm of the bridegroom. After a home ceremony there usually is no recessional, but bride and bridegroom turn to receive the good wishes of guests.

What are the duties of attendants? The maid of honor holds the bride's bouquet during the ring ceremony, the best man hands the ring to the groom.

What is correct for guests? Gifts are sent to the bride—about two weeks before the wedding. Proper attire at a garden wedding—light summer dresses, picture hats. What to say to the bridegroom? "Congratulations." To the bride? "Best wishes."

Other types of informal weddings, formal weddings—second weddings, too—are explained in detail in our 40-page booklet, "How to Plan Your Wedding." Tells correct dress, music, etiquette, refreshments. Tells how to budget expenses; items the bride's family pays for, expenses of the bridegroom.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Plan Your Wedding," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of the booklet.

Chief Justice to Rank Sir Ronald At White House Dinner for King

Question of Precedence at Table Settled; Britain's Sovereign Will Repreent Himself at State Function June 8

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Edi or.

THAT ALL-IMPORTANT question of whether the Chief Justice or an Ambassador shall be seated above the salt and ahead of the other has reared its troublesome head again.

Highly and strictly official is the White House dinner for Great Britain's King and Queen on June 8. The Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes will be there; also, the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay. It's the first time in many a day that both a Chief Justice and an Ambassador have been bidden to the same dinner.

And thereby hangs a plaguing problem for those State Department officials whose business it is to decree who "properly precedes."

FOR YEARS—and nobody seems to know how many—a battle has raged over this moot point. There are those who stand by their American guns and declare the Chief Justice of the United States should take second place to no foreign envoy. There are others who vociferously insist an Ambassador "ranks" the Supreme Court's highest functionary. Most hostesses leave the problem on the lap of the gods by never inviting both officials directly involved to stretch their legs beneath the same table.

But no such beating about the bush was possible for the forthcoming occasion, which will mark the first time a British sovereign has ever dined at America's Executive Mansion.

AS ENVOY of the country whose King and Queen will be feted, Sir Ronald Lindsay, His Britannic Majesty Ambassador and dean of the corps, is on the must list. As one of the ranking United States officials, the Chief Justice also deserves a good seat at the table. Now which will rank which?

Rumor is going the rounds that the whole ticklish business was a final straw in the haystack of worries for the State Department's division of protocol and that help from the White House was earnestly solicited. If so, it's not the first time. For all its serene appearance the historic mansion at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue has been selected as the mediation scene for many an incipient social war.

BUT IN THIS case, there si to be no battle, no tempest, and no treaty to be signed. It's all settled. On that stupendous occasion at which His Britannic Majesty is feted at the White House, the Chief Justice will "rank" Sir Ronald Lindsay. And this is why. Sir Ronald is His Britannic Majesty's representative here; also his country's envoy. But His Majesty will be present at the dinner, "representing" himself.

Therefore, with Great Britain's King in the highest place of honor at the table, Great Britain's envoy will be seated below the Chief Justice of the United States. See if he isn't.

PROTOCOL POSED no big problem last night when Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained 100 guests at Friendship in honor of Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft. A trio of ambassadors headed the list but there was no Chief Justice to be "seated."

Guests found their places at small tables covered with lace over yellow satin and centered with bouquets of summer blossoms. As is the usual case with parties at Friendship, last evening's drew its quota of out-of-towners. Conde Nast, of New York, came down especially for John R. McLean 2d, son nad the party; as did Mr. and Mrs. daughter-in-law of the hostess, and William Randolph Hearst.

MISS EVALYN McLEAN assisted her mother in receiving. Following the dinner a motion picture, "Rose of Washington Square," was shown in the spacious sunroom as a climax of an unusually pleasant evening.

Guests included the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil; the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz; the French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin; the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, and Attorney General Frank Murphy.

As would be expected, there were several from the Congressional set, including Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Representative Sam Rayburn, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers.

Miss Eleanor Ryan Visits in Wilmington

Miss Eleanor Ryan is spending the week-end in Wilmington, Del., with her brother, Joseph Ryan. She will return to the Capital Monday.

With Cuthbert Train, of Washington, Miss Ryan was winner of the tennis tournament at Gibson Island over Memorial Day week-end.

Swedish Charge, Wife Find That the Fair Is Fun

Plainly enjoying their visit to the New York World's Fair are the Charge d'Affaires of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Folke Wennerberg, above. They stopped over to look at the World of Tomorrow while in New York to see their children sail for a four-month visit to Sweden. Now back in Washington, they are getting ready to take part in the welcome to Their Majesties, the King and Queen of England. During their stay at the fair, the Wennerbergs were entertained in the executive lounge of the Ford Exposition

Franklin, Jr., Wedding Usher

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., will be an usher at the wedding on Saturday, June 24, of Miss Margaret Delano, who is a cousin of President Roosevelt, and A. J. Drexel Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Paul, of Radnor, Pa. The ceremony will take place at the home of the future bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. Lyman Delano, at Tarrytown-on-Hudson.

Miss Delano, whose engagement was announced last April, will have among her attendants Mrs. Franklin B. Lord, jr., Miss Patsy Grant, Miss Frances Ellen Clark, Miss Ann Paul, sister of the prospective bridegroom; Mrs. Arthur Willing Patterson, a sister of the future bride; Mrs. Bernard Ridder, another sister, and Miss Emelyn T. Leonard.

Trophies Donated For Horse Show

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth is among the donors of trophies in the form of silver goblets, service plates and pitchers, to the Washington Horse Show, which given annually under the auspices of the Junior League, will open today and continue through Sunday. Mrs. Longworth's young daughter, Paulina, is an enthusiastic equestrienne, and when she is in town usually rides in the junior events of the horse show.

Other trophy donors include Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the Senator from New Jersey; Col. George S. Patton, jr., commandant of Fort Myer; John H. Wilkins, jr., Keith Merrill, Dr. William McClennan, Horace Luttrell, John O. Gheen and several Washington business concerns

Dwight Davises Making Brief Stay At Hot Springs

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis and the former's daughters, the Misses Helen and Cynthia Davis, are sojourning at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va., a favorite mountain resort for members of Capital society.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis will return to the Capital next Wednesday in time to attend the garden party at the British Embassy on Thursday. Mrs. Davis will go shortly afterward to Southampton, Long Island, to open her summer home Bayberry Land.

Col. Halsey Fetes British Envoy

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, was guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon given by Col. Edwin Halsey, secretary of the Senate. Virginia fish presented to Col. Halsey by Col. Eugene Dugger, of Newport News, Va., was the piece de resistance of the menu.

Other guests at the luncheon were Senators Harry F. Byrd, Alben Barkley, Henry F. Ashurst and Homer T. Bone.

The event followed conferences between the Ambassador and members of the Congressional reception committee in preparation for the visit of the King and Queen of England.

Simon Michelet Gives Dinner for Hardings

Simon Michelet entertained at dinner at the terrace of the Shoreham last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Harding, of St. Paul, Minn., and Mrs. Harding's son, Richard Downing, who was graduated earlier in the day from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Representative and Mrs. Melvin Maas, of Minnesota, were among the guests. Others included Mr. and Mrs. Karl Michelet, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wilson, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hallan Huffman, Mrs. Henry Miller, of St. Paul, and Miss Caroline Schaffle.

Charles Remey To Fete Couple

Charles Mason Remey will entertain informally this afternoon in the garden of his home on Massachusetts avenue in honor of Miss Ray Williams and his nephew, Ensign John Remey Wadleigh, U. S. N., whose marriage will take place tomorrow at noon in Washington Cathedral.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Brig. Gen. Seth Williams, of the United StaSes Marine Corps, and Mrs. Williams. Ensign Wadleigh is the son of Mr. Remey's sister, Mrs. John Winthrop Wadleigh, and the late Lieut. Col. Wadleigh, of the United States Marine Corps.

Ensign Wadleigh is a grandson of the late Rear Admiral George H Wadleigh and of the late Rear Admiral George C. Remey, of the United StSates Navy. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy, class of 1937.

Miss Cockrell Gives Luncheon

Miss Martha Allison Cockrell entertained at luncheon yesterday honoring Miss Virginia Berle, whose marriage to Lieut. J. Weaver will take place on June 21. The bride-elect is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. C. K. Berle.

Among those present were the Misses Matile Griswold, Edna May Miller, Margaret Taffinder, Betty Meyers, Rosalie Fahey, Arly Barnette, Evelyn Marshall, Jean White and Carol Fries.
B. A. Cockrell.

John Logan Entertains Watsons at Dinner

John A. Logan was host at dinner at the Shoreham Terrace last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Watson, of Dallas, Tex., who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Wilber.

Also in the company were representative Dudley White, Judge and Mrs. John C. Dockweiler, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Guider, Gen. and Mrs. Richard C. Marshall, jr., Miss Evelyn Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson T. Hartson, Eugene O'Dunne and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Netherlands Envoy Believes Weather Man, Moves Party Indoors—Forecast Correct

THE NETHERLANDS ENVOY, a man in a million who really has faith in the prophecies of the Weather Bureau, was justified yesterday afternoon. An hour before the tea which he and Mme. Loudon gave at the legation he phoned the bureau for a report, and on getting ominous news, dutifully brought into the house all the tables and chairs which he and his pretty wife had carefully placed in the garden behind the legation. And then the heavens opened.

"Won't it be awful if the same thing happens a week from today" was the anxious comment of everybody there who is also asked to the royal garden party at the British Embassy. Yes, yes, that's still the main topic of discussion at Capital tea parties—in fact, we heard of a group of ladies who devoted an entire afternoon to wondering out loud just why a Mr. and Mrs. X had been asked and they hadn't.

THIS WAS Mme. Loudon's first party since her arrival here. An American, she is tall, blonde and refreshingly natural. Wearing a flowered black chiffon frock, street length, she welcomed the guests in the drawing room while the Minister mingled about in the dining room.

Yesterday's reception was a typical mingling of ojcial and residential society—which means that among those present were:

Mrs. Cordell Hull, in a green print with matching hat, who says she's looking forward to leaving on Tuesday to meet the King and Queen at Niagara Falls . . . The Portuguere Minister and Mme. Bianchi, the latter fanning herself until the breeze coming in from the garden began to cocol things off . . . Frau Wennerberg, who always looks fresh on even the hottest days wearing a navy-blue frock and a little white hat . . . Mrs. Claude Pepper chatting with Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, who arrived wth Mrs. Ernest Draper.

JORGEN GALBE, Counselor of the Norwegian legation, telling a friend that he and Mme. Galbe and tneir children are planning a trip to California by motor in August . . . Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, in a pink and black frock and a tiny pink hat—she leaves June 12 for aer summer home at New Bedford, Mass. . . . Miss Marian Trumbull, in a black and white print and small black hat, and Miss Rebecca Wellington, rushing off so as to be on time for the dinner given last night by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean . . . Mrs. Frank Simonds and Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock . . . Mrs. Laurence Townsend back again after several months in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet keeping th hostess company when she sat down at the end of the party to have some ice cream . . . Robert Coe leaving with Mrs. Edward Burling and Miss Anne Perin . . . Mrs. Emil Hurja, who came on from a "reunion" tea given by Mrs Harry Hawes for those who made the Congressional junket to the Philippines two or three years ago . . . Mrs. Philip Coffin, in a green print and Mrs. Warren Barbour in smark black and white . . . Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke chatting with the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Mol-kamp . . . the Councelor and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, the latter in a white dress and red hat . . . Mrs. C. Mathews Dick in a black flowered print and smart white straw hat, which veered sharply up at one side, and had a black bow in back . . . Mrs. Loy Henderson and may others.

"CALIFORNIA, here we come," might well be the theme song of Capital society this summer. Every other person seems to be planning a trip to the West Coast. Mrs. Wallacch Merriam hopes to visit Mrs. George Marye there, and Angus Malcolm, of the British Embassy, will leave late in August for a tour of the country all the way to the Pacific. The annual fiesta in beautiful Santa Barbara will lure Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell westward. For the last eight or ten years this picturesque event has been held at full-moon time in August. Cars are not allowed on the streets, wheih are given over to dancing day and night, and there are Wild West rodeos and parades galore. Mrs. Walter White, who comes originally from Santa Barbara, is thinking about taking a house there for the summer. Another Santa Barbaran, Marcia Umbsen, will leave in June to spend the warm months at her mother's home. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Baroness Baeyens, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, and Lawrence Wood Rorert, jr., are others California bound.

Mr. and Mrs. George Howe are being truly original and spending the summer in the East. Mrs. Howe will leave June 12 to poen their house in Bristol, R. I., and will come back here to picck up her two youna daughters and take them to the World's Fair.

BARON Mario Bucovich will give a tea on Tuesday from 5 to 8 to celebrate the opening of an exhibition of his photographs that day at the lodge of the Walter Schoellkoepf place on Macomb street. He will show some work he did while traveling up the anciote River in the wilderness of West Florida, and also some portraits. His subjects include Capt. John Gibbons, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Demarest Lloyd, jr., Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss and her baby daughter and Miss Evalyn McLean.

Mrs. Ellender Serves Coffee To Congress Set

Party Starts at 10:30; Guests Have a True Southern Feast

By Elizabeth Ford.

Proposition: Given a party before noon, and a circumference of the hottest weather Washington has mopped through this season, prove that society could and did make a straight line toward Mrs. Allen J. Ellender's "morning coffee," yesterday's fete unique.

Q. E. D.: Nearly everybody was on hand by 11 o'clock (doors were open at 10:30) and there was still a good-sized crowd in Mrs. Ellender's Sixteenth street apartment by 12:30.

Corollary: Mrs. Ellender's well-known hospitality, plus a buffet that included in addition to four-star demi tasse, fried grits with strawberry jam, pork sausages, doughnuts, oatmeal cookies, Confederate coffee cake.

Party Strikes Unusual Note

"Morning coffee," a Southern institution that ought to have taken Washington before this, was Mrs. Ellender's answer to a season surfeited with the more usual teas, dinners and "at homes." Explained the wife of the Senator from Louisiana, "I wanted to have a final chat with my Congressional friends before they started trekking home for the summer, and I thought this might be the nicest way to do it."

Judging from the number of guests who turned out, they wanted to chat with Mrs. Ellender, too.

Mrs. Ernest Lundeen arrived carrying an umbrella and saying, "It felt like rain." Everyone else agreed with her, positively deciding that too much sun could be as bad as too little. And some of the ladies from the Southern delegation added a local-color touch with their fans. This, plus the white magnolias in their silver bowls, the French windows leading out on a balcony, and Mrs. Ellender's Louisiana cook, with her bright bandana, set the scene for a real New Orleans party.

Mrs. Ellender In Print Frock

Mrs. Ellender, wearing a cool figured print with a little lace collar, received informally . . . "because this is a very informal event."

Glimpsed among the many, many present were Mrs. Morris Sheppard in a black frock with white accents and a white hat; Mrs. Albert Thomas, in a pink dress and pink hat; Mrs. William T. Byrne, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, in pink and green, and Mrs. Walter F. George, wearing a black dress with white polka dots and a wide-brimmed hat of white straw with narrow red bands.

Also Mrs. Edward R. Burke in dark blue, with a touch of lighter blue on her hat; Miss Jane Grunwall, of Louisiana; Mrs. Ollie James, whose hat was of cherry red; Mrs. Pete Jarman, in a white dress trimmed in green; Mrs. Anthony Pou Wadden, Mrs. Clarence J. Bourg, in yellow; Mrs. Lewis Hurst, Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard in white.

Still others were Mrs. Albert Jones, Mrs. Overton Brooks, in green; and the diplomat's wife most seen at Congressional affairs—Mme. Constantine Oumansky, whose husband is the Soviet Ambassador.

Mrs. Seaton Gives Luncheon

Poets and poetry made up most of the table talk yesterday when Mrs. Arthur J. Seaton entertained at a luncheon in honor of Ida Elaine James (Mrs. Albert James), whose second book of verse, "The Deathless Flower," recently was published. The party took place at the Washington Club, and a number of the guests were writers.

Featured on the program following the luncheon was Mrs. James, who read the title poem of her book and a number of other selections.

Among those in the company were Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, Mrs. Edward B. Clark, Mrs. Gerritt S. Miller, Miss Marguerite Carter, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, Mrs. John Denby Hird, Mrs. Hugo Hesselbach, Miss Minna Niemann, Miss Harriet Chambers, Mme. Blanca Renard, and Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, Texas poet, who is the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

Morgenthaus Entertain

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., entertained at dinner last evening, honoring Mrs. Morgenthau's brother-in-law and sister, Prof. and Mrs. Werner Josten. The Josten's were overnight guests of the Morgenthaus.

Heard—Raymond Wedding Takes Place Tomorrow

Harris & Swins.
LUCIE ELLEN HEARD

The wedding of Miss Lucie Ellen Heard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Heard, of Washington, to William T. Raymond, son of Mrs. William M. Raymond, of New York, will take place tomorrow morning at 10:30 in the Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral. The Rev. E. M. Thompson will officiate, and a breakfast at the Shoreham will follow the ceremony.

Miss Dorothy Hutchison will be maid of honor and only attendant of the bride, and James Allen will be best man. After a motor trip through Canada, the couple will live in Lyon Village.

Miss Willa Magee, Capt. David Walker To Wed in Fall

The wedding of Miss Willa Magee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Magee, of Ottawa, to Capt. David Walker, aide-de-camp to Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, will take place next fall in Canada. Their engagement was recently made known.

Miss Magee formerly served as social secretary to Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister here, and visited Washington for several weeks this spring.

Miss Magee was presented to Queen Elizabeth on Her Majesty's recent stay in Ottawa.

Miss Nora Magee, who has succeeded her sister as Lady Marler's secretary, will go to Canada shortly to spend the summer with her family and will make the acquaintance of her future brother-in-law for the first time. Capt. Walker is a member of the Scotish 'Black Watch" Regiment.

Miss Bernice Smith Wedded To Lieut. Hinckley in Honolulu

St. Andrews Cathedral in Honolulu yesterday afternoon was the scene of a wedding of wide interest to Washington when Miss Bernice M. Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Smith, of Honolulu, became the bride of Ieut. (j. g.) Robert M. Hinckley, jr., son of Commander and Mrs. R. M. Hinckley, of Washington.

Hawaiian floral decorations, white ginger and maile, were banked against the altar before which the Rev. Dean Ault officiated at 5:30 o'clock. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white marquisette, made with a train, a tight bodice and a full skirt. A heart-shaped neckline, short puffed sleeves and tiny buttons down the back were other features of her wedding frock.

The bride's long tulle veil fell from a cap of real lace, which was worn by the bridegroom's mother. The cap was held by a white butterfly orchid, matching the blossoms in the bride's bouquet, made of white orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Robert Lowrey, the matron of honor, wore pale blue marquisette, trimmed with blue lace. Her corsage was of blue delphinium and gardenias; and she were gardenias in her hair. Other attendants were Miss Helene Gibb, and Mrs. Douglas Thompson, whose frocks were similar to that of the matron of honor.

Robert Taylor, jr., trimly turned out in a white satin suit, was ring bearer.

Lieut. (j. g.) W. H. Cheney was best man, and ushers included Lieut. M. H. Bertholf, Ensign W. S. Stevens, Ensign W. K. Kaufman, Lieut. W. S. Hyland, A. E. Kilhefner and Lieut. G. H. Zuska.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the party taking place on the lawn where a Hawaiian stringed band, Japanese servants in bright kimonas, and Kahila torches lighted at dusk added colorful notes to the scene.

The couple will sail today on the "Lurline" for this country and will come to Washington to visit the bridegroom's parents. Later, they will go to Pensacola, Fla., where Lieut. Hinckley will take a course in flight training.

The bride is a graduate of the Punahou School, Honolulu, and spent several months studying in Europe. Recently she has been engaged in occupational therapy work in Queen's Hospital, Honolulu. Her father, a retired naval officer (lieutenant commander), now practices medicine in Honolulu.

Petworth Club Is 25 Years Old

Birthday Observed With Banquet and Pageant Depicting Its History

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The Petworth Club last night celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel attended by 125 members and guests. A pageant depicting the history of the club in five-year cycles was presented preceding the lighting of the first candle on the birthday cake by Mrs. Annie M. Baden, a charter member, who is 97 years old.

Mrs. Oscar Nelson, retiring president, lighted the other 24 candles as charter members and past presidents gave brief greetings. The charter members, in addition to Mrs. Baden, were Mrs. A. C. Norcross, who wrote the club history included in the silver-covered souvenir programs; Mrs. W. T. Norton, also a past president; Mrs. Frank H. Schwartz, Mrs. W. A. Winklehaus, another past president; Mrs. R. E. Adams, Mrs. F. A. Frenald, Mrs. Charles Perley Smith and Miss Minnie O. Garland.

The pageant was written by Mrs. Leafie Dietz, who also took the role of a prophetess. Muriel Edwards, granddaughter of Mrs. A. N. Jones, represented the era in which civic activities were at their height in the club; Nancy Miller, granddaughter of Mrs. R. E. Holm, a past president, represented the hope for a clubhouse and entered carrying the model of the dream structure. Members contributed silver dollars to the clubhouse fund, putting them in the chimney.

Mrs. Leonard Russie, one of the younger members of the club, represented the petition for the Petworth Library. The next cycle was activity in the Penny Art Fund, represented by Miss Mildred Conway. The final cycle was the completion of the library, depicted by Mrs. Nelson. Mrs. Ellis Logan was there in person as the godmother of the club.

The birthday cake was cut by Mrs. Raymond H. LeCraw, who has served for two terms as publicity chairman.

Guests of honor in addition to Mrs. Logan were Mrs. Ernest Daniel and Mrs. Winifred H. Butts, daughter of the club founder. Three life members (a distinction given to all over 80 years old) were present, Mrs. Baden, Mrs. Martha Wiltberger and Mrs. Lucy Hall.

At the close of the program, Mrs. Nelson presented the incoming officers, Mrs. Frank Stuart, president; Mrs. Frank MacNaugh, first vice president; Mrs. John Mee, second vice president; Mrs. George Fuller, recording secretary; Mrs. J. S. Rogers, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. A. E. Printz, treasurer.

Mrs. R. F. Hart was general chairman of the banquet, assisted by Mrs. A. M. Smith, Mrs. T. S. Tincher and Mrs. Norcross.

Takoma and Petworth Clubs End Their Seasons

Columnists To Be Feted

A columnists' ball, to which prominent columnists are being invited as guests of honor, has been announced by the Newspaper Women's Club as its annual benefit for the maintenance of a bed in Children's Hospital and the club's fellowship fund. It will be given at the Shoreham Terrace, June 21.

Mrs. Roosevelt, an honorary member of the club and a columnist in her own right, is one of the sponsors. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., an associate member, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the affair; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, an associate member, and wife of the publisher of The Post, is chairman of hostesses and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Times-Herald, chairman of patronesses.

Helene Livingston Kravatz is general chairman of the ball; Margaret Germond, chairman of reservations, and Helen Fetter Cook, of publicity.

French Envoy Students' Host

The French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, yesterday received members of the Alliance Francaise and prize-winning French students from the public and private schools of the Capital at a garden party at the embassy.

Although the guests gathered in the garden, no sooner had the party begun than a deluge of rain sent them inside. Within a few minutes tea was being served in the dining room as though the weather had caused no interruption.

Among those present were the officers of the Alliance Francaise in Washington, Lynch Luquer, the president; Mrs. John M. Biddle, a vice president; Nelson Darton, also a vice president, and Mrs. Darton, and Mme. Blanche Bimont, who is secretary and treasurer of the organization.

Among others in the large company were Miss Edith Hoyt, Lady Leslie, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Charles S. Alden, Lady Rackett, Mrs. G. W. Dugger, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Berry, Dr. Frances A. Foye, Mrs. James Carroll Fraser, a former president; Dr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. George S. Becker, Miss Harriet Winslow, Mrs. John C. Proctor, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Baroness Van Pagenhardt.

Hold Annual Banquet

The annual banquet of the Alumnae Association of Holy Cross Academy was held in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel last night. Miss Regina Hartnett, president, appointed Mrs. Agnes Walter Heister general chairman, and those assisting in the arrangements were Miss Mae O'Brien, Mrs. Jane Bradshaw Skinner, Miss Hilda Ruppert, Mrs. Rosalie Kerfoot Millard and Mrs. Agnes Downey Rice.

Hazel Nielson to Address Luncheon Meeting Tomorrow at Olney Inn

THE WASHINGTON CHAPTER of the International Council for Exceptional Children will hold its annual spring luncheon tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock at Olney Inn. Miss Hazel B. Nielson, director of educational activities of the U. S. Sesquicentennial Commission, will be guest speaker, and the president, Miss Sarah Martz, will preside at the luncheon.

Among the guests who will attend will be Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Robert L. Haycock, Miss Ida Lind, Miss Elizabeth Hummber, Miss Grace Lind and Miss Florence Rogers.

THE PORTRAIT COMMITTEE of the American Red Cross has issued invitations for a tea Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Red Cross Chapter House, 1730 E street, at which presentation will be made to the D. C. Chapter of a portrait of Miss Mabel T. Boardman. While directing the activities of the national organization, in her capacity as executive secretary, Miss Boardman has continued her work with the local chapter as chairman of volunteer service through the entire period of her distinguished leadership.

MISS SIRI MANNEGARD, a Swedish Red Cross Nurse from Stockholm, spent Wednesday at the Chapter House observing local Red Cross work. During her visit she attended a class in home hygiene and care of the sick and gave a brief talk to the members of the class. Miss Mannegard, a graduate of the Swedish Red Cross Hospital, has spent the past nine months in the United States on a combined study and recreation tour. Part of her time has been devoted to study of nursing and welfare work in this country, her tour having taken her as far as San Francisco

MRS. M. J. HALPERN will be hostess at a tea tomorrow afternoon at her home, 905 Quincy street, at which the Woman's Auxiliary to Argo Lodge, B'Nai B'rith, will launch a junior auxiliary for girls from 15 to 21.

DR. R. B. FORTE, 1309 Park road, has invited the Writers' League to have a social meeting at his home Tuesday night as a close to its season's activities.

THE LAKE ERIE COLLEGE CLUB of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia will meet today at the Woman's University Club at 4:30 p. m. to discuss the program for the coming year.

MISS RUTH SHELDON and Dr. Mildred Dickerson will entertain with a buffet supper at the home of Dr. Dickerson in Belle Haven, Va., tomorrow night at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Florence Sindell will sing and Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith and Mrs. Emily Dickinson will play piano solos. Mrs. Amelia Gude Thomas' three daughters, Catherine, Nancye and Amelia, will dance.

Writers to Fete Mary N. Hawes

The Professional Writers' Club will honor one of its members, Miss Mary Nesbitt Hawes, recently back from an eight months' sojourn in Europe, at a tea this afternoon on the roof garden of the Y. W. C. A.

During the crisis Miss Hawes' letters on the European situation appeared regularly in The Post. Her trip last summer was her fifth to the continent. While a student at the Windsor School in Boston, she won the coveted Sorbonne Fellowship, which carries a year's study in Paris. Another summer was spent at the University of Geneva. A visit to the Balkan Peninsula so augmented Miss Hawes' interest in this troubled region that her thesis at Radcliffe College was written on "The Little Entente." She lives in Belle Haven, Alexandria, Va.

A musicale will be presented in connection with the tea by Norman Frauenheim, concert pianist, who will give a program of Chopin and Debussy numbers. A pupil of Paderewski in Paris and Stojowski in New York, Mr. Frauenheim is one of Washington's leading teachers and concert pianists. He has just completed a tour of 22 appearances, marked by a recital last December at the Sulgrave Club in this city.

Takoma Park Woman's Club Closes Season

Mrs. Paul W. Burk, New President, and Other Officers Installed

The Takoma Park Woman's Club yesterday closed its season with its annual luncheon at the clubhouse of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase. Installation of new officers, Mrs. Paul W. Burke succeeding Mrs. Walter P. Harman as president, was a feature of the occasion following a program of music, readings and dances.

Other new officers include Mrs. Gilbert Sward, first vice president; Mrs. G. E. Robertson, second vice president; Mrs. Frank A. Nichols, recording secretary; Mrs. Benjamin E. Abbott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William L. Holt, treasurer, and Mrs. Harman, Mrs. F. A. Shumaker and Mrs. Frank A. Richmond, directors.

The program included songs by the club choral group under the direction of Mrs. Edmund L. Green, with Mrs. Waldo Schmitt as accompanist; readings by Mrs. D. C. Gordon, and dances by pupils of Marie Bozievich.

Guests of honor were Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, director to the national federation, and Mrs. Harold Heffner, president of the Junior Woman's Club. Past presidents attending the luncheon included Mrs. Biddle, Mrs. C. B. Smith, Mrs. Frederick C. Lincoln and Mrs. Alexander Wetmore.

Story League To Banquet Tomorrow Night

The Washington Story League will hold its annual banquet at the Dodge Hotel tomorrow night at 6:30.

The president, Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell, will preside, and Mrs. Harry G. Keffer, of Marysville, Pa., president of the National Story League, will be the guest of honor and will present a program of stories.

Mrs. Keffer will come to Washington from similar league banquets in Richmond and Baltimore earlier in the week.

'Shocking,' Says Swede of Signs On U. S. Roads

Countryside Marred, World Auto Club Conference Here Told

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The American custom of advertising with billboards and electric signs along the major highways was described as "shocking" yesterday when 79 foreign delegates to the International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs opened two-day sessions at the Shoreham Hotel.

In Sweden, said Fritz Egnell, representative of the Swedish Auto Club, roadside advertising is forbidden. "It is a pity," said Egnell, "the way you in the United States permit unsightly advertising to mar the beauty of your countryside."

But the United States, he added, is far ahead of Sweden and many other foreign countries in solution of the traffic problem in general.

Unified Driving Codes Urged

The convention heard Count Hadelin de Liedekerke-Beaufort, vice president, describe efforts to unify driving codes throughout the world. He said the United States is one of the few countries which have failed to recognize international auto tags. Count de Liedekerke stressed the need for world-wide uniformity of traffic direction and warning signs.

Following opening sessions, the International commission o n traffic and customs discussed simplification of customs documents used in the international movement of passenger vehicles and approved a proposal by Hjalmar Procope, Minister of Finland, for special customs documents and passports for motorists driving to the Olympic games next year.

Roosevelt Message Heard

The convention heard two messages of welcome, one from President Roosevelt and one from Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, sponsors of the meeting. President Roosevelt said in part:

"Travel contributes conspicuously to the stimulation of the spirit of understanding and good-will among the peoples of the world, and it is my sincere hope that your work at this conference will further the promotion of international friendship which we all so devoutly desire."

Delegates and their wives were received at the White House yesterday by Mrs. Roosevelt and last night attended a concert at the Pan American Union as guest of Dr. L. S. Rowe. Sesisons wil be resumed today.

Garrett Sullivan Is Dead at 68

Garrett A. Sullivan, 68, retired owner of a Washington delivery service, died yesterday at his home, 1309 Holly street northwest. He had been ill several years.

A native of Washington, Mr. Sullivan was a member of the Holy Name Society. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. May Sullivan, and his daughter, Pauline Sullivan.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow at the home. Mass will be said at the Church of the Nativity at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Roaches Around the Kitchen Sink?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep the floor under the sink always clean and dry—free of food particles and dampness. That's what attracts bugs. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it behind the sink and around the openings where the pipes go through the floor. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under the wall boards. When the roaches come out, give them another dose of powder. Third, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder in the path where the roaches travel. As young roaches crawl through it they will pick up enough killing particles to kill them. Repeat these directions at weekly intervals, and your kitchen will soon be free of roaches.

Bee Brand really kills roaches, ants and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use around the home. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 50¢.

NOTE: You can also kill roaches and ants, as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

Senate Votes Purchase of Tenn. Power

Authority Given TVA in Rider to Treasury Bond Bill

The Senate yesterday approved a Treasury request for removal of the present $30,000,000,000 limitation on long-term bonds, after adding a rider authorizing the TVA to purchase Tennessee Electric Power Co. properties.

The Treasury bond action, in no way altering the present total $45,000,000,000 debt limitation, removes the present dividing line between Treasury bonds and short-term Treasury bills and notes. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said it was economically advisable to issue a larger proportion of bonds and fewer bills and notes.

It was Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, TVA "father," who offered the TVA bond rider on the bill in an admitted effort to force a House vote on power for the TVA to carry out its agreements to purchase private utility properties.

House Must Act on TVA

The Treasury bill already has passed the House, but the TVA authorization to use $45,000,000 of a $100,000,000 TVA bond issue to pay for private power facilities has been tied up in the House Military Affairs Committee. The bill passed by the Senate yesterday must go back to the House for a vote on the TVA rider.

The Senate approved the Norris amendment 44 to 23 after the Nebraskan declared that without it the contract made by TVA for purchase of the Tennessee Electric Power Co., property "will be lost."

Total value of the properties to be purchased is $78,600,000, with municipalities using TVA power putting up the difference between that amount and the $45,000,000 supplied by TVA.

Vandenberg Comments

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, contended the rider would legalize the TVA contract, and would authorize the TVA to issue bonds to raise money to purchase prviately owned utilities elsewhere.

Vandenberg did not oppose lifting the Treasury's $30,000,000,000 bond limitation, but asserted it would merely "postpone the evil day."

Treasury bonds now outstanding total $28,302,973,181; within $1,697,026,819 of the existing $30,000,000,000 limit. Another $11,653,555,700 in Treasury notes, bills and certificates are outstanding, leaving the amount of all types of obligations that could be issued $5,043,471,119. By removing the bond limitation, the Treasury could issue this balance entirely in bonds if it chose, or meet maturing notes with bond issues.

Meantime, Morgenthau announced the Treasury will borrow no money this year, but will offer a new five-year note to holders of $426,554,600 worth of one and three-eights per cent Treasury notes which mature September 15. Terms of the refunding issue will be announced Monday.

The Secretary of the Treasury described present cash resources as "ample' 'and said that word should be underlined. He said the $2,264,760,293 cash working balance in the Treasury was sufficient to meet the difference between income and expenditures at least until the next regular financing date, September 15.

Gaston Named To Taylor's Treasury Post

Long-Time Associate Of Morgenthau to Be Assistant Secretary

By the Associated Press.

Herbert E. Gaston, of Oregon and New York, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Gaston, who has been special assistant to Secretary Morganthau, would succeed Wayne Taylor, fiscal assistant secretary, who resigned about six months ago.

The new appointee takes a $1,000 cut in pay with the higher ranking job. He had received $10,000 a year as an assistant to Morgenthau.

Gaston will be 58 in August. He is a native of Halsey, Ore., and came to Washington after serving with the New York Conservation Commission.

He was interested for many years in the Non-Partisan League movementin North Dakota and was editor of the Non-Partisan Courier News at Fargo, N. Dak. From 1922 to 1931 he was associated with the New York World.

When Morgenthau became conservation commissioner of New York State, he made Gaston deputy and later brought Gaston to Washington as his deputy when Morgenthau became governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

William Jacoby, Printing Office Employe, Dies

William I. Jacoby, 65, a machinist at the Government Printing Office and a former musician, died yesterday at his home, 219 Rhode Island avenue northeast, after a long illness.

Mr. Jacoby, who came to Washington 45 years ago, was known to the public for his many engagements at downtown theaters.

He was a member of the Naval Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; the Lebanon Lodge of Masons and the Shrine. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rose F. Jacoby; his daughter, Mrs. Geraldine B. Walsh; two brothers, Harry and Howard Jacoby, and two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Harris and Mrs. Esther Anderson. Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Bessie Milans' Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Bessie Gaines Milans, wife of Henry G. Milans, manager of the Georgetown Press, were held yesterday at her home, 1507 Crittenden street northwest, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Milans died Tuesday in Homeopathic Hospital after an illness of six days. She was born in Prince William County of an old Virginia family, and came to Washington as a little girl. She was active in charity work and the Eastern Star, as well as the Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons, Edward M. and Henry G., jr.; her father, Thomas M. Botts; two brothers, John M. and Morris R. Botts, and a sister, Mrs. Eva Fairfax Fischer, all of this city.

Nats' 18-Hit Attack Defeats White Sox, 10-7

Krakauskas Saves Game In Relief

Estalella, Wright Lead Hit Barrage; Lewis Raps Homer; Leonard Is Victor

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 1.—Disguised as the Nats—losers of five straight to the White Sox this season—a team wearing Washington uniforms today mobbed four unsuspecting Chicago pitchers for 18 hits and made away with a 10-7 victory.

These Nats slugged it out with the White Sox. They were a free-swinging, lunging, home-run hitting outfit today and before the Chicagoans were properly squared away, the metamorphosed Washington athletes had a 9-1 lead. After that, the Sox made a battle of it, but the Nats, as the saying goes, hung in there, despite six Chicago runs in the last four innings.

Little Bobby Estalella, now a fixture in leftfield, led the assault on Ed Smith, Johnny Whitehead, Vic Frasier and Clint Brown. He pounded a double against the wall, he singled to left, he singled to center and he beat out a bunt to fatten his batting average with four hits.

Wright Stars

Taft Wright, with his pair of doubles and a single, and Charley Gelbert, with three one-base blows, were not exactly drawbacks to the Nats, either. And Buddy Lewis found the time to blast his first home run of the season into the upper rightfield bleachers by way of joining the fun.

It was well, however, that the Nats scored all those runs, because big Dutch Leonard, who eventually received credit for the victory, was no ball of fire on the mound this afternoon. The White Sox abused his knuckle ball to the extent of 14 hits, and when they produced five runs in the sixth and seventh innings, Joe Krakauskas was waved to the mound.

Krakky held the Sox to one lonesome run in the last two and two-thirds innings and tossed three important strike-outs into the proceedings. In the ninth, with one Chicago run across the plate and two men on base, Krakky flipped a third strike past Pinch-hitter Jackie Hayes, for a final out that sent the 3,000 customers away from the park muttering.

The White Sox had a 1-0 lead at the end of the second inning in which Kreevich had doubled off the left field wall and Owen had singled, but at the end of the next inning the score read "Washington 5; Chicago 1."

The Nats packed five hits into that inning against little Smitty, the left-hander claimed by the Sox from the Athletics. They filled the bases in a hurry with Case drawing a walk and Estalella and Lewis batting out singles. Taft Wright, a fair guy in the pinch, doubled two runs across the plate and Lewis also scored when Kreevich made a wild throw in returning Wright's hit. Singles by Charley Gelbert and Rick Ferrell produced the fourth and fifth runs of the inning.

Four hits were packed into the fourth inning, but the Nats came up with only one run because Estalella, who led off by beating out a bunt, was caught stealing. They got the run on Wright's double and a pair of singles by Gelbert and Myer.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 1.—Want to know some more about Alex Alexandra, the Nats' virulent Venezuelan? Well, he was an automobile mechanic down in his native Caracas until he discovered they paid people for throwing baseballs. He's no green pea. Been pitching around Venezuela, Santo Domingo, Puerto Rico and Cuba for 12 years, winter and summer. Says he'll be 27 years old on July 24, and you may believe that if you like.

POVICH

He's pretty close to being Venezuela's national hero at this writing. The low-hit games he's been pitching for Washington haven't been lost on the home folks in the petroleum fields down Caracas way. They get the play-by-play description of every ball game that Alex pitches, direct from the ball park by cable, no kidding. Venezuelan newspapers are sharing the heavy tolls. The Standard Oil Co., with large holdings in Venezuela, has turned loose its publicity department on the story of Alex and ordered a large batch of pictures of him in a Washington uniform for distribution through the country.

He's not a low paid rookie with the Washington club, despite the fact he is a first-year man. When he was playing in Cuba last season, he was being paid $800 a month, and forced the Nats to come across with more dough. Joe Rodriguez, the grizzled old Cuban who once played with the New York Giants, recommended Alex to the Nats and will profit handsomely if he proves no flash in the pan. Joe Cambria, the Nats' scout credited with digging up Alex, had nothing to do with bringing him to the Nats.

Big Leaguers Weren't Strangers to Alex

Fact is that when Alex encountered difficulty with the immigration officials at Tampa, Fla., as he attempted to enter the United States in February, the Washington club nearly gave up on him. They finally agreed to post the $400 bond to guarantee that he "would not become a public charge."

He wasn't seeing big leaguers in action for the first time when he joined up with the Nats in Florida. He had been playing with 'em and against 'em for years, which accounts for his surprising poise on the mound. In Puerto Rico and Havana winter leagues he was pitching against such as George McQuinn, first baseman of the Browns, Baxter Jordan, former Boston Bee, and a half dozen other big leaguers, including Johnny Mize, of the Cardinals.

Alex says he learned more about the art of pitching from Burleigh Grimes than from anybody else. Used to watch Grimes closely when the old spitballer was barnstorming in the Central American countries. George Earnshaw was pitching for Santo Domingo, too, last year, and Alex says they paid Earnshaw $10,000 for pitching twice a week in that league.

As far back as 1934, Mike Gonzales, the Cardinals' Cuban coach, wrote Alex a letter asking him to come to Bradenton, Fla., for a tryout with the Cards, but nothing was said about salary so Alex didn't like the idea. He decided he'd just putter around the Central American leagues.

If he ever learns to speak English, it will be surprising. He seems definitely antagonistic toward the language. But his unfamiliarity with the American tongue doesn't seem to handicap him much out there on the mound where he acts as if he knows all the answers. Bucky Harris has never been forced to correct him for any pitching faults, because he doesn't appear to have any.

Keeps Close Tabs on Box Scores

He can read the box scores and the figures in them. He keeps a close tab on how everybody in the league is hitting, because he knows he'll meet up with 'em sooner or later. He gets his best ideas of how to pitch to the different hitters by watching them in pre-game batting practice and making mental notes. Through an interpreter he says the only way to pitch to Joe Di Maggio is low and outside, that Jimmy Foxx swings only for singles when he has two strikes on him, and that a slow curve inside will stop Ted Williams, of the Red Sox.

He may be right about Williams. When he faced the Red Sox in Washington two weeks ago, Alex struck out Williams on a curve so slow he could have been charged with delaying the game.

When the Nats move into New York on July 4 for a game with the Yankees, it will be Independence Day to American citizens, but for the Venezuelan Consul and New York's Venezuelans it will be "Alexandra Day." They will make a presentation to him in ceremonies at home plate.

He didn't like to lose that first game of the double-header with the Athletics on Decoration Day in Washington, after allowing four hits. After the game he went to Manager Bucky Harris and offered to pitch the second game, too. Told Harris that in Venezuela he pitched four days a week.

That home run he hit against the Athletics that day may have surprised the 16,000 people in the park, but it didn't surprise Alex. While at bat, you see, he raised his arms until they weren't in his line of vision, and stole the sign for the fast ball he smacked into the bleachers. No kidding.

Helen Jacobs Wins English Net Play

Birmingham, England, June 1 (AP).—Helen Jacobs won the Priory tennis singles tournament today, defeating Mrs. Ronald Ellis, the former Anita Lizana, of Chile, 6—2, 6—3.

Miss Jacobs led 3-1 first set but Mrs. Ellis pulled up even only to have the American girl again take command and run out the set. Miss Jacobs won the second set virtually as she pleased after Mrs. Ellis started off with a 2-0 lead.

Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Ellis teamed to win the doubles, 6—3, 6—3, from Mrs. Dorothy Round Little and Mrs. D. F. Cartwright.

Gomez Hurls, Yanks Trim Indians, 8-3

Senor Vernon Gives 7 Hits in His Best Effort This Spring

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 1.—Senor Vernon (Lefty) Gomez led the New York Yankees to an 8 to 3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians today with a 7-hit pitching job and a couple of timely singles.

Showing his best form of the spring, Gomez gave up only a solitary single in the first seven innings.

The Yankees provided him with more than enough early working margin. They scored twice in the first inning on Frank Crosetti's single, Red Rolfe's double, an infield out and Bill Dickey's sacrifice fly.

But the big barrage—four runs—was reserved for the eighth inning when Rolfe beat out a bunt for his third hit, Dickey and Charley Keller singled, Joe Gordon doubled, Babe Dahlgren was purposely walked to fill the bases, and Gomez singled.

Snead Leads Goodall Golf Play With Plus 11

Wins Five Holes From Revolta, Six From Dutra to Lead Ben Hogan by Two Holes; Jimmy Hines, Guldahl Have Plus Totals

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—Sam Snead, the big hitter from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., raced through the Fresh Meadow Country Club's back nine in 33, three under par, today, and staked a preliminary claim to his year's first prize of $1,000 in the Goodall round-robin golf tournament.

His 33, with birdies on the 587-yard sixteenth and the seventeenth, gave him an 18-hole score of 69, one under par, and gave him the first-round lead with a plus 11 standing. This is based on the fact that Sam won five holes from Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., the lantern-jawed former P. G. A. champion, and six from Olin Dutra, of Los Angeles, who won fame as the "sick man of Merion" in winning the United States open title in 1934.

Only 2 Under Par

Snead and Harry Cooper, of Eastern Point, Conn., also with a 69, were the only players in the field of 15 topnotchers to break par, while only Ben Hogan, the young Texan expatriate from White Plains, N. Y., equaled standard figures with a 70. Hogan took advantage of poor showings by his rivals, Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, and Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., to pile up a second-place total of plus 9. Cooper, finishing 2-up on Walter Hagen and 5-up on Denny Shute, of Huntington, W. Va., placed third with plus 7.

Blond Jimmy Hines, of near-by Great Neck, took three holes each from P. G. A. Champion Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., for plus 6, and Open Champion Ralph Guldahl, just back from practice rounds for next week's championship, was the only other with a showing on the credit side.

The big Madison (N. J.) pro finished 4-up on Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and 1 up on Dick Metz, of Lake Forest, Ill., runner-up

Steal of Home Defeats Cubs, 3-2, in 14th

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 1.—Gene Moore tripled and subsequently stole home in the fourteenth inning tonight to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 3-to-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs with whom they had played a 19-inning 9-9 tie ended by darkness at Chicago May 17.

Moore's triple came with one out and was followed by intentional passes to Dolph Camilli and Babe Phelps filling the bases. The manager Leo Durocher attempted to blunt for a squeeze play. The veteran Charley Root spoiled the plan with a bad ball which Catcher Bob Garbark momentarily fumbled allowing Moore, already nearly to the plate, to score.

For the first six innings the game was a shutout hurling duel between Van Mungo of the Dodgers and Claude Passeau, obtained only this week by the Cubs from the Phillies.

The Dodges punched out two apparently decisive runs in the seventh on a walk to Camilli, a forceout, a single by Durocher and a triple by Johnny Dudson.

However, the Cubs retaliated with two in the ninth to knot the count. A pass to Jimmy Gleeson, doubles by Augie Galan and Carl Reynolds and a sacrifice fly by Glen Russell turned the trick.

Tamulis worked the last 11 innings of the previous marathon with the Cubs and earlier in the season went the full distance in an 11-inning tie game with Philadelphia.

Connie Mack, Hartnett Named Managers for All-Star Game

Selection of Lovable Athletic Pilot Is Surprising

Game to Be Played At Yankee Stadium On July 11

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—Connie Mack, the Athletics' 77-year-old dean of major league managers, and Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, pilot of the Chicago Cubs less than a year, today were named managers of the American and National league teams which will meet in the annual all-star game at the Yankee Stadium July 11.

The announcement of Mack's selection by President Will Harridge of the American League came as a surprise and a tribute to his long service in baseball. In the last few years the managers of the all-star teams have been the pilots of the League champions. If Harridge had followed custom, Joe McCarthy of the Yankees would have been in charge.

"McCarthy himself made the suggestion that Connie be named manager," said Harridge, who met with Commissioner Landis, President Ford Frick of the National League and President Ed Barrow of the Yankees to draw up plans. "Joe thought it would be a good idea and fine tribute to Connie since this is baseball's centennial year."

Frick followed the usual practice in the selection of Hartnett, who guided the Cubs to the 1938 pennant after taking over the reins late last season.

Managing an all-star team will be nothing new to Mack. He was selected by popular vote to head the American Leaguers in the first game at Comiskey Park, Chicago, in 1933. The American League won, 4 to 2. The late John McGraw managed the National League team.

The only other change from other years was the increase of the player limit from 23 to 25 in accord with the leagues' new rule this year. The managers again will select the players, the only restriction being that each club must be represented by at least one player. The pitching assignments will be limited to three innings except in event the game is tied at the end of the ninth. In such case, the manager will be permitted to leave the last hurler in as long as he desires.

Members of the squads will be announced July 1.

The game will start at 12:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time). In event of postponement it will be played at 10 a. m. the following morning.

Max's Cut Mouth Forces Referee To Halt Fight

Lou to Meet Louis-Galento Victor In September; About 20,000 Watch Bloody Battle at Yankee Stadium

By Sid Feder,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 1.—As stubborn as an Army mule and just as tough to handle, Lou Nova shook off Max Baer's "Sunday punches" tonight and beat the former heavyweight king into bloody submission in 11 brutal rounds at the Yankee Stadium before 20,000.

His face dripping blood, his mouth and nose cut, Baer, the madcap playboy who has clowned his way through fistic heights for a decade, came to the end of the trail with a technical knockout defeat at 1 minute, 21 seconds of the eleventh heat. Referee Frank Fullam halted the proceedings with the announcement: "The blood from Max's cut mouth appears to be choking him."

Gets Title Bout

And Nova, shaken up in the early rounds, once so confused from Max's right-hand punches that he walked to the wrong corner at the end of one session, successfully rocketed with the victory to a shot at the heavyweight championship in september. He will meet the winner of the Louis-Galento fight.

But it wasn't so much the fact that the victory shot him to the forefront of the heavyweight ranks that was most impressive, nor that he eliminated the merry madcap from the picture definitely and conclusively. It was his gameness in coming on from those fearful right-hand shots for which Max is famous; taking them and walking right in with both fists flailing—unstoppable and determined that nothing, not even the awful Baer artillery, could stand in his way.

Lou, the Almeda, Calif., former collegian who has come a long way up the road in the past two years, largely through his defeat of Tommy Farr last winter, spotted the curly-haired husky from Livermore, Calif., 8½ pounds—he weighed 202 to Max's 210½—and even that didn't stand in his way.

He waded in from start to finish, connected with a spear-like lebt jab and a short right chop countless times, and, even when hurt, continued to force the fighting. At the finish, his left ear swollen from Baer's right-hand smashes, his right hand injured, and his right eye cut, Nova was still coming on and pitching his punches.

Until the end, Nova held a slight lead through the 10 full rounds the fight went. On the Associated Press scorecard, he had six rounds to four for Maxie. Two heats, the fourth and fifth, were taken away from Nova for hitting low. The seventh was taken from Maxie for clouting Lou after the bell.

Staggers to Corner

This punch almost kayoed Nova, incidentally. He staggered away from it, wandered aimlessly in the center of the ring for just a moment, and then was called to his corner by his handlers.

Through the first three rounds, the pace was terrific. Lou took the first with a furious body attack which started Max to puffing. Max held an upperhand in the second, shaking up Nova with three smashing right hands, but Lou just wagged his head once or twice, and same right on back as though he was

Looks Like Louis Lost A Customer

Nova Would Be an Easy Mark for the Champion—Now

By Bob Considine.

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 1.—Joe Louis, an apparition in a green sports ensemble, sat on a ringside chair tonight at the Yankee Stadium and lost a fight. The fight he lost was the September match with the winner of the Nova-Baer brawl. Nova stopped Baer in an 11-round blood transfusion but the probabilities are that Lou will find more excuses for not fighting the champion, three months hence, than would occur to me, myself, if Louis challenged me.

The Louis-Nova title fight, now listed on the September sports calendar, probably will be fought some time in 1940. Nova is a pug of uncommon wisdom. Not even the hullabaloo over his Baer victory is expected to make him cocky enough to press his fabulous luck, or make him forget that he' not quite ready.

The Nova luck, or pluck, is likely to go down in fight annals. He gained his first real prominence because Bob Pastor took a swing at a cord of wood, with an ax, and hit himself on the shin. That caused Robert to default to Gunnar Barlund. Lou was rung in as a substitute, got knocked down by Barlund, but got up and opened a cut on Barlund's eye that necessitated stopping the fight. Then he beat Tommy Farr, before the public realized that Farr's gay living had made him into a palooka. That put him up the ladder.

And tonight he beat the remnants of Max Baer.

Lou's last three fights look good in the record book, but Louis is hardly a natural fourth step. Joe is a champion without a reputable challenger. We seriously doubt that Ray Carlen, about the most astute manager in the game, will toss his underdone chickadee in there with Louis.

Nova is a good full year away from his prime. Louis is in full bloom now; if anything, he is a trifle over the top, for there is no one around sinister enough to keep him lean and mean.

By 1940 the scales should be better balanced. And so should Nova, who still fights a little like a top whose revolution are not quite fast enough to keep it upright.

Lou stumbled a few times tonight, not so much from the effects of some of those Joe DiMaggio's pegs which Baer was throwing in from centerfield, as much as from his own clumsiness. He seems to get his ankles crossed, almost in the fashion of a ballet dancer in the midst of an extra-chat.

One shudders a litlte to think what Louis would have done with his black-lightning fists, against a fellow whose balance is as bad as a railroad in receivership. One shudders more than a litlte to think what Louis would have done to Baer, who ducked into every Nova

Hasson Given 'Fighting Chance' To Recover

Buffalo, N. Y., June 1 (INS).—Gene Hasson, first baseman for Montreal of the International League, tonight was given only "a fighting chance to pull through" from injury suffered when struck on the head by a ball pitched by Ray Roche in a Buffalo-Montreal Memorial Day game.

Dr. Elmer Milch, Hasson's attendant at Buffalo General Hospital, said Hasson's recovery depended on whether or not he survives another day.

Round by Round Of Nova-Baer Bout

FIRST ROUND

They rushed and threw several blows at bodies. Max landed a left to the ribs. Nova poked two long lefts to the nose. Baer was warned for backhanding in a clinch. Lou connected with a left hook to the face and they fell into a clinch. Nova nailed Baer with a right behind the ear. As Lou rushed in he was sent back against the ropes with a volley to the head. Two more to the stomach and Nova held on momentarily. Baer dug a right to the heart and took a left to his own body. Baer missed a wild right to the head at the bell.
Nova's round.

SECOND ROUND

Nova jabbed twice to the face with his left, then they both slugged to the body with two hands flailing in a neutral corner. Baer's right swished harmlessly over Nova's head as Lou came in a half crouch. They exchanged left jabs to the face. In close Nova chopped Max with two rights and he took a left hook in return. Max jabbed Nova with a right high on the head and shook the youngster up with two more to the same spot. Nova came back with a body attack. They exchanged left jabs as they circled about the ring. Nova missed a long right hand. Baer appeared to be feeling Nova's body attack. Baer was warned by the referred to "break clean." Baer's round.

THIRD ROUND

Lou hit Baer three lefts to the stomach and Baer complained of low punching but the protest did no good. Nova circled Max and stabbed him with lefts. Baer smashed a hard right off Nova's ribs but Lou had handed him two lefts and rights in return.
They stood in midring and slugged furiously with Nova having a clear advantage. Lou's right eye was cut slightly by a long left. The fast pace appeared to be telling on both fighters.
Max covered up as Nova came back to him with lefts and rights. Max leaned against the ropes as Nova fired both hands at him. Then Baer charged out, his mouth bloody, and hit Nova with a left to the head at the bell. Baer's round because of Nova's low punch.

FIFTH ROUND

Both were wild with lefts to the head. They exchanged left jabs. Nova hit Baer with three straight lefts to the mouth and Baer's mouth was dripping blood. Referee Fullam stopped the fight and pulled Max's trunks down to the waistline. Nova peppered Baer's head with short lefts.
Nova landed a long right hand which connected below the beltline and the referee warned him. Nova poked Max with two lefts to the mouth and a short right to the face. Baer sent a smashing right which landed too high to do damage.
They exchanged short lefts as the pace slowed down. Baer missed a snappy right uppercut. Baer bounced a hard right off the side of Nova's head and Lou backed all the way into the ropes.
The referee took this round for low punching. Baer's round.

SIXTH ROUND

Max came out in a half crouch and took two short lefts to the face. Baer sent

Top Horses Vie for Honors in Washington Show Today

750 Entries Compete in 3-Day Event

Competition Begins This Morning at Meadowbrook Saddle Club in Chevy Chase

By Ann Hagner.

Competition aplenty will be the keynote as several hundred of East's top horses vie for ribbons in the Washington Horse Show, which opens at Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Chevy Chase, this morning and continues through tomorrow and Sunday. Nearly 750 entries have been made for the event.

Perhaps of greatest interest of show followers will be the friendly battle between the large hunter stables, including Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Springsbury Farm from Berryville, Va.; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Llangollen Stables from Upperville; Mrs. J. T. Moore, of Reading, Pa.; Deborah Rood, of Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. Harry Frank, from Longacre Farm, in New Jersey; Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Virginia Beach, and U. S. Randle, of Fairfax, Va.

The Whitney contingent is the largest number of horses from her extensive barns that have appeared in competition in several years. Her entries are the famous gray hunt team of Two Leggins, Bon Diable, and Airy Spirit, and The Bear, Spring Hope, Faithful Heart, Nip and Salterello.

Carries Randle's Colors.

Carrying the colors of Randle's Bannockburn Farm are Randle's Princess, Agent, Find, Way, Dawn, Shadow, Pride II, So Long and Brigge, entered in the hunter and open jumper divisions.

Mrs. Henry Obre's Trillora Farm, of Shrewsbury, N. J., is well represented in the saddle horse ranks with Southern Lady, Mid-Day Sun, Gipsy Princess, Modern Rouge, Gone With the Wind and Five Star Final, all standouts in the realm of three- and five-gaited horses.

Also out to please the let-'em-rack trade are two entries from Carolanne Farm, or Norfolk, Va., Carolanne's Pride and Air Flow. They will be shown by Nick Wright, who in addition is bringing his own mare, Mary Hunt, North for the occasion.

Local Entries

Local enthusiasts at Meadowbrook are Margaret Cotter and Rocksie, Lisbeth Stieg and Hi-Ho, Fred Hughes, jr., and Black Caddy, Will Washburn with The Jitterburg, Charlie Carrico with Recall and Modacious, Fenton Fadeley with Hunger Marcher and Headrock, Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert with John the Baptist and Shiner, and Margaret Hill with Questionaire and Just Charming.

Most of these owner-rider combinations will be competing with out-of-town horses in an effort to cop the three-day open jumping event, with first prize of $100 to be awarded to the horse with the best score during the whole competition.

Featured on today's program, which begins at 10 o'clock this morning and continues all day, is a bareback costume class, which the participants must take four jumps set at 3½ feet, without benefit of saddle and dressed in any sort of costume they wish. Entrants include Betty Couzens, Fred Hughes, jr., Will Washburn, Mrs. Robert and others who are keeping their plans a dead secret until class time.

Junior Classes Tomorrow

Tomorrow's card will be devoted to junior classes in the morning, which is a tradition with the Washington show, and hunter, jumper and saddle classes in the afternoon.

Entered in the junior division are Margaret Hill, Frank (Happy) Christmas, Elaine McDowell, Patricia Downes, Sara Booth Miller, Douglas Simpson, Wilda Peck, Louise Harriman, Katherine McKeever, Blair Rogers and Mercer Fadeley.

An added atraction will be a class for yearling colts, with entries from Fenton Fadeley, Mr. and Mrs. George Plummer, Percy Niepold, Mrs. Paul Banfield and many others.

Softball Teams In June Title Meet

Softball teams from the District, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia will compete for trophies in the mid-Atlantic softball tournament, to be held the nights of June 20, 23, 27 and 30 in the Boys Republic Stadium, Ballston, Va.

Prizes in the tournament, which has the approval of Winifree Johnson, District softball commissioner, will be a gold trophy and individual gold medals to the 15 members of the winning team.

Alice Marble Arrives For English Net Play

Plymouth, England, June 1 (AP).—Alice Marble, of San Francisco, early favorite to win the women's singles tennis title at Wimbledon, arrived on the S. S. Champlain today. Miss Marble teamed with Don Budge to win the mixed doubles championship last year, and with Sarah Palfrey Fabyan to take the women's doubles crown, and then won the United States singles championship.

Hi-Ho Takes Off in Jumping Lesson

Lisbeth Stieg, of Chevy Chase, schools her chunky part-hackney mare, Hi-Ho, for the Washington Horse Show, opening today at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club for a three-day run. Hi-Ho, about to shove off, is entered in the featured three-day jumping event in which $100 is awarded to the horse and rider with the lowest score in the three phases of the event

Griffith Signs U. of Michigan' First Baseman

Elmer Gedeon, Track, Football, Baseball Star Will Replace Wasdell

Dipping into the ranks of college athletes for baseball talent, Clark C. Griffith, owner of the Washington Nationals, last night announced he had signed Elmer Gedeon, baseball, football and track star at the University of Michigan, to play first base with the Nats.

Gedeon will report to the Senators at Cleveland June 8, Griffith said. Twenty-two years old, Gedeon, who played his first college baseball in 1938, is a 6-foot-1-inch 190-pounder. He will be graduated from the university at Ann Arbor this week.

Nova Not Ready For Louis Yet

Perhaps Louis is the gorilla who could have licked them both.

If Baer isn't through now, then we will be having him around the rest of his life. He tried hard and landed some good pokes, but after the sixth he had no great appetite for the fight. His lacerated mouth wouldn't permit him to concentrate on the bout. He spat elaborately, great red mists that carmined the white sheets in the reporters' typewriters. Several times as he walked to his corner, he was beefing unhappily about his mouth.

"I couldn't breathe," he said when it was over.

There was no chagrin in him. He thought he was going to win; bet on himself and told his friends to bet on him. But in the end he was glad, it seemed, that the bloody thing was done, and he hugged Nova—the blood that matted his chest hair coming off on Nova's shaven white chest.

He should be happy with his annuities, his fine family, and his memories. And if he does quit, as he probably will, the spiritual wounds of losing his last fight will soon be assuaged by his easy philosophy.

His epitaph should be, "Here lies a fellow who had one heluva good time."

Nova's a good game guy. He's a little like a wallowing tugboat that is thrown this way and that, between crest and slough, but keeps going forward.

He forced the fight all the way tonight, absorbing a few really terrific punches, but giving back a thousand jolting little blows that were like the slop-slop of the mortar which now seals Baer's fistic tomb.

Cecil Smith to Play In International Polo

New York, June 1 (AP).—Cecil Smith, injured yesterday in a test match, is expected to be able to take his place at No. 2 on the United States team when it meets Great Britain in the first of the international polo series at the Meadow Brook Club Sunday.

An examination showed that he escaped with nothing more serious than a bad shaking up when his pony fell and rolled over on the Texan. The doctor said today that with three days of rest and quiet Smith should be able to play.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 1.—You may never have seen a dream, walking, but you can see $100,000,000, riding, this Sunday when Great Britain's polo team makes another well-bred attempt to belt the brains out of America's team and recapture the world's homeliest sports gabboon, the International Polo Challenge Cup.

CONSIDINE

If you have the inclination, and the $2.20, you can see a sports event which for sheer dough makes the fabulous America's Cup races resemble two bits of soap circling down a bathtub flue. Every time one of those fellows hit the ground, Sunday, it will be felt in Wall street, in the city and the bourse. It is the only occasion this fiscal year where the public will be permitted to witness a millionaire being walloped over the conk with a mallet, not a tax law.

If England had prepared as carefully for the World War as she did for this polo scrap, we never would have had the honor of picking up her checks through 1916, 1917 and 1918. No pain or expense has been spared, which leads us to believe that the Britons have forgotten what the cup looks like. It is the only sports trophy in the world worth giving one's all to lose. The last time we saw it, at the offices of the U. S. Polo Association, it was in an advanced stage of gangrene, but it pulled through with an emergency dose of bon ami.

A British Syndicate Pays

A British syndicate, headed by mysterious Maj. Rex Benson, is paying for this invasion. The team has already cost the syndicate $135,000. If the three U. S.-G. B. matches sell out each time the syndicate will still lose in the neighborhood of $75,000. In addition to this $135,000—which will be $175,000 before the matches end—perhaps another $50,000 has been spent by the Maharajah of Kashmir and Jammu (both) and his nibs, the Nawab of Bhopal. They sent representatives to Argentina to buy a dozen of the finest ponies they could find, to serve as mounts for the British players. They also sent a few of their own from Bhopal to Long Island, which takes a lot of stamps.

The British contingent consists of 28 men, players, grooms, tack men, a stud groom and two partly unintelligible sports journalists from the London Times and Daily Express. There are 62 ponies, 40 of them for sale at the end of the meeting. The players have been assembling in this country for the past nine months, first in Hollywood, then Aiken and finally New York. Their best man, Pat Roark, was killed February 19 at the Medwick Club, near Los Angeles. With Roark gone the British will be 4- or 5-to-1 longshots, for he was a rough, tough fellow who never quit.

Americans Have 43 Ponies

The American team of Tommy Hitchcock, Winston Guest, Mike Phipps and Stewart Iglehart, roughly worth a combined $100,000,000, will have 43 ponies, many of them provided by Jock and Sonny Whitney, neither of whom are eligible for the W. P. A. polo team. There will be a groom for every two ponies and an expensive stud groom who is in charge of glueing back the filet mignons kicked out of the ponies and advising the players which ponies to use at which times, so that the American players are mounted on their fastest ponies when the English are riding their selling platers.

It cost the polo association $78,000 to produce this mammoth international sports show and it, too, has little chance of getting back its investment.

The British team has lost only three of the 14 matches it has played in this country, but it has failed to impress. Men who know about the game believe that the squad is still shocked by the death of Roark, perhaps the only top flight polo player ever killed in action.

European Bout Awaits Silva, Says Manager

Trip Depends on Silva Defeating Archibald Monday, Laken Insists

An European trip awaits Mexican Joe Silva if he defeats Joey Archibald, world's featherweight champion, Monday night in Griffith Stadium, Jack Laken, Silva's manager, announced last night as he brought his charge to Washington four days late to finish training.

Silva has been offered a match with Peter Kane, presently recognized by the British Board of Boxing Control as the world flyweight champion, but said to be over the weight currently and considering vacating his title, Laken said.

"Joe had better win this fight Monday as an European trip has been my goal ever since I entered the boxing game 20 years ago," said the jubilant Laken.

Laken said he received the offer from Billy Daly, of Paterson, N. J., representative of Syd Hulls, British boxing promoter, scheduling the bout for late in July in London or Scotland.

"My boy is in wonderful condition, and if anybody can beat Archibald he is the man," Laken said, indicating he is willing to offer his shirt and socks that Silva will win!

Silva, who will hold a public workout today at 2 p. m. at the National Sporting Club gym, 519 Morse street northeast, has been getting last-minute instruction in how to use a left hook from Mickey Walker in his ancaster, Pa., training camp, Laken said.

The former middleweight champion, now under Laken's wing, is going to attempt a comeback, Laken said.

Right and Wrong In a Canoe: Article II

Position Basis of Success in Paddling Canoe, Expert Says

(No. 1) What's wrong with this picture—everything. J. W. Burch, former commodore of the American Canoe Association, and his daughter, Bette, show the epitome of bad form by paddling on the same side, knees high and with weight unevenly distributed. To top it off they are holding their paddles in the best novice fashion

(No. 2) Here is the safest position in paddling. Burch balances his weight against the sides of the canoe, sitting low, while Bette sits high in the bow over the canoe keel. By paddling on opposite sides, they keep an even course. From the kneeling position, Burch obtains ease in steering and stroking

J. W. Burch, Veteran Potomac Boat Club Canoeist and Teacher, Emphasizes Position In Paddling as Insurance Against Upsets

By Al Hailey.

Position is the basis of success in paddling a canoe without the confusion and embarrassment caused by awkward plunges overboard—a disillusioning and unnecessary process which uninitiated canoeists undergo from time to time until they finally decide are unsafe for themselves and the citizenry at large.

Position in paddling is heavily emphasized as insurance against upsets by J. W. Burch, veteran Potomac Boat Club canoeist and teacher.

"The safe paddling position, and one which should be assumed in a strong wind and in rough water, is on both knees, spread, and sitting against the edge of the canoe seat or athwart," Burch said. "For comfort, of course, there should be a cushion under the knees."

In this position, the weight of the paddler in the stern is evenly distributed, and he is allowed a greater freedom of movement from the waist, Burch indicated.

"The most comfortable position for most people, however, is on the seat generally provided," Burch said. "This is not unsafe if the weight is kept over the keel and low."

The most common error among canoeists is made by both paddlers sitting high on the seats in the bow and stern, knees high, weight unevenly distributed, Burch pointed out. From this position, a sudden stroke by one or both of the paddlers—forced to throw weight off center when stroking—may send the canoe occupants into the water with little or no warning.

"One or two persons sitting in the bottom of the canoe with their weight evenly distributed helps to make a position on the seats less hazardous," said Burch. "Occupants of the canoe at all times should be careful not to throw the weight suddenly over one side."

(The third article on "Canoeing" will be printed in tomorrow's Washington Post.)

Brubaker's Homer Wins For Bucs, 5-2

Blow in 8th Breaks 2-2 Tie With Phils In Night Contest

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 1.—Wilbur Brubaker's homer in the eighth inning broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-to-2 victory over the Phillies in a night game at Shibe Park.

Truett Sewell outpitched the Phils' new right-hander, Walter Kirby Higbe, making his first start since obtained from the Chicago Cubs. Higbe struck out eight, but he walked eight men and hit another to keep in not water continually.

The Pirates scored twice in the first on two bases on balls, Fern Bell's single and LeGrant Scott's wild throw. The Phils scored a run in the second on two singles and Del Young's sacrifice fly and tied it in the sixth on Gil Brack's fourth homer oft he season.

inning uprising, was still in there in the sixth when Buddy Lewis slammed a long drive into the distant rightfield upper deck for a homer. With one out, the Nats picked up 2 more runs on consecutive singles by Gelbert, Myer, West and Ferrell. Estalella and Wright singled against Frasier in the seventh for the tenth run.

The Sox started to work on Leonard in the sixth, when a walk and singles by Kreevich, Owen and Bejma produced 2 runs. And in the seventh, after four straight hits—singles by Radcliff and Appling, Kreevich's double off the centerfield wall and Owen's single—had scored 3 runs with one out and narrowed the Nats' lead to 10 to 6. Harris waved Krakky to the rescue. Krakky fanned Tresh and West speared a liner off Pinch Hitter McNair's bat for the third out.

Krakky had no trouble with the Sox in the eighth, and in the ninth, after he walked a pair and pitched a two-bagger to Tresh, he upped and fanned Jackie Hayes for the sweet last out.

Two short rights raised a lump over Max's left eye and Lou continued to work on the eye with several more short rights. Max sent left and right hooks to the head and then missed a hard right as Lou chopped him with two short rights.

Nova chased Max into the ropes with a right, left and right again. Max sent two futile blows to the body as Lou hit him with both hands to the chin. Lou half-slipped in Max's corner and the referee stepped between them.

Max sent a hard right cross to the chin. Nova poked his right high on the head. Both appeared very tired. Max landed with a left hook to the face. Lou jabbed Baer with two lefts to his bloody mouth.

ELEVENTH ROUND

Before the round started Referee Fullam went over to examine a bad cut inside of Max's mouth. He said Max appeared to be choking on the blood. Nova shot his straight left to the mouth. Baer crashed a looping right to the face. Referee Fullam halted the bout momentarily to ask Max if he was O. K.

Nova shot two rights to the mouth and Referee Fullam walked in and looked at the bruised mouth and ended the fight.

The end came after one minute 21 seconds of the eleventh round.

SEVENTH ROUND

EIGHTH ROUND

In the fourth the blood started to spurt from both gladiators. A long left bounced off Lou's right eye and slashed the flesh just under the eyebrow. Nova came back and drew blood from Baer's nose and mouth with a furious two-handed onslaught. From there on Max spit blood in every round as Lou, taking advantage of these wounds, worked both hands to the injured spots.

Low Punches

It was in the fourth and fifth both that Nova, showing signs of wear and tear from the pace, swung low punches and was penalized in each case with loss of the round.

The sixth was Baer's best round. His overhand right-hand haymakers which he brought from Canarsie smacked against Lou's ear time after time, and at the finish of the heat Lou was so staggered he started toward a neutral corner until his seconds, one of whom was Jim Braddock, the man who took the title away from aBer some years back, summoned him to his seat.

Through the seventh Nova took the right hands and still kept coming, and in the eighth he appeared to have drawn new vitality from somewhere, as he walked from his corner much stronger. Max's legs were definitely slowing down in the eighth, and through the ninth he did little but cover up as Nova charged in, almost closed his left eye with short right chops and belted him as he pleased.

Maine Fishing Good

Chief Warden Raymond Morse, who knows every inch of his vast Hancock County, Maine, territory, reports the best fishing in years. More than 100 landlocked salmon and several dozen Chinooks were taken from Green Lake, Wednesday and Jordan Pond on Mount Desert Island, which has just been opened after a two-year closed period.

Fans Boo as Pandoramint, 22-1 Shot, Wins at Charles Town

Johnny Bejshak's Entry Acts Up Badly; Daily Double Pays The Backers $37.80

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 1.—The loud raspberry, always ready at any sports event, echoed and re-echoed of the adjacent mountains today as Johnny Bejshak's Madfoot, heavily played favorite, was left entangled in the starting gate in today's feature race. One persistent booer—I mean fellow—who really was trying, booed right smack into the next race. In fact, he booed so loud and so long that half the natives left for town believing a mysterious special train was nudging up the station siding.

From the press box it looked like a start. Madfoot lived up to her name at the post and went through about everything in the "bad actor" book. Starter John Morrissey finally was forced to take a chance. He missed, that was all. Instead of going through as she had been doing, Madfoot elected to perform the part of a statue of a horse on hind legs. Some of the customers believed she should have been put on the outside.

With Madfoot a distant trailer, E. H. Titmus, jr.'s, Pandoramint proved the winner at a $46.40 mutuel. Jockey Leon Garrett had the mount and brought her to the front along the backstretch to gallop her home ahead of D. H. Tabler's Fair Deal. Blue Boo, owned by L. J. Stieg, was third in the field of eight going over the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

Trainer B. F. Cook, of Washington and leading conditioner at the meeting, added another winner to his long string when he saddled E. Samaha's Travelo, and the 4-year-old filly came home under Jockey Root's handling at a $14.60 mutuel.

An odds-on favorite and an 8-to-1 shot teamed to produce a $37.80 mutuel in the daily double. After Night Play won the second race at $3.60, Misled drove to victory in the third race at $20.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS MAKER, $4.20, $3.20, $3.60; HER ODDS (Hughes entry), $4.80, $3.00; POMPEY'S ROSE, $4.00.

MISS MAKER, off in front, opened a long lead and was never threatened while winning easily. HER ODDS came with good speed along rail and closed well, but was no match for winner. POMPEY'S ROSE, slow to begin, came to outside while improving position and closed with rush. DOCTOR'S NURSE went well for quarter and weakened. DERLIN raced greenly. LADY DOCTOR had some early speed. NEGOPI was off very slowly.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:02½. Off 3:06½. Winner, R. Pending's blk. g. (6), by Chance Play—Shades of Night. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:56.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight

SMALL DEVIL	(Garrett)	107	8	1	3°	8	7½	11.80
ELEGANT DAME	(Machado)	107	7	5	4°°	4½	8	9.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT PLAY, $3.60, $3.20, $3.40; MISS WING, $7.00, $5.60; LANDSMAN, $10.80.

NIGHT PLAY, off in tangle, came through between horses to take lead after furlong and drew out to win easily. MISS WING saved ground while improving position and closed with good energy. LANDSMAN came through on rail from slow beginning and closed full of run. CENTERMARCH was snatched up when in close quarters soon after start, came to outside thereafter and closed gamely. HASTY HANNA was hard ridden and had no excuses. HALO was shuffled back at break. SMALL DEVIL had early speed. ELEGANT DAME was through early.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:29. Off 3:31. Winner, Mrs. M. M. Simon's br. m. (6), by Diavoli—Misleading. Trained by M. Simon. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:26 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
MISLED	(Nertney)	114	1	2	2½	2°½	2°½	1h	$9.20

BABY KITT	(Coffman)	114	6	6	8	8	8	8	116.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISLED, $20.60, $9.00, $5.20; CHESSIE, $9.80, $4.60; SCOUT ROSE, $2.80.

MISLED, closest to pace of CHESSIE from start, came up on outside of latter in stretch and wore her down to be up inside sixteenth pole. CHESSIE was hard ridden from start, set good pace, but weakened nearing close. SCOUT ROSE lacked early speed, was hard handled thereafter and made up some ground. HURDY GURDY was taken up going to first turn, saved ground thereafter, but was not good enough. MIRMISS could not reach contention.

Daily Double, Night Play and Misled, Paid $37.80.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:56½. Off 3:57½. Winner, E. Samaha's ch. f. (4), by Dunlin—Bubola. Trained by R. F. Cool. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 1-5.

NEVILLE	(Garrett)	112	8	2	6	7	8	109.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAVELO, $14.60, $6.80, $5.20; JUSTA CANTER, $5.20, $4.00; MISS DOLLY KAY, $10.20.

TRAVELO forged to front in early stages, took clear lead, shook off challenge of JUSTA CANTER and held sway thereafter under drive. JUSTA CANTER, off poorly, worked way to contention on outside, got to leader, but weakened in closing test. MISS DOLLY KAY, last away, closed a gap. FRED'S WARNING went well placed throughout. SUN TEMPEST had no excuses. BLUE PRELUDE could not keep up after breaking on top.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:21. Off 4:25. Winner, B. Berry's br. c. (3), by Prince of Wales—Ghost Story. Trained by L. Hughes. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCESS LADY, $7.20, $4.80, $3.60; PRAIRIE MAN, $10.60, $6.40; HERLERO, $9.40.

PRINCESS LADY, closest to pace of FLYING HEART, forged to front on backstretch, withstood challenges of PRAIRIE MAN and just lasted. PRAIRIE MAN was hard ridden and closed with rush. HERLERO was slow to begin and closed gamely. LYDE raced wide after being in close quarters at first turn. FLYING HEART had early speed to set pace and weakened when caught.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Madfoot. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:49½. Off 4:56. Winner, E. H. Titmus, jr.'s. ch. f. (4), by Brandon Mint—Curiosity Box. Trained by S. Piammia. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:16 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANDORAMINT, $46.40, $19.80, $7.60; FAIR DEAL, $7.00, $4.80; BLUE BOO, $5.20.

PANDORAMINT, steadied along within striking distance of leaders from start, came around FAIR DEAL to take command and drew out. FAIR DEAL withstood early challenges of LANCER'S LADY to open good lead and held on under strong handling when finished second. BLUE BOO, off slowly, had a rough early trip and finished full of run. ADHELMAR was hustled from start and weakened. LANCER'S LADY was rushed hard to get to leader in early stages and quit. MADFOOT went in air at break, stumbled and had no chance.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, FAST.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:17½. Off 5:19. Winner, H. B. Estep's ch. g. (4), by Sepoy—Fen. Trained by A. B. Hummer. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA BOY, $8.80, $5.40, $3.80; SEA FINN, $5.60, $3.60; COUNTER PASS, $3.00.

SEA BOY, steadied along while close to pacemakers, took command over SEA FINN when asked and drew clear to win while kept to drive. SEA FINN went around leaders boldly to get to front, and could not resist, closed gamely. COUNTER PASS, slow to begin as usual, improved position steadily after a half, but hung in closing test. LAST SCAMP weakened after going forwardly. PUDDLES was off poorly and failed to rally. ITSAMAID could not threaten. ASTERISK stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:40. Off 5:45. Winner, E. H. Titmus, jr.'s. ch. g. (8), by Botanical—Nyla. Trained by S. Piammia. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE KHAYYAM, $10.60, $6.00, $4.20; SILVERY WAY, $5.00, $5.00; PROPRIETARY, $4.80.

PRINCE KHAYYAM, forwardly placed from beginning, went to SILVERY WAY when placed to hard drive in stretch and Machado outrode Moloney when it came to a finish. SILVERY WAY ran PLAIN ACE in submission to get to front, but failed to resist winner. PROPRIETARY weakened after being well placed most of way. ORKIL'S RUSSET could not get to front and weakened. CAPTAIN BILL closed some ground. BOOK READER was held safe. ALLENE had to be pulled up sharply soon after break and was not a factor.

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 1.

Dear Al:

I guess all the regulars will be playing No. 3 post position here after they read this. "L. F." asked, "How much profit would a $2 win bet on No. 3 post position in every race show for the meeting. Eddie McCann checked up and the result is interesting. On a play of $240 for the first 15 days there would be a profit of $182.40. Only on two days has a No. 3 horse failed to get into the winners' circle. The longest price was that of Princess Lady (F)at $97.40. The shortest was $4.40 on Fair Deal and Boro Poker. "D. L. R." wants some information on the local jockey colony. This came from the boys themselves, so we have to believe it. George Witmer, 22, from Port Trevorton, Pa.; Leon Garrett, 23, from Nashville, Tenn.; Lou Machado, 22, from Fall River, Mass.; Robert Root, 21, from Kansas City, Kans. In answer to inquiry: A jockey's agent obtains mounts for the riders. That is his chief duty. The battle for the honor of being the leading winning rider is a thriller, with Sammy Palumbo, Lou Machado and Buddy Root deadlocked with 13 winners each. R. F. Cook, of Washington, is still the top trainer with eight victories. J. Bowes Bond, of Baltimore, and Everett Brining, of Hagerstown, are deadlocked for the place with four winners. Thirty-eight favorites have entered the winners' circle since the meeting got under way. Seventy-one different trainers have saddled winners during the first 15 days racing. The third issue of the condition book made its appearance today. Three handicaps will be programmed during the nine days racing, June 3 to June 13, inclusive. Eighteen Washington owned or trained horses have accounted for purses since the meeting got under way May 15.

BILL.

First race—Engles Wonder did fairly well on the milers and breaks from a good post position. With a helping ride, I expect this one to do a lot of running. Wale Signal, a winner here, has a poor post position but is dangerous. Grand Waltz ran a good race here first out and may be a keen factor.

Second race—Prince Jock has been knocking at the door and this field of maidens appears to be the right spot. I expect no mistakes. Marshall A, has some speed and should get part of the money. Some Groucher, and Gray Gleam would be threats but are far down the list and are doubtful starters.

Third race—Caleb appears to be the right one in this sprint. This one has plenty of speed and if track conditions change go to it all the harder. Sun Belle and White Sweets are fair now. The latter may have Palumbo up.

Fourth race—Consistent is far down the "also eligible" line-up and may not start. However, if he gets in I want to be there. Lady Dunlin will be right there and would take it all if the track is off. Green Water and Schley Buck are dangerous.

Fifth race—Nay Nay goes back to a route that suits. Appears perfectly placed and should take it all. Beaming Lady turned in a fine effort here earlier in the meeting and is dangerous. Accidental is honest

Bosox Bowl Over Tigers By 14-5 Score

Newsom First Victim Of Slugging Bostons; Greenberg Hits Homer

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 1.—The Boston Red Sox slammed out 18 hits for 31 bases today as they shellacked the Detroit Tigers, 14 to 5.

Elden Auker, former Tiger, faced his old teammates for the first time and allowed 8 hits, one of which was Hank Greenberg's tenth homer of the year with two men on base in the first inning.

Louis (Buck) Newsom, Luther Thomas and Harry Eisenstate were the pitching victims of the Boston Club, the former allowing 11 blows in the first 6 2-3 innings and being charged with the loss. The Red Sox counted 5 runs in the seventh inning uprising.

Young Bobby Doerr paced the Boston attack with a homer, triple and a double.

Athletics' Rookies Beat Browns, 10-7

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 1.—In a loosely played game, Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics rolled an early lead and then staved off late rallies therafened by the St. Louis Browns to win, 10 to 7, in the series opener today.

Six errors, four contributed by the A's and two by the Browns, marred the contest.

The Athletics poundsd young Jack Kramer and Bob Harris hard in the first three innings, scoring seven of their runs, and at one time held an 8-to-1 advantage over the cellar occupants.

Bob Johnson, of the Athletics, and George McQuinn hit homers.

31 G.W. High Athletes Get Varsity Letter

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., June 1.—Thirty-one George Washington High School athletes received varsity letters today along with cheer leaders and competitos in the recent literary contests of the Virginia Literary and Athletic League. Awards were presented at an assembly program sponsored annually by the Pep Club, school booster organization.

The awards went to members and managers of the boys and girls basketball teams and the varsity baseball and track teams. Non-athletic monograms went to seven senior cheer leaders and all literary contestants.

Eddie Nowland, versatile senior, received three monograms, finishing his second straight year as a four-letter winner. He had previously earned his award in fotball.

Cheer leaders awarded letters included Nancy Payne, Viola Gompf, Charlene Topping, Frances Good, Florence Partlow, Eleanor King and Pat Orr.

Girls' basketball—Jean Haynes, Mae Strickler, Brownie Varnell, Lillian Worden, Yvonne Lyles, Anita Devers, June Wells, Kitty Travers and Manager Betty Martin.

One-act play competition—Bruce McLeod, Joseph Harrison, Bernard Phillips, Howard Hutchinson and Dick Moon.

Spelling—Elizabeth Jones.

Short-story writing—Viola Gompf.

Reds' 5 Runs In 13th Beat Bees, 9 to 4

Vander Meer-McFayden Pitching Duel Broken By Torrent of Hits

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 1.—The rampant Reds exploded a five-run blast in the thirteenth inning today to defeat the Bees, 9-4, in a game that started out as a keen pitching duel between Johnny (No-hit) Vander Meer and the veteran Danny MacFayden.

Neither of those hurlers was in action when the Reds clinched the second such overtime contest they have won in Boston this season. After they loaded the bases with one out in the 13th, Tom Earley, the fourth of the five chuckers the Bees employed, was relieved by Johnny Lanning. Will Hershberger greeted Lanning with a single that scored two runs and Harry Craft accounted for three more tallies by driving his fifth homer of the season into the left-field stands.

MacFayden did not permit a red to reach first base until the seventh when Ernie Lombardi climaxed a three-run rally with his eighth circuit clout of the year, with Ival Goodman on base.

Vander Meer kept the Bees scoreless until the eighth when they pulled up to 3-2 by working him for two passes before Garms and Majeski singled. Paul Derringer then took over and Miller singled to bring in the tying run.

The Reds regained the lead in the tenth, when Ernie Lombardi doubled and Lee Gamble, his runner, came around on a wild pitch and the game's only error, by Garms. The Bees, however, pulled even again in their side of that frame when Hassett lashed out a two-bagger and counted on Pinch Hitter West's single.

The Bees used 17 players during the marathon and the Reds had 15 in their line-up, including three hurlers. Gene Thompson, who entered the game in the twelfth, was credited with the win and Earley was charged with the defeat.

Cards Beat Giants On Double, Wild Throw

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—A double by Johnny Mize withstood a lot of argument and offset a lot of good pitching today to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-to-0 victory over the New York Giants.

The game was a scoreless pitching spectacle for eight innings with Fiddler Bill McGee performing effortlessly for the Cardinals and Rookie Manuel Salvo going along as effectively if not as smoothly.

Then Mize led off in the ninth with a sharp liner past Zeke Bonura at first and slid into second almost simultaneously with Mel Ott's throw to Burgess Whitehead. The Giants stormed around Umpire Bill Campbell claiming Mize was out, but they were thrown for a loss by the expulsion of Joe Demaree and Whitehead because of their violent protests.

After Lynn Myers went in as a runner for Mize, everybody cooled off except young Salvo. He walked Enos Slaughter and, when speedy Don Gutteridge beat out a bunt, Salvo threw wild to first letting in the run. Slaughter was out at the plate trying to score on the same play and Salvo settled down to strike out the next two batters—too late.

on Fishing

Fishing prospects during the past week brightened considerably. It looks now as though, with a few reasonable exceptions, anglers can almost write their own ticket, if they will confine their activities to the area below the Delaware capes.

They are taking large catches of hardheads, seabass and progies along the southern Jersey beaches, but it is going to take another week or two of warm weather to bring them in right. The boats out of Lewes are making small catches of sea trout, but not the 12 and 14 pound tide-runners that supply so much spor talong the breakwater thismonth.

ACKERMAN

Forty miles further south on the Maryland beach the complexion of this sporty fish is decidedly different, for surfmen are taking them in fairly large numbers and the size is larger than is usual at this time of year. With them are being taken unusually big king fish and hardheads. During the week the large cshannel bass also come in in fine shape. Five big ones were taken between Fox Hill Levels and Assateague Island.

Have you tried this surf fishing on the outer bank that runs for miles below Ocean City. It is either fished on one-day trips or by renting one of the few cabins available at Capt. Peters.' Better still, is the lodge of the Pine Tree Gun Club, where for $5 a day you get not only board and lodging, but the use of a meach car to take in the most likely spots over a stretch of many miles, bait and the expert tutelage of Capt. Selby Purnell, who knows this fishing as it is given to few to know. Reservations should be made in advance—address them to Berlin, Md.

Channel Bass Running

Channel bass are running equally well at Chincoteague, where the take is up to 12 a dady; at Wachaprague the catches are about the same, and the run of sea trout up to 3 and 4 pounds continues to hold strong. Here too, are plenty of hardheads and kings in the surf.

Capt Bryan Travis at Cape Charles has been taking fine catches of channel bass in the area around Fisherman's Island for more than two weks, and they are averaging well up toward the half hundred mark. One day this past week, 13 of them were so near of a weight, 42 pounds each, that they looked as though they might have come out of the same mold. Seatrout are plentiful and reasonably large.

In the past Capt. Travis has beer so boked up at this time of the year that the chance to get him for a day or two was an exception rather than the rule. This year he has a fleet of boats, with good captains, each one under his direct supervision, so don't pass up this swell fishing spot any longer.

First Bluefish Catch

Ocean City, Maryland broke loose this week with the first real catch of bluefish made anywhere along the coast north of Hatteras Island. Capt. Crawford Savage took 35 out of a school that raised only for a short time on Green Run Shoal. Other small schools have ben raised in the vicinity of Winter Quarter Light Vessel. There is every liklihood this fishing will continue—inconsistant and a little spoty, until the water warms.

Catches of seabass and porgies are just about what you care to take. The mackerel have slowed down a trifle, which is perfectly natural, for they don't hang aronud very long.

And this fish is the common or Boston mackerel, not the Spanish or king mackerel taken in Southern waters during midwinter months. We catch the Southern fish in bay waters and offshore almost every year—the commercial catch of Spanish mackerel in Maryland is something like 30,000 pounds a year—but we have no knowledge of a Boston mackerel ever being caught in southern Florida seas.

Strike Offshore

The Northern mackerel is following down the coast at the time of the year, while the king, the Cero and the Spanish mackerel are coming North. They both strike offshore for the mating and spawning season, probably in the slow-moving waters far east of the Gulf Stream. Of that, however, nothing is known.

When Boston mackerel are in a striking mood, they are every bit as sporty as their Southern cousins, with the same characteristic of cutting a bait off just behind the hook. They will strike at almost any fast-moving lure, and weigh about the same as Spanish mackerel—up to 9 and 10 pounds.

In the lower Potomac we have heard of catches of rock being made on the oyster beds off Tall Timbers, but no authentication of the fact. We do know Capt. R. M. Rogers has been giving the same fishing a try almost daily, and so far hasn't connected. He has been making fairly good catches of hardheads with here and there a small trout.

Evening Fishing Best

In the upper bay, until this past week-end, catches have been spotty. Since Saturday Capt. Bob Lee's boats at Shadyside have been fishing the Bloody Point area and taking from 50 to 200 hardheads. Evening fishing has been best. During the morning and early afternoon a few rock trolling.

Johnnie Manifold's boats have been doing better in their home waters—Herring Bay—with catches from 30 to 50. His boats that have been running down to Sharps and the Gooses haven't done very much, yet the boats from the Eastern Shore fishing fleet at North Beach have been loading up. Frank Del Veechio had a party of ten down there on the Silvia and boated 322. An average of 3½ per person isn't bad fishing at any time.

A note from Frank Bentz to the effect that 1,250 more big brown trout have been stocked in Maryland streams. This time in Jones Falls—750, and 500 in Big Hunting Creek. We think the Maryland Conservation Commission has done a grand job this year, and the fact is beginning to percolate through to the anglers, for we hardly ever hear of unsatisfactory days spent astream anymore. It was those tough days early in the season that caused the bellyaching.

Enthusiastic Anglers

G. W. Quinn and J. Nelson spent a part of two days on Fishing Creek and Big Hunting Creek this week and came home just about as enthusiastic as we have ever seen any fishermen. They creeled 11 nice browns, each and every one of which was over 12 inches long.

Fishing at Solomons has been slightly spotty. One day the boats hits them, and the catches run to 200 and better to the boat, and on the next—like Decoration Day—they just aren't there. But day in and day out the going averages just about as good as any place we know of—and you can fish in any kind of weather. That school of rock at Point Patience is still showing, if you hit them right.

The popularity of pier fishing has been growing in direct proportion to the growth of the sport. With a little foresight in their placement, there is little doubt as to the results to be obtained. Women particularly like their easy convenience and form a large part of the patronage.

New 600-Foot Pier

To meet the growing popularity of fishing along the North Carolina coast, there is to be built this summer at Cape Lookout a 600-foot fishing pier, parallel to and about 130 feet from the Government breakwater. It will afford comfortable surf fishing at a widely known location, and should be particularly attractive to one-day fishermen who do not want to go outside by way of the more expensive guide boats.

A boat will operate between Beaufort, Morehead City and Cape Lookout, by way of the new Barden Inlet, south of Harker's Island and through Shackelford Banks—a trip of ten miles.

This Cape Lookout section is the center of a fishing area from which 300 specimens of marine life have been officially recorded by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. The mass of rocks forming the Government breakwater is a natural haven for many species.

There are fine fishing piers at almost every resort along the Jersey shore, in some, as much as several hundred thousand dollars have been spent on modern improvements. The pier at Sunny Isles, Miami Beach, is probably one of the best known, as well as one of the best patronized. Even here on Chesapeake Bay we have several—the best known ones being at North Beach and Seaside; and at times some really exceptional catches are made on them.

Another Popular Mode

Another popular mode of fishing, which is getting more popular every year, is from small skiffs, the anglers in many cases carrying one of the new light and small outboard motors with them to take the place of the usual manual labor that oars require.

There is hardly any place along the bay but where small boats are to be had for the usual buck a day. At Solomons, where, within several stones' throws from the dock, is the warm-weather deep-water fishing in the ship channel, or with an outboard the trolling for rockfish around Point Patience. At Breezy Point, Capt. Becker has 40 rowboats, and on week-ends it is not at all unusual to see every one of them out.

Up and down the Potomac the same is also true—hardly a place but what can be found small boats for rent. In the St. Mary's, Brotons Bay, Mattawoman and on to Capt. Joe Flecher's, almost to the top of tidewater. And because his place is up in the fast water, don't think for one minute there is less sport to be found there. In fact, we think it is just the other way around.

Before we leave the fishing from small boats let us note a recent excursion of L. A. Versi, an Arlington, Va., angler who decided he would go tarpon fishing in a row boat at Fort Myers, Fla., without benefit of motor or guide.

Went to Rescue

He hooked his fish all right—it turned out to be a 104-pounder—and it towed him on a two-hour sightseeing trip over most of the inlets at the mouth of Caloosahatchee River, until W. Ashby Jones, Virginia's grand master of tarpoon fishing, went to his rescue and helped to bring his tarpon to gaff.

Nothing like that could happen in our waters (?), but who would have conjured any such a happening even in Southern Florida waters?

In another week or two the caltrop or water chestnut will be rearing a new crop of the floating rosettes in the finest bass waters of the whole lower Potomac River. From June 15 until September, each year, it covers 12 square miles of our fresh water creeks—Mattawoman, Aquia, Gunston Cove—and eventually will cover many more square miles, unless the campaign for its removal now bieng waged by the Washington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, is successful.

It almost chokes the Potomac at times, and it may spread throughout the United States—this plant, that by cutting off the sunlight, kills the minute animal life that serves as food for small fish, and causes their starvation. It also kills the desirable aquatic plant life that ducks feed upon, until they refuse to light upon the creeks even after the water chestnut has died. During its summer life it makes the river a great marsh, an excellent breeding place for mosquitoes.

An annual plant that spreads rapidly downstream, but slowly up, it can easily be controlled by cutting before the middle of July, so that the only reseeding would be from those seeds drifting in.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Two outfielders, Bobby Estalella and Taft Wright, tie for the lead as a new Man of the Month contest opens. Estalella and Wright were the outstanding performers for the Nats at Chicago yesterday, with the ten points being distributed as follows:

To Estalella, three points, because he made four of the Nats' hits, including a double, and scored two runs.

To Wright, three points, because he made three hits, including two doubles, and drove in three runs.

To Charley Gelbert, two points, because he made three hits and figured in three Washington runs.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because he contributed a homer and a single to the Nats' attack.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because he drove over three runs with his two singles. The totals:

Estalella	3	Lewis	1
Wright	3	Ferrell	1
Gelbert	2

April Home D. C. Mortgages $5,065,000

Total Number 1,137; Virginia $6,653,000, Maryland $4,963,000

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Registering an equivalent of $10.41 per capita, home mortgages recorded in the District of Columbia in April numbered 1,137 and amounted to $5,065,000, it is reported by officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Mortgages divided as to type of lender, number and amount were as follows: Savings and loan associations, 428, $2,023,000; insurance companies, 66, $384,000; banks and trust companies, 115, $611,000; individuals, 296, $942,000; other mortgages, 232, $1,105,000.

Figures were compiled by the board's division of research and statistics which makes a monthly survey of mortgage recordings in the District, with the co-operation of O. K. LaRoque, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem, N. C., savings and loan executives; the Mortgage Bankers Association, and the American Title Association.

New family dwelling units built or planned in the District of Columbia in April totaled 378 and were valued at $1,642,400. The board's statistical experts arrived at these construction figures after a study of building permits reported to the United States Department of Labor.

Maryland Total

Home mortgages recorded in Maryland cities and towns in April numbered 1,714 and amounted to $4,963,000, an equivalent of $3.56 per capita, nonfarm. These mortgages were divided as follows, relative to type of lender, number and amount: Savings and loan associations, 982, $2,305,000; insurance companies, 43, $391,000; banks and trust companies, 197, $991,000; mutual savings banks, 56, $174,000; individuals, 341, $841,000; other mortgages, 95, $261,000.

New family dwelling units built or planned in Maryland cities of 10,000 population or over in April totaled 270 and were valued at $793,300. Estimated volume of new-home mortgage loans made by all savings, building and loan associations in Maryland, in April, was placed at $1,721,000, with $318,000 going for construction and $994,000 for purchase of homes, the balance being spent for refinancing, reconditioning and other purposes.

Virginia Figures

Home mortgages listed in Virginia cities and towns in April numbered 2,276 and amounted to $6,653,000, this being in equivalent of $4.52 per capita, nonfarm.

Mortgages by type of lender, number and amount were divided as follows: Savings and loan associations, 494, $1,544,000; insurance companies, 250, $1,315,000; banks and trust companies, 405, $1,457,000; individuals, 1,066, $2,123,000; other mortgages, 61, $214,000.

New family dwelling units built or planned in Virginia cities of 10,000 population or over in April totaled 486 and were valued at $1,485,900.

Building and Loan Outing

According to plans formulated this week at the monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, an outing will be held, probably in July, to take the place of the meeting for that month. Arthur G. Bishop, league president, appointed Edward C. Baltz, secretary of Perpetual Building Association and former president of the United States Building and Loan League, to head a committee including C. Gay Harrell, Carl J. Bergmann, Chapin B. Bauman and R. E. Hotze.

This will be the first time the local group has considered an outing, and from early indications it appears it will be well received by the entire membership. The local league will also take a prominent part in the forthcoming testimonial dinner to President Melvin C. Hazen, Board of Commissioners, District of Columbia, as Mr. Hazen is president of Columbia Permanent Building Association, one of the 22 comprising the local group.

Report of delegates to the recent Southeastern building and loan convention at Charleston, S. C., was read by Robert E. Buckley, while C. Clinton James reviewed details of pending legislation. The league approved recommendation of the executive council in suggesting early closing hours for offices during summer months. With the exception of Government pay days, practically the entire membership will close offices at 4 p. m., it is announced, Saturday closing being at 1 p. m.

D. C. Bankers Move

The District of Columbia Bankers Association's headquarters and that of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, formerly located on the seventh floor of the Bond Building, are now on the fourth floor front of the American Security Building. The new handsomely furnished and commodious suite provides a lobby, two offices for the bankers association and one for the institute chapter, two classrooms for the institute, which can also serve as committee rooms for the bankers' association, and a cloak room.

Chemical Corporation reports net earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31 of $3,223,792 (including profits from sales of securities of $1,172,672), equal to $4.03 a share on class "A" common stock. This compared with $4,186,110 or $5.26 a share on common "A," in the preceding fiscal year. Plants of the company's main subsidiaries (general airline works, AGFA Ansco Corporation and Plaskon Co.) are in New Jersey, New York and Ohio.

Continental Oil Opens New Producing Area

Ponca City, Okla., June 1.—Continental Oil Co.'s C. E. Schultz No. 1 Well, Wabash County, Ill., flowed 45 barrels of crude in 5 minutes in a test made yesterday at a total depth of 2,492 feet in the Cypress sand, indicating the discovery of a new producing horizon in the Cowling area.

Previous production in the Bowling pool has been from the Biehl sand at 1,710 feet.

Retail Group Of Stocks Gain Most in May

Rail, Rail Equipment, Building and Steel Shares Next in Order

New York, June 1.—The market value of 100 representative common stocks advanced $941,845,000, or 6 per cent in May, according to the regular monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. At the end of the month the list had a valuation of $16,401,550,000, compared with $15,459,705,000 on April 29. In May, 1938, the Jelke index declined 6 per cent to $13,045,942,000.

All components of the index advanced in value. The greatest strength was recorded by the retail group, which advanced 11.3 per cent, followed by the rail section, which added 9.8 per cent, the rail equipment and building shares, which increased 7.7 per cent each, and the steel equities, which gained 7.6 per cent. Representative shares of the utility industry rose 7.3 per cent, miscellaneous industrials 7.1 per cent, and food shares 7 per cent. The smallest gain was registered by the oil group, which expanded 1.1 per cent.

Hosiery Sales Set New High Record Despite Slump

New York, June 1.—Despite a moderate recession in the level of industrial activity, shipments of all types of hosiery established new record-breaking levels during March with a total of 157,704,000 pairs, 8.8 per cent above the March, 1938 record, according to Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys today. The cumulative volume in the first quarter of 1939 amounted to 406,644,000 pairs, an increase of 10.5 per cent over shipments in the corresponding period of 1938. Shipments of women's full-fashioned and seamless silk hosiery during the same period also surpassed the best previous totals.

"The sharp rise in the cumulative shipments of all types of hosiery is attributable mainly to the txtraordinary increase in the volume of anklets which totaled 110,460,000 pairs in the initial 1939 quarter, a gain of 28 per cent over year-earlier shipments," continues the analysis. "The heavy shipments of hosiery reflected restocking by retailers following substantial Christmas business, and prebuying in the anticipation of advances in manufacturer's selling prices caused by the rise in raw silk quotations and increased wage expense. Furthermore, style trends favored less durable sheers which also contributed to the enlarged hosiery demand."

Boston Wool Market

Boston, June 1 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agricul.).—Trading in the Boston Wool Market today was inclined to be slower than last week. Moderate quantities of good original 12-month Texas wools were sold at 67@70, scoured basis, to buyers with urgent immediate needs. Other buyers with less urgent needs were reported to be bidding 65@66, scoured basis, for similar wools, but it was difficult to secure any sizable lots of good wool at that price.

Selling Checks Advance of 11 Days Decline Regarded as Normal Corrective Prices Become Firm Just Before Close

New York, June 1.—The stock market sold off today an average of a half point but inasmuch as the list has pointed higher for ten out of the last 11 sessions, the reaction today went down on the record as a normal corrective and nothing to cause the bullish forces any headaches. Trading was dull on the decline, which fact contributed to the impression that the selloff was nothing more than technical. Only 598,540 shares changed hands.

The market was lower at the opening today and the trend remained weak throughout the session with the exeception of during the final half hour of trading when there was a show of firmness. The day's weakness developed after the stock market, as gauged by the averages, had regained about 54 per cent of its last major decline. On March 10 the composite average of 100 representative stocks touched 108.38. Then the long decline carried this index down to 96.46 on April 11, a loss of 11.92 points.

Turning Point

From this lower level there developed the present recovery which encountered only one reaction of importance and the figure was raised to 101.88 on Wednesday. This was a gain of 6.42 points or 53.8 per cent of the amount lost in the last break.

Judged by past developments in charts, the snapbacks from sharp declines, as a rule, range between one-third and two-thirds. So the current market has nearly doubled the normal minimum expectations although it is still short of normal major expectations. To the trader a comeback of these proportions is a signal for caution, as they feel the cream has been taken off of the technical recovery. For the recovery to exceed technical bounds, there would have to be a major change based on better business prospects, in the opinion of the chart followers.

16½% of Trading in 3 Stocks

Today's market supplied a piece of news of the feature variety. Of the day's total volume of 598,540 shares, two stocks accounted for 98,800 shares, or 16½ per cent. These were United States Realty & Improvement and Loft, Inc. The latter is a frequent active feature but U. S. Realty has not broken into the active list for a number of months. Its volume today of 50,100 shares was generated by the announcement of the filing of reorganization plans under the bankruptcy act.

Railroad stocks moved along with the general trend today although on Wednesday, when the plan of the Eastern roads to reduce fares on round trips was announced, the carrier shares were firm. No railroad stock was particularly active today. There was considerable trading in Greyhound, which sold down ¾ point, apparently on the supposition that lower railroad fares would increase somewhat the competition faced by the bus lines.

Steel was a weak feature today, closing off 1⅝ while Bethlehem was down 1¼. Chrysler was the most active of the motors, giving up 1¾, while General Motors was down about a point. United States Rubber eased a half. Aviations moved with the general trend with Glenn Martin the most active, down a small fraction. Safeway was a strong feature among the stores.

Treasury Bonds at New Highs

Long term United States Treasury bonds soared into new high ground today on the announcement by Secretary Morgenthau that the Treasury would avoid new money borrowing this month. Gains ranged from smallest fractions to five-eighths of a point, and best available yields on the regular issues now barely exceed 2¼ per cent. The "rights," as issues about to be refunded are known, fell sharply on the Treasury announcement, for the indication that a small coupon five-year note will be offered for notes due in September was a virtual notification of an attack on the inflated values of such securities.

Other sections of the listed bond market were dull, with losses more numerous and more important than the occasional gains. Best-rated corporation bonds had a good tone, in keeping with the trend of Treasury bonds. But the speculative groups drifted lower, under the influence of the similar tendency in equities. Turnover in all listed bonds was only $5,610,000, which is about on a par with recent full-session performances.

Speculative railroad bonds were lower, on the various indications of financial troubles. The better-dated issues of the group led the downward movement, but others also were down. Alleghany Corporation bonds receded, with a trade in the inactive unstamped 5s of 1950 at 33, 15½ points down from the last transaction three months ago. Utility holding bonds were dull, while industrial convertibles sagged with equities. Local tractions, communications and other special groups likewise drifted lower.

In the foreign department hardly any business was done, and almost all issues dropped. One or two German bonds improved against the trend. The high-grade Scandinavian, Canadian and Australian obligations lost small fractions. Polish issues lost ground on the anti-aggression pact developments. Latin-American default bonds found few buyers.

Brokers' Loans Rise $3,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $568,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $3,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $472,000,000.

Baltimore Tobacco

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., June 1.—LEAF TOBACCO: Maryland—Receipts the past week were 1,122 hogsheads, while sales were exactly 20 hogsheads less, or 1,102 hogsheads. Prices remained unchanged, while the offerings were hardly as good in quality as the previous two weeks.

Ohio—Receipts, 24 hogsheads; no sales reported.

Crop prospects—Maryland, owing to a lack of good rains recently the planting season has hardly begun and will be two weeks later than last year. There is also considerable complaint about blue mold as well as wildfire in the plant beds.

Maryland 1938 crop—Firm leaf, nondescript and unsound, 3.00@4.00; dull and greenish, 4.00@10.00; sound to good, common, 5.00@18.00; medium to short, bright, 19.00@30.00; good to fine, red or bright, 30.00@40.00.

Excess Reserves Drop $80,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board said tonight lendable excess reserves of the banks decreased $80,000,000 to $4,220,000,000 in the week ended May 31.

The decrease, which interrupted a series of new reserved highs, was caused primarily by the usual month-end increase of money in circulation because of pay roll requirements.

Steel Employment 452,000 in April

New York, June 1 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute reported today the steel industry had a total of 452,000 employes in April compared with 455,000 in March and 445,000 in April, 1938. Pay rolls of the industry in April totaled $38,517,000, a decline of 9 per cent from the March pay rolls of $64,174,000, but well ahead of the $47,809,000 of April, 1938.

Wage-earning employes, said the institute, made an average of 32.9 cents per hour in April against 32.8 cents in March and 32.6 cents in April of last year. They worked an average of 32.1 hours per week compared with 34.7 in March and 35.6 in April, 1938.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, June 1.—The stock market leveled off at lower prices late today following a morning setback. Selling appeared prompted by Russian rejection of British-French mutual aid plans. British funds ended around ¼ point down, but foreign loans held steady. Transatlantics were easier. Domestic rails lost as much as a point and the majority of commodity shares declined. Small losses liberally dotted the industrial division.

Paris—Although a late rally shaved the day's worst losses, bourse quotations were generally lower at the finish today. Bank of France stood out with a gain of 233 francs, but rentes dipped 30 to 50 centimes. Royal Dutch slipped a little and Suez Canal ended unchanged.

Liverpool—Cotton futures closed 2 points higher to 2 lower today. Buying was influenced by the belief the coming international cotton conference might spike an American export subsidy. Reports of better weather in sections of the American wheat belt and a neglected cash market spurred selling of wheat futures. Closing prices were down ¼ to ⅝ of a penny.

Better Wheat Crop Reports Shade Prices

Cooler Weather and Prospect of Rains Also a Factor

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 1.—Cooler weather with showers promised for the United States grain belt and official reports indicating crop deterioration has been checked and conditions improved in some districts brought out more selling in the wheat market today.

Early price gains of almost a cent were wiped out and small fractional losses substituted. The selling started after wheat had advanced to a level at which July contracts equaled the previous seasonal high of 79¼ as a result of buying inspired by pessimistic private crop production estimates.

The more optimistic Government and private weather reports after midsession encouraged profit taking that caused a decline of as much as 1¾ cents from early highs and wheat closed ⅛ to ⅝ lower than yesterday: July, 78⅛@78⅛; September, 77⅛@77¾.

Other grains followed the action of wheat, corn closing unchanged to ⅜ off, July 51¼; September, 52¾@52⅞; oats unchanged to ⅜ down; rye ⅜ to ½ down; lard 7 to 19 lower.

Cotton Futures Lower Despite Textile Demand

New York, June 1 (AP).—Buyers showed limited enthusiasm in the cotton futures market today despite continuation of recent brisk buying of textiles. Closing prices ranged 7 to 14 points lower.

Commission men found nothing in the news to account for the small support given the market. Many brokers credited the decline to a "technical" setback after the substantial advances of May.

Pressure took the form of active hedge selling in all deliveries and foreign and domestic liquidation in July. Support appeared mainly on small recessions. Speculative demand was small.

The trading pace in Worth street textile markets was slowed a little by the ⅛-cent mark-up late Wednesday and tendency of mills to limit bookings to nearby deliveries. Nevertheless, selling agents estimated sales might reach the 15,000,000-yard mark.

Penn. Intercedes For New Haven Common Holders

By the Associated Press.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co., which owns 319,925 shares of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad's common stock, asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday that "reasonable participation" be allowed common-stock holders in reorganization of the New Haven.

The New Haven amended plan of reorganization, pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, provides that present common-stock holders receive nothing for their holdings.

The Mutual Savings Bank group committee asked that definite provision be made for inclusion of the Old Colony and the Boston & Providence in the reorganized New Haven company.

The committee said the New Haven "fails to offer any constructive suggestion" for the Old Colony, and makes no provision for including the Boston Providence in the reorganized company.

Chicago & Northwestern

The Chicago & Northwestern Railway objected yesterday to a reorganization plan proposed by Examiner J. V. Walsh, of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Walsh proposed a total capitalization of $449,996,270. Unsecured creditors would receive no-par-value common stock equal to 6.4 per cent of their claims and preferred and common stock holders would receive nothing.

Holiday Reduces Engineering Awards

New York, June 1 (AP).—Engineering construction awards, reported today by Engineering News-Record, dropped off to $39,887,000 during the week ended Tuesday which included the Memorial Day holiday. The total was 44 per cent under the previous week and 12 per cent less than the corresponding week a year ago.

All types of awards declined during the week with private construction registering the sharpest drop

Income Returns Set New Record; 88% Not Taxable

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury said yesterday that a record total of 6,350,148 individuals filed Federal income tax returns on their 1937 income. Of the total, 3,371,443 returns were taxable and 2,978,705 were not taxable. No figures have been made public yet on 1938 returns, but the 1937 returns represented an increase of 17.8 per cent over 1936.

The 1937 returns showed wages, dividends and other income of the reporting individuals totaled $21,238,574,163, of which $15,264,162,417 was taxable, producing $1,141,618,744 of taxes.

Although Federal income tax rates range from 4 per cent to 79 per cent, the average effective tax rate on the taxable returns was 7.5 per cent, compared with 8.5 per cent the previous year.

The tabulation showed that the average tax rate was brought down by an increase in 1937 of persons barely coming within tax liability whose income was exempt the previous year.

Standard Oil Quarter Dividends $63,010,882

New York, June 1.—Cash dividend payments by the companies of the Standard Oil group for the second quarter of 1939 are estimated at $63,010,882 compared with $80,623,933 in the corresponding quarter of 1938, according to figures compiled by the New York Stock Exchange firm of Carl H. Pforzheimer & Co. In addition to the cash payments this year, Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey on June 15 is distributing a stock dividend of 266,133 shares of capital stock, having a current market value of approximately $11,843,000 and which, if added to cash payments, would bring the total for the current quarter to $74,853,882.

The reduction in the total for the current quarter as compared with the similar period last year principally reflects the New Jersey company's declaration of stock dividend in lieu of the cash extra paid at this time last year and smaller extra payments by International Petroleum Co., Ltd., and Standard Oil Co. of California.

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, in addition to paying the regular semiannual cash dividend of 50 cents per share on June 15, will distribute a stock dividend of two shares for each 200 shares outstanding as of May 16.

Sieberling Votes New Capital Set-up

Akron, Ohio, June 1 (AP).—Stockholders of the Seiberling Rubber Co. at a special meeting today voted approval of a capital adjustment plan advocated by the management.

J. P. Seiberling, president, said approval was given by holders of 77 per cent of the preferred stock and 59 per cent of the common. The plan required the vote a 75 per cent of the preferred and 50 per cent of the common.

The action, Seiberling said, clears the way for registration of the new prior preference stock with the Securities and Exchange Commission and payment of dividends on the new class A preferred stock soon after the issue of prior preference stock has been sold.

Memorial Day Cuts Volume of Bank Clearings

But Total for Week of May 31 Is 6.5 Per Cent Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—The general observance of the Memorial Day holiday sharply reduced the volume of bank clearings this week as compared with a week ago, but the total remained above the 1938 turnover for the third consecutive week.

Bank transactions for the five-day week ended with May 31, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $4,309,287,000, compared with $4,048,005,000 for the similar five-day period last year, or an increase of 6.5 per cent.

Clearings for the latest period dropped $680,521,000 from the aggregate for the May 24 week. The loss between the two like weeks of 1938 amounted to $384,252,000.

New York Total

New York clearings rose 5.8 per cent from $2,460,727,000 last year to $2,603,557,000 for the current week. The amount recorded for the 21 outside cities was $1,705,710,000, against $1,587,278,000 a year ago, giving a gain of 7.5 per cent.

Arlington Bans Sprinkling for 4 Hours Daily

Curb Necessary To Conserve Water To Households

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

Officials of the water department of Arlington County yesterday issued an order prohibiting the use of water for sprinkling purposes between the hours of 5 p. m. to 9 p. m. so that household needs can be supplied.

M. P. Ayers, purchasing agent for the county, said that officials were forced to put a curb on sprinkling of lawns because of the unusually heavy demand for use of water in the homes.

He declared that while the normal consumption is about 3,500,000 gallons daily, the county has been pumping about 4,500,000 gallons of water each day during the recent hot spell. The county's water supply comes from the Dalecarlia Reservoir.

Traffic Study Planned

Arlington.—Because of complaints to the commercial and industrial committee of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce that the speed along the Richmond highway in the vicinity of Columbia pike is excessive and is causing hardships for the business firms in the section by hindering their trucks from safely entering the lines of heavy traffic, a special committee has been appointed to study the situation.

Louis C. Carl, chairman of the committee, announced that his colleagues will include R. T. Mitchell, E. P. Phillips, J. H. Gardiner. The committee will meet early next week and make its report at a meeting of the full committee June 19.

High School Graduation

Dr. Andrew M. Keese, chaplain at American University, Washington, will be the principal speaker at the graduating exercises to be held June 8, at the Washington-Lee High School.

The prospective list of graduates as announced yesterday by Claude M. Richmond, principal are:

Named Board Chairman

MRS. MARY W. BROWNING, of Riverdale, Md., was elected chairman of the Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners yesterday. She is believed to be the first woman in the State to hold that office

H. H. Howell Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Contact Officer for Rail Retirement Board Was 54

Funeral rites for Herbert H. Howell, 54, contact officer for the Railroad Retirement Board, who died Wednesday at his home, Dark Acre, Herndon, Va., will be held there at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

A native of Washington, Mr. Howell was educated at the old Business High School, a member of the class of 1903. Following his graduation he joined the Department of Agriculture, serving at Beltsville, Md., Chico, Calif., and Washington.

Associated with the War Trade Board during the World War, he was in charge of organization of the Bureau of War Trade Intelligence. Resigning from the Veterans' Administration where he later served as chief of the Administration Division, Mr. Howell became connected with the National Credit Offices, Inc., of New York, which later merged into Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Mr. Howell came here from New York to become chief of maintenance and property at the National Recovery Administration. He transferred to the Railroad Retirement Board after the NRA passed out of existence.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Irene P. Howell; four daughters, the Misses Braxton and Jean Marie Howell, Mrs. Duncan Pritchard and Mrs. William Moore, and a son, Humphrey D. Howell, all of Washington; two brothers, Charles Howell, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Alwyn Howell, of Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. Richard Marine, of Pittsburgh, and Miss Braxton Howell, of this city.

Woman Heads Prince Georges Liquor Board

Mrs. Mary Browning, First in State, Named By License Commission

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 821 Rheems Ave., Hyattsville, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3559.

Prince Georges County yesterday claimed the distinction of having the first woman liquor board chairman in Maryland.

She is Mrs. Mary W. Browning, of Riverdale, who was elected yesterday at the organization meeting of the board of license commissioners at Upper Marlboro.

Mrs. Browning has been a member of the board since it was established in 1933. She is also a member of the Democratic State Central Committee.

William H. Brooke (Republican), of Upper Marlboro, former board chairman, was renamed minority member. The third position on the board went to Jeremiah J. Crowley (Democrat), of Columbia Park, former county police chief.

The board appointed William H. McGrath, former Washington assistant corporation counsel, as attorney. J. Guy Bell, former sheriff, was named special investigator, succeeding E. Bernard Sweeney.

Greenbelt.—Rabbi Isador Breslau, president of the Washington District of the Zionist Organization of America, will speak here tonight at the first of a series of "open house" services sponsored by the Permanent Conference on Religious Life.

Rabbi Breslau's address will be on "A Realistic Approach to Interfaith Understanding." The services will be conducted by the Jewish Congregation in the auditorium of the elementary school.

"Open house" services will be held in the next month by the Catholic, Protestant and Mormon congregations. A symposium, sponsored jointly by all the faiths, will be held June 6 at the Greenbelt Theater. The topic of discussion will be "Religion and Social Justice."

Col. A. D. Rorex Seeks Rosenberg's Seat In House of Delegates From Alexandria

The Washington Post Bureau, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 1761. Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

Col. A. D. Rorex, U. S. Marine Corps, retired, yesterday announced he was a candidate for the House of Delegates, opposing Maurice D. Rosenberg, who has held the office for two terms and is seeking re-election. Col. Rorex has made his home in Alexandria for a number of years, leaving when on duty but retaining his voting residence in this city, and since his retirement making Alexandria his permanent home. He is chairman of the Alexandria Chapter of the American Red Cross.

William D. Medley, of Arlington County, so far is the only candidate to succeed State Senator John W. Rust, who is not a candidate.

Twelve city Democratic committeemen are to be chosen. Thus far the candidates are Charles E. Davis and Joseph Wyatt, First Ward; Charles E. Wortham and Stanley King, Second Ward; Frank Monroe and Daniel R. Stansbury, Third Ward; D. W. Stanton and R. Samuel Luckett, Fourth Ward; Everett Hellmuth and Ralph Hepburn, Fifth Ward, and Miss Camille DeLane and Arthur Campbell, Sixth Ward.

Zoning Case Dismissed

Judge William P. Woolls yesterday dismissed a suit of the City of Alexandria against Permanesque Homes, Inc., in which the corporation was charged with a violation of the city zoning ordinance.

The case was carried to the Corporation Court on appeal from a decision of Judge James Reece Duncan, of the Civil and Police Court, who had fined the corporation $3,000, the fine being suspended.

The case involved an alleged violation of the ordinance which restricts to certain areas two-family residences. The residence in question is in the Beverley Hills section, and it was claimed that a sister-in-law of the owner occupied a room and bath in the house and used a small closet as a kitchenette, thus converting the house into a two-family residence.

Melville W. Childs, 39, taxicab driver of Washington, reported to the Alexandria police about 1 o'clock yesterday morning that he had been held up, robbed of $1 and his taxicab, and left bound and gagged by three white men.

Childs said the men got into his cab in Washington and directed him to drive to Alexandria, and while driving in the 800 block of Wythe street one of the men drew a gun on him and ordered him from the cab. He was then made to walk to a vacant lot and tied with two belts and gagged with a handkerchief.

Funeral for Mrs. Bolling

The funeral of Mrs. Anne Montgomery Bolling, 90, widow of Richard Morris Bolling, will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Christ Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, the rector, and burial will be tomorrow at Irwin, Va.

Mrs. Bolling died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Randolph, Duke street extended.

Delay Asked in Picket Case

Charles G. Barrett, who swore out warrants for the arrest of five Washington women pickets and one man from Fairfax County on the night of May 24, last, for allegedly disturbing a religious meeting held in the George Mason Hotel, yesterday morning sent a letter to Police Judge Duncan, when the cases came up for trial, asking a postponement until June 30, next.

Barrett stated his reason for asking the delay was that in his judgment such action will serve the best interests of the community at large.

About 50 persons appeared yesterday morning, Attorney T. Brooke Howard appearing for the defendants; Acting Commonwealth'sAttorney Howard Worth Smith, jr., for the State, and City Attorney Armistead L. Boothe, for the city.

City Council's Furniture

The new furniture for the city council chamber has arrived in Alexandria and been placed in position, to be used first at the meeting of the council on Tuesday, June 13, next. The work of installing guard rails and benches to accommodate visitors has not been completed, but City Manager Budwesky stated yesterday the banches have been shipped from the factory and should be in place before the scheduled meeting.

The new council chamber is on the first floor of the City Hall Building, at the northwest corner of the building, and the furniture, bought from the Biggs Antique Furniture Co., consists of a mahogany table, 16 feet long and 54 inches wide; 10 mahogany chairs finished in red; 2 Haddenback chairs, 2 consoles, and a mahogany case with glass doors on the upper part for relics, and the lower part containing boxes for the council members to store papers.

The indirect lighting system of the room is reported to be the most modern south of New York. The room is finished in Gloucester gray, the floors of mastic tile, red and black.

One of the old desks of the former council chamber has been refinished for the use of the clerk to council.

Girl Scout's Bazaar

The Girl Scouts Troop of St. Agnes School will have a bazaar from 3 to 7 o'clock today, at the school, with Miss Jean Campbell Roberts as chairman. An exhibit will be a feature, also pony rides and refreshments sold.

A supper will close the show, with Miss Ann Gallagher as chairman in charge.

Banks Closed Tomorrow

The banks of Alexandria will be closed tomorrow, June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy.

The Daughters of the Confederacy will entertain that evening in Lee Hall in celebration of the day.

Church Session Set

Montgomery's Chief Assessor Begins Duties

William P. Richards Arrives in Rockville, Meets Collaborators

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

William P. Richards, former Washington official, who has been appointed chief assessor for Montgomery County's general reassessment, arrived in Rockville yesterday to begin his duties.

Richards, who will live in Rockville for the assessment duration, conferred with the Montgomery County Commissioners and was introduced to several county officials, including Wilton T. Allen, supervisor of county assessments, and S. M. Hamilton, who will be chief clerk of the assessment force.

Appointment of Richards was announced Tuesday by the commissioners, who said they had been impressed by his work in assessing similar areas in Washington. He had been recommended by the Brookings Institution.

Bonds Approved

The commissioners approved the bonds of Montgomery County's three new trial magistrates, who replace the old justice of the peace system for trials in the county. The three judges, Police Court Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, of Rockville, Police Court Judge Ralph A. Shure, of Takoma, and James C. Christopher, of Bethesda, were qualified yesterday and expect to begin trials today.

County Treasurer John B. Diamond notified the commissioners that he has appointed Charles H. Jamison a clerk in his office. Richard H. Lansdale, clerk to the board, was instructed to notify the Montgomery County Farm Bureau and County Agent O. W. Anderson that it would be necessary for them to vacate their offices in the courthouse to make room for the assessment forces.

Alfred D. Noyes, of Kensington, assumed his new duties as supervisor of county aid yesterday. He succeeds S. M. Hamilton, who was appointed chief clerk of the assessing forces.

Mrs. Fennell Sworn In

Rockville—Mrs. Madeline O. Fennell, whose appointment as county probation officer stirred a storm of protest from county social work groups and clubwomen, yesterday took office, succeeding Mrs. Sadie Wisner, veteran probation officer of the county.

The commissioners took no action on the requests of a large group of women of the county that they halt payment of the salary for the office until someone who has had supervised training is appointed, nor did they take any action on a letter from Judge John H. Gassaway, of the county juvenile court, defending the qualifications of Mrs. Fennell.

The commissioners discussed tentative figures of the county budget presented by Alexander K. Hancock, county accountant, most of the afternoon.

Gray Trial in Third Day

Rockville.—Trial of Edwin J. Gray, former county building inspector, on charges of embezzlement of county funds, continued for its third day yesterday with State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson, jr., still presenting checks and other data for identification in the record.

Mrs. Katherine Turner, who was Gray's secretary, testified she had made out building permits and collected payment for the permits on a number of occasions.

National Park Exercises

Frost Glen.—Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, delivered the address at the junior college graduation exercises of National Park College, yesterday morning in the Odeon, speaking on the subject "The Pot of Gold." Diplomas were presented to the 49 graduates by Roy Tasco Davis, president of the college. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, gave the invocation and the benediction.

It was announced that approximately $5,000 had been raised for equipment for the Charlotte Priest Memorial Library.

$35 of Supplies Stolen

Takoma Park.—Building supplies valued at $35 were stolen from a house under construction at Boyd and Elm avenues, it was reported last night to the Takoma Park police. A. L. Roberts, 22 Manor Circle, owns the property.

83 Licenses to Wed in May

Rockville.—Eighty-three marriage licenses were issued by the clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville in May. The monthly average up to May 1 was about 50. June is expected to make even a better record than May, according to Robert A. Hughes, who issues most of the permits.

Howard M. Butt Dies

Quince Orchard.—Howard M. Butt, 71, well-known farmer and life-long resident of the Quince Orchard neighborhood, died Wednesday night at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, where he had been a patient. He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Rebecca Butt; a son and three daughters by his first marriage, and a son and two daughters by the second marriage. He was a brother of Mosby Butt and Mrs. J. Edward Offutt, both of Rockville, and Mrs. Arthur Selby, of Travilah.

Fairfax Marks Confederate Memorial Day

H. W. Riddell Talks On Soldiers' Spirit, People's Sacrifices

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST P. O. BOX 246, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 3688-M.

Confederate Memorial Day was observed yesterday in Fairfax, although there are no living Confederate veterans in the county. Ceremonies were held in the Courthouse and at the Fairfax Cemetery, sponsored by the Fairfax Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Thrift Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans.

Henry W. Riddell, of Winston, N. C., spoke on the undying spirit of the Confederate soldiers and the sacrifices of the Southern people.

James U. Kincheloe, commander of Thrift Camp, read the muster roll of Marr Camp, Confederate Veterans. State Senator John W. Rust presided. Music was furnished by Fairfax elementary school pupils.

Following ceremonies in the courthouse services were held at the base of the Confederate Monument in the cemetery. A historical talk was given by Herbert F. Williams, of Vienna, whose father was with Mosby on his famous raid, at Fairfax. Mrs. Nora V. Allison, president of Fairfax Chapter, U. D. C., was in charge of arrangements.

Ball Planned in Fairfax

The Fairfax County Young Democratic Club will hold its second annual ball in honor of the graduating classes of the four high schools in Fairfax County, tonight, in the auditorium of Oakton School.

"FIRST IN FRIENDLINESS"

"I'M HEAD MAN AT OUR HOUSE."

One of our new customers had an interesting story to tell the other day. He said, "I'm head man at my house because I showed my wife an easy way to finance our trip to the World's Fair. The loan you just made me is going to treat us to the time of our lives. Best of all, we can pay it back in such easy monthly payments that we shall never miss the money. But we will always remember the fun!"

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Bridge experts whose powers of concentration are fully developed can't seem to give their best attention to the game during summer distractions or, in fact, any distractions.

This is why we have to tiptoe about the rooms in which they play, and why if a restless kibitzer talks out of turn he is scorched by the glances of the players. It goes as far back as whist—which was called whist because it meant sh—be silent.

While every summer shows a bad relapse in the general tone and skill, playing bridge at this time is much more fun for everybody. The experts lose their perpetual frowns. Every now and then, to the delight of their admiring coterie, they burst out with a smile or, perhaps on a particularly distracting occasion, a gale of laughter. The players loosen up, the cards get sticky, laws are set aside and, best of all, the bids and plays are allowed to fall where they may without being dug up for recriminations.

We don't know what distractions upset the players of today's hand but it is a typical summer deal. The cards were misbid, overbid, badly defended and a small slam contract which had two winning aces against it was allowed to make.

North's seemingly whimsical flight to six spades was predicated, he said later, on the fact that he thought his partner had said two—not one—no trump.

Here is how the absurd slam was made: East opened the ace of clubs and continued with the five. Declarer put on the eight from dummy and, when it held the trick, he sluffed the heart deuce. He played the queen of clubs and discarded the heart king. Next he led the heart queen. West ducked but declarer let it ride, throwing the deuce of diamonds. Three rounds of trumps were drawn, the dummy entered with the diamond ace and declarer's losing diamond was shed on the jack of clubs. The hand was now spread for six odd, declarer having given up only the club ace.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

A MEETING of representatives of most major Government agencies, having welfare or recreational associations, will be held at 8 p. m. Monday, in the Agriculture Department's secretary's conference room, 1039 South Building, to organize a council for the co-ordination of all Federal employe off-time activities.

During the last several years employe leaders have discussed the possibilities of such a council. Agriculture Athletic and Recreational Association has taken the initiative in calling the meeting. What the council, as tentatively conceived, hopes to do would be this:

1. Sponsor inter-departmental recreational competitions.
2. Organize activities which can not be supported by one agency operating alone
3. Possibly to operate a central purchasing agency for athletic equipment and other goods and services
4. To consider the possibilities of constructing and operating a recreational center or gymnasium for Federal employes.
5. They would use the council as a clearing house for mutual problems.

The idea for the council was voiced originally by Joseph D. Cooper, president, Agriculture Athletic and Recreational Association and editor of the Agriculture Exchange. Cooper, commenting on the proposition, said yesterday, "The idea is not new. It materialized now as a result of a suggestion for an inter-departmental swimming association. The council idea then followed naturally. At the first meeting we will have employe organization representatives exclusively, for we want to discuss all angles of our future without embarrassment due to the presence of interested parties.

"I see no reason why this council could not be developed into the biggest thing Washington has ever had. It's about time Federal employes took a hand themselves in solving their recreational problems, from a non-profit viewpoint. Their greatest immediate need is a recreational center they can call their own, run by them. After all, if the Government was not here, neither would anything else be.

"Although we here in Agriculture are taking the initiative, after the first meeting all additional moves must be made by the council. We do not wish to run the boat."

The "See How It Feels" dinner, to be given in the Press Club Auditorium Wednesday night at the National Right-to-Work Congress called by the Workers' Alliance, certainly will make the diners feel better than they would have this time last year—in the same place.

The idea is a relief family's meal served to delegates and speakers. The latter will include Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Milo Perkins, president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

It's the surplus commodities now being distributed in liberal quantities to relief clients that will make the difference. Because of them, reliefers now have butter, grapefruit, and fresh vegetables such as 1934 families in the same straits rarely saw—unless they peeked through the windows and saw others eating them.

The economic delegation from Puerto Rico, here to transact the island's complicated affairs, will be guests at a cocktail party to be tendered them by the Puerto Rican Trade Council from 5 to 7 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel. The function will be held in the Pan-American Room.

Carl Gardner, of New York, national commander of the Regular Veterans Association and editor of Our Army Magazine, will be tendered a dinner by Gen. Malin Craig Post, No. 20, R. V. A., at 6 p. m. Tuesday evening in the Claridge Hotel.

Bob Burns Says—

You've just got to hand it to our pioneerin' grandparents. They took a mule, a plow, an axe and a gun . . . and a lot of elbow grease and built up this country. But us folks nowadays can't even keep our own fingernails cleaned without payin' a beautiful young lady a dollar or two to do it for us. Can't you just picture Daniel Boone gettin' his nails manicured by a blonde!

My Uncle Hink, the teacher, use'ta have a lot of trouble with parents. Once a lady came to school and said, "Professor, you've treated Clarence too harshly by beating him with a hickory stick just because he playfully tossed an ink bottle at your head. Don't you think a mother's tears and prayers would have been far more effective?"

Uncle Hink said, "Well, ma'am, I didn't have any mother's tears handy, so I just used what was here."

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Chapter XXVI.

It was the noon edition of a newspaper that Hewitt tossed down on Peg's desk. He said, contemptuously, his dark eyes raking her face: "You hadn't planned on something exactly like this, of course, when you decided Anthony Covington was a far better catch than I! Oh, I get it all now. I was playing the decoy role. Making the competition stiff. Bringing Anthony Covington in line for you That was pretty cheap, Peg. Pretty obvious, too."

Peg looked at the headlines again, the black letters standing out horribly and separately in her mind. NATHANIEL COVINGTON DIES OF STROKE.

As the words beat against her brain for acceptance, for belief, pictures slid through her mind with a poignant persistence. A Christmas tree in the dining room and a tall, gaunt old gentleman grinning like a youngster because he had been remembered with a lot of inxpensive presents. A dull sorrow, like a half-lulled sense of pain, moved over Peg as she thought of the way he had looked at Joan and Anthony at the airport, loving them, not quite understanding them—but loving them. "Maybe you're a better judge of a bed than I . . ."

Hewitt Bitter

Peg's mouth began to tremble. She didn't hear Hewitt talking. "Very convenient of the old boy to kick the bucket now so you would not have to wait for this big moment, wasn't it? But you'd figured that out, hadn't you? You'd looked him up in "Who's Who" and had discovered that he was 79 and that he couldn't possibly hang on much longer!"

And then she did hear him. The words came to her like an echo. She stood up suddenly at her desk, her fingers gripping the edge until her knuckles showed white.

There was fire now beneath the tears that had crowded her eyes; there was a radiance of anger running over her like summer lightning. For a long moment she stared at him like that without speaking. Then she said, coldly: "That was a contemptible thing to say, Hewitt. I wonder why I ever thought, for even a second, that I loved you. I see now that everyone was right about you—I, alone, was wrong. I defended you all the time and there wasn't anything to defend, really."

She looked down at her desk, pushed aside the paper with the headlines and handed him the edition which Mr. Nelson had brought into her office. Hewitt looked at the photograph of Evangeline Martin and then his eyes lifted to Peg's.

She said, cruelly: "I suppose you have it marked down, somewhere on a card or in your memory, that I can't stand seeing people suffer and that the gentle touch with me is almost always a sure-fire thing!"

Brutal Passion

Hewitt realized that Peg understood him now perhaps as no one ever had before—or ever would again. It made him furious. The growing anger in his face was like a sky darkening before a clap of thunder, shade upon shade imperceptibly darkening into an intenseness of violence. He moved around behind the desk where Peg stood. She shrank back frightened, her fingers against the sudden pounding in the base of her throat. He said: "All right, I'm a heel. But that doesn't alter the fact that I love you. That no one's going to have you but me, ever. I'd kill any one who tried to take you away from me.. Remember that, see!"

His hands reached out and caught her trembling shoulders. In one swift moment she was in his arms and his mouth was moving over her face, her hair, straining for her lips. He was kissing her fiercely then, hungrily, with the primitive urgency of a man for a woman.

Peg struggled against him. Stood, finally, pressed against her desk for support, her face white with rage, her fingers shaking on her bruised mouth.

"I want you like that, Peg Patterson," he said bitterly. "I've always wanted you like that. And I mean to have you."

He picked up his cases then with a savage emphasis, went into his office and slammed the door so that the wall lights jingled and the girls in the stenographer's pool got up from their desks and made a little knot of startled faces at their door.

For a long crucifying moment Peg just stood where Hewitt had left her, a chill moving up her spine. She'd never seen Hewitt like this, a complete reversion to the boy who had been born in Foggy Bottom, who had known cheap women and who had treated her then as if she were one of them.

Duncan Has News

A second later the telephone rang. Peg picked up the receiver and said, "Hello," in a voice that was far from steady.

It was Duncan. He said: "Peg, have you seen the noon editions?" And when she said that she had and that she was horribly shocked and hurt by the tragic news, Duncan told her he was going to New York this afternoon with Joan. "She telephoned me just a little while ago," he said. "She and her aunt—Uncle Nathaniel's sister, you know—will need a man around for a while. Some one to help and to attend to all the gruesome details. Anthony's going, too, of course, but he's been transferred from the State Department to France. Immediately after the service on Tuesday he sails."

Peg said, her voice trembling: "France, Duncan? For—how long?"

"Six months. A year. For the rest of his life. I don't know. Neither does he." Then he said: "Call up Aunt Mehalie and tell her, will you? And look, while I'm gone, will you do something about the bungalow in Chevy Chase? You and Aunt Mehalie get at it together. Chintz curtains and things. New equipment for the kitchen. Send me the bills, and I'll forward a check. And listen, leave enough spare corners unfixed so the bride will be able to use her own personality a bit . . ."

"Duncan, you don't mean . . .?"

"I mean I have two months' furlough. I'm staying in New York with Joan for as long as she wants me. When I come back she's coming back with me. I was going to ask her to marry me tonight. Now I'll wait—for a little while. Until she's quite herself again."

Then Duncan hung up and with shaking fingers Peg put the little black instrument on its cradle. "Six months. A year. For the rest of his life . . ." Almost without realizing it her arms were on her desk, her head buried in them. She was sobbing softly.

Memories

It was the last week in April. Duncan and Joan were settled in the bungalow in Chevy Chase. Duncan was back on the job at the Munitions Building, and on this bright April day, with spring breathing its faint mist of greenness everywhere, Peg and Joan were having lunch at a little cafe on Connecticut avenue.

Peg leaned her elbows on the table beneath her chin. "You're awfully happy, aren't you, Joan?"

Joan said: "Yes, Peg, I am. I couldn't have got through those days in New York without Duncan. Sometimes I feel guilty even now, being so happy when Uncle Nathaniel is . . . But I know he wanted Anthony and me to be happy. He did love us, Peg. And for all that talk about wills, he left us everything, you know. Duncan almost didn't marry me at the last minute because of that. Then we compromised.

"I settled the big argument by putting the money in trust for our children, when and if. I mean to have lots of children, Peg. About six stalwart sons to send to West Point and a raft of daughters! That's what I've always wanted, Peg.

"But let's not talk about me. I've been away two months, and all kinds of things have happened. Anthony's in Paris. He writes fascinating letters of seeing down deep through the Paris of today . . . clear back to the seventeenth century. He always did love history and in his letters he has described Paris to me as it must have been then. He and Evangeline spend Sundays and long afternoons ferreting out historical spots and reliving what used to be. She's over there, you know, studying art . . ."

Peg said brightly: "Yes, I know. I read about her decision to study art. There was quite a lot in the papers." But even as bright as she had spoken, her voice didn't sound right. It sounded exactly like a girl who wanted suddenly to cry very hard. She hoped feverishly that Joan didn't notice.

Joan didn't notice. Joan said almost instantly: "But what about you, Peg? You don't look quite so starry eyed and happy as you did before I went away. And you're much, much too thin. Why did you leave Mr. Nelson's office? And what about Hewitt and how come no ring on that finger and all the gossip about you and Paul Stranyan?

"It's quite the everyday conversation that Count Stranyan is madly in love with one Peg Patterson, of Richmond and Washington. That you two are being seen every day on rather magnificent mounts, winding your way over the bridle paths in Rock Creek Park. And that you two cocktail and dance and dine and see shows together. He looked like rather a dangerous killeroo to me and he certainly had one of those pasts that makes a gal gasp—that is, if there's an atom of truth in what people say."

Heart-to-Heart

Peg said: "Must we talk about me, really?"

"Not unless you want to, Peg. I thought perhaps you did."

"I don't," said Peg. "But I'll answer your questions. Hewitt and I —quarreled. The wedding is definitely off. I am seeing a lot of Paul. He isn't in the least dangerous. I left Mr. Nelson's because I didn't want to be working in the same office with Hewitt—and in a way for him since he's a partner now—under the circumstances. I hired a typewriter at one of the companies here, sent it over to the civil service examinations, and, believe it or not, passed as a typist and got me a job of work at $1,000 per year! Thirty days sick leave. Thirty days annual. It's not too bad."

But even as she said these things in a casual unimpassioned voice, she hated the pride that kept her from telling the truth to Joan. She did want to talk about herself.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Ickes Suspends Robert's Fee In PWA Grant

Will Restore $36,000 If Sum Is Found To Be Legitimate

By the Associated Press.

Administrator Ickes approved yesterday a $564,000 payment of public works funds to build a State hospital for insane at Milledgeville, Ga., but suspended a $36,000 fee said to be included for the L. W. (Chip) Robert construction firm of Atlanta.

The advance requisition, Ickes said, was for $600,000, but PWA made available only $564,000 pending investigation of Robert's contract with the State.

Robert, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, recently was cleared by the Georgia State Legislature of any irregularity in connection with the fee asked by his engineers and architects for constructing the hospital.

Ickes said the Legislature cleared up legal technicalites so far as the State was concerned but did not answer all that PWA investigators wanted to know in view of the ironclad rule against using PWA funds for "lobbying."

He said that if the Robert's fee is found legitimate, the additional $36,000 will be paid. If not, he added, the sum would be permanently subtracted from the $1,800,000 Federal grant toward a total construction cost of $4,000,000.

Capt. Towers Heads Naval Air Bureau as Rear Admiral

3 Other Navy Posts Change; Army Has New Medical Chief

Capt. John H. Towers, pioneer Navy flier, yesterday became Chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, and took rank of rear admiral.

He succeeds Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook who goes to sea to command the aircraft of the Scouting Force. Towers, who had been assistant to Cook, was sworn in by John B. May, chief clerk of the bureau.

At the same time, the Army acquired a new surgeon general and three other Navy posts here changed hands. Col. James C. Magee, until recently executive officer at Walter Reed Hospital, took the oath as surgeon general, succeeding Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds. Gen. Reynolds, who has headed the Army Medical Department for the last four years, retires from the Army.

Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, chairman of the Navy general board, was detached from duty yesterday, preparatory to his sailing for the Orient later this month. He is to relieve Admiral Harry E. Yarnell as commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet in July. Rear Admiral Frederick J. Horne, next ranking member of the general board, became acting chairman. He will serve until Rear Admiral Walton R. Sexton, commander of destroyers, Battle Force, comes here in a few weeks.

Rear Admiral Joseph R. Defrees, director of shore establishments, was transferred from that duty to be commandant of the Eleventh Naval District and the operating base at San Diego. Rear Admiral A. T. Church will serve temporarily as his successor, naval officials said.

In the other change, Rear Admiral Herbert F. Leary came from the fleet flagship, where he was chief of staff to Admiral Claude C. Bloch, to be director of fleet training here. He relieved Capt. William C. Wickham.

Anders to Receive Service Medal

The Navy Department has announced that Lieut. Arthur F. Anders, who was second in command of the gunboat Panay, sunk in the Yangtze River 18 months ago by Japanese planes, had been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Anders previously was awarded the Navy Cross for taking charge of the gunboat's crew when her commander was wounded and successfully bringing most of them to safety. The Navy Board of Awards, however, reconsidered its action, officials said, and have given him the higher ranking D. M. S. instead.
